Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt 120
Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales:
Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
Meet and ne'er part till one drop down a corse.
O! that Glendower were come.

Ver. There is more news: 124
I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his power these fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound. 128

Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be:
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day. 132
Come, let us take a muster speedily:
Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.
Doug. Talk not of dying: I am out of fear
Of death or death's hand for this one half year. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A public Road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-Co'-fil' to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain? 4
Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.
Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end. 10

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the banns; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as indeed were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters and ostlers trade-fallen, the cankers of a calm world and a long peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old faced ancient: and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat: nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for, indeed I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tacked together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose inn-keeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge. 53

Enter the PRINCE and WESTMORELAND.

Prince. How now, blown Jack! how now, quill!

Fal. What, Hal! How now, mad wag! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all night. 63

Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

Prince. I think to steal cream indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine. 70

Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly. 76

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learned that of me. 79

Prince. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs bare. But sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long. 84

Fal. Well,

To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast

Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful. 4

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well: You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life, — And I dare well maintain it with my life, — 9

If well-respected honour bid me on, I hold as little counsel with weak fear

As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives: Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle 13

Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much, 16

Being men of such great leading as you are, That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up: 20

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half of himself. 24

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy in general, journey-bated and brought low:

The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in. 29
[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God 32

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings and good name,

Because you are not of our quality, 36
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,

So long as out of limit and true rule

You stand against anointed majesty. 40

But, to my charge. The king hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs, and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace

Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land 44

Audacious cruelty. If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,—

Which he confesseth to be manifold,—

He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed 48

You shall have your desires with interest,

And pardon absolute for yourself and these

Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and well we know the king 52

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.

My father and my uncle and myself

Did give him that same royalty he wears;

And when he was not six-and-twenty strong, 56

Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,

A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home,

My father gave him welcome to the shore;

And when he heard him swear and vow to God

He came but to be Duke of Lancaster, 61

To sue his livery and beg his peace,

With tears of innocency and terms of zeal,

My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, 64

Swore him assistance and perform'd it too.

Now when the lords and barons of the realm

Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,

The more and less came in with cap and knee;

Met him in boroughs, cities, villages, 69

Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,

Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,

Gave him their heirs as pages, follow'd him 72

Even at the heels in golden multitudes.

He presently, as greatness knows itself,

Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor, 76
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform

Some certain edicts and some strait decrees
That lie too heavy on the commonwealth, 80

Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,

This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for; 84

Proceeded further; cut me off the heads
Of all the favourites that the absent king

In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war. 88

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then to the point.

In short time after, he depos'd the king;

Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;

And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state;

To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman

March— 93

Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,

Indeed his king—to be engag'd in Wales,

There without ransom to lie forfeited; 96

Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;

Sought to entrap me by intelligence;

Rated my uncle from the council-board;

In rage dismiss'd my father from the court; 100

Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong;

And in conclusion drove us to seek out

This head of safety; and withal to pry

Into his title, the which we find 104

Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd 108

Some surety for a safe return again,

And in the morning early shall my uncle

Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love. 112

Hot. And may be so we shall.

Blunt. Pray God, you do!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—York. A Room in the ARCH-BISHOP'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK and SIR MICHAEL.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael; bear this sealed brief

With winged haste to the lord marshal;

This to my cousin Scroop, and all the rest

To whom they are directed. If you knew 4

How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir M. My good lord,
I guess their tenour.

Arch. Like enough you do.
To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day 8
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king with mighty and quick-raised power 12
Meets with Lord Harry: and, I fear, Sir Michael,
What with the sickness of Northumberland,—
Whose power was in the first proportion,—
And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence, 16

Who with them was a rated sinew too,
And comes not in, o'er-rul'd by prophecies,—
I fear the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king. 20

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear:
There is the Douglas and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord

Harry Percy, 24
And there's my Lord of Worcester, and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn

The special head of all the land together: 28
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and war-like Blunt;
And many moe corrivals and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms. 32

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear;
And, to prevent the worse, Sir Michael, speed:
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the king 36
Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,
For he hath heard of our confederacy,
And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against
him:

Therefore make haste. I must go write again 40
To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The KING's Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, JOHN OF LANCASTER, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and SIR JOHN FALSTAFF.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yon busky hill! the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

Prince. The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes, 4

And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretells a tempest and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then with the losers let it sympathize,

For nothing can seem foul to those that win. 8
[Trumpet sounds.]

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

How now, my Lord of Worcester! 'tis not well
That you and I should meet upon such terms
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff our easy robes of peace, 12
To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:

This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it? will you again unknit

This churlish knot of all-aborred war, 16
And move in that obedient orb again

Where you did give a fair and natural light,
And be no more an exhal'd meteor,

A prodigy of fear and a portent 20
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege.
For mine own part, I could be well content

To entertain the lag-end of my life 24
With quiet hours; for I do protest

I have not sought the day of this dislike.
K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prince. Peace, chewet, peace! 29

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your looks

Of favour from myself and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord, 32
We were the first and dearest of your friends.

For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time; and posted day and night

To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand, 36
When yet you were in place and in account

Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
It was myself, my brother, and his son,

That brought you home and boldly did outdare
The dangers of the time. You swore to us, 41
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,

That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster. 45
To this we swore our aid: but, in short space

It rain'd down fortune showering on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you, 48
What with our help, what with the absent king,

What with the injuries of a wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,

And the contrarious winds that held the king 52
So long in his unlucky Irish wars,

That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarm of fair advantages

You took occasion to be quickly woo'd 56
To gripe the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster;
And being fed by us you us'd us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, 60
Useth the sparrow: did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk
That even our love durst not come near your sight

For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing 64
We were enforc'd, for safety's sake, to fly
Out of your sight and raise this present head;
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself 68
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things indeed, you have articulated, 72

Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings and poor discontents, 76
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:

And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to impaint his cause; 80
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

Prince. In both our armies there is many a soul

Shall pay full dearly for this encounter, 84
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth join with all the world

In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head, 88
I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant or more valiant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds. 92

For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry;
And so I hear he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty— 96
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight. 100

K. Hen. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,

Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love 104
That are misled upon your cousin's part;
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he and they and you, yea, every man

Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his. 108
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do; but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone: 112
We will not now be troubled with reply;
We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.]

Prince. It will not be accepted, on my life.
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together 116
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;

For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just! 120

[*Exeunt KING HENRY, BLUNT, and JOHN
OF LANCASTER.*]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

Prince. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all
well. 126

Prince. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well,
'tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on?
how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound?
No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No.
What is honour? a word. What is that word, honour? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it?
he that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it?
No. Doth he hear it? No. It is insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it: honour is a mere scutcheon; and so ends my catechism. 143

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no! my nephew must not know,
Sir Richard,
The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be, 4
The king should keep his word in loving us;
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of
eyes; 8

For treason is but trusted like the fox,

Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad or merrily, 12
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot, 16
It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood;
And an adopted name of privilege,
A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
All his offences live upon my head 20
And on his father's: we did train him on;
And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know 24
In any case the offer of the king.
Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd: deliver up 28
My Lord of Westmoreland. Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.
Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so. 32
Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly.
[Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.
Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!
Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, 36
Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
With haughty arms this hateful name in us. 40

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth,
And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear
it;

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.
Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king, 45

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O! would the quarrel lay upon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath today 48

But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell me,
How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul; I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly, 52
Unless a brother should a brother dare

To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
He gave you all the duties of a man,
Trim'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a chronicle, 57
Making you ever better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise valu'd with you;
And, which became him like a prince indeed, 60
He made a blushing cital of himself,
And chid his truant youth with such a grace
As if he master'd there a double spirit
Of teaching and of learning instantly. 64
There did he pause. But let me tell the
world,

If he outlive the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstru'd in his wantonness. 68
Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured
On his follies: never did I hear
Of any prince so wild a libertine.
But he he as he will, yet once ere night 72
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
Arm, arm, with speed! And, fellows, soldiers,
friends,
Better consider what you have to do, 76
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.
Hot. I cannot read them now. 80
O gentlemen! the time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour. 84
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just. 88

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking. Only this,—
Let each man do his best: and here draw I 92
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on. 96
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy. 100

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Between the Camps.

Excursions and Parties fighting. Alarm to the Battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and SIR WALTER BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus

Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is Douglas; And I do haunt thee in the battle thus 4
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought

Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, King Harry, 8
This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;

And thou shalt find a king that will revenge 12
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and BLUNT is slain.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O, Douglas! hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,

I never had triumph'd upon a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won: here breathless lies the done. 16

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas! no; I know this face full well;

A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; 20
Sensibly furnish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!

A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear:

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats. 25

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;

I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away! 28
Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day.

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here; here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt: there's honour for you! here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here? 40

Enter the PRINCE.

Prince. What! stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are unreveng'd: prithee, lend me thy sword. 44

Fal. O Hal! I prithee, give me leave to breathe awhile. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure. 48

Prince. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee. I prithee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou gett'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt. 53

Prince. Give it me. What! is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot: there's that will sack a city. 56

[THE PRINCE draws out a bottle of sack.]

Prince. What! is't a time to jest and dally now? [Throws it at him, and exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, JOHN OF LANCASTER, and WEST-MORELAND.

K. Hen. I prithee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much.

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

Lanc. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too. 4

Prince. I beseech your majesty, make up, Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent. 8

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:

And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive

The Prince of Wales from such a field as this, 12
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Lanc. We breathe too long: come, cousin
Westmoreland,

Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come. 16

[Exeunt JOHN OF LANCASTER and WESTMORELAND.]

Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster;

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;

But now, I do respect thee as my soul. 20

K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point

With lustier maintenance than I did look for

Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O! this boy
Lends mettle to us all. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads: 25

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those

That wear those colours on them: what art thou,

That counterfeit'st the person of a king? 28

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart

So many of his shadows thou hast met

And not the very king. I have two boys

Seek Percy and thyself about the field: 32

But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,

I will assay thee; so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit;

And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:

But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,

And thus I win thee.

[They fight. KING HENRY being in danger, re-enter the PRINCE.]

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like

Never to hold it up again! the spirits 40

Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms:

It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight: DOUGLAS flies.]

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your Grace? 44

Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,

And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile.

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion, 48

And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,

In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prince. O God! they did me too much injury

That ever said I hearken'd for your death. 52

If it were so, I might have let alone

The insulting hand of Douglas over you;

Which would have been as speedy in your end

As all the poisonous potions in the world, 56

And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton: I'll to Sir

Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name. 60

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prince. Why, then, I see

A very valiant rebel of that name.

I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,

To share with me in glory any more: 64

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double reign,

Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the hour is come 68

To end the one of us; and would to God

Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

Prince. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee;

And all the budding honours on thy crest 72

I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hall to it, Hall! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you. 76

Re-enter DOUGLAS; he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. HOTSPUR is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth.

I better brook the loss of brittle life
Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword
my flesh: 80

But thought'st the slave of life, and life time's fool;

And time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O! I could prophesy,

But that the earthy and cold hand of death 84
Lies on my tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust,
And food for— [Dies.]

Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit, 89
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now, two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough: this earth, that bears thee
dead, 92

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of zeal:
But let my favours hide thy mangled face, 96
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave, 100
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!

[He spies FALSTAFF on the ground.

What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!

I could have better spar'd a better man. 104

O! I should have a heavy miss of these

If I were much in love with vanity.

Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,

Though many dearer, in this bloody fray. 108

Embowell'd will I see thee by and by:

Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.

Fal. [Rising.] Embowell'd! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Sblood! 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit: to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy though he be dead: how, if he should counterfeit too and rise? By my faith I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me: therefore, sirrah [stabbing him], with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me.

[He takes HOTSPUR on his back.

Re-enter the PRINCE and JOHN OF LANCASTER.

Prince. Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd 132

Thy maiden sword.

Lanc. But, soft! whom have we here?

Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prince. I did; I saw him dead,

Breathless and bleeding on the ground. 136

Art thou alive? or is it fantasy

That plays upon our eyesight? I prithee, speak;

We will not trust our eyes without our ears:

Thou art not what thou seem'st. 140

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy [throwing the body down]:
if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

Prince. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead. 147

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, Lord! how this world is given to lying. I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive and would deny it, 'zounds,
I would make him eat a piece of my sword. 157

Lanc. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

Prince. This is the strangest fellow, brother
John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, 161
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead. 165

[Exeunt the PRINCE and JOHN OF LANCASTER.

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.
[Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORE-LAND, and Others, with WORCESTER and VERNON prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?

And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary? 4

Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust?

Three knights upon our party slain to-day,

A noble earl and many a creature else

Had been alive this hour, 8

If like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne

Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me
to;

And I embrace this fortune patiently,	12	Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:	28
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.		His valour shown upon our crests to-day

SCENE.—England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop

The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?

I, from the orient to the drooping west,

Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold 4

The acts commenced on this ball of earth:

Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,

The which in every language I pronounce,

Stuffing the ears of men with false reports. 8

I speak of peace, while covert enmity

Under the smile of safety wounds the world:

And who but Rumour, who but only I,

Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence, 12

Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,

And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures, 16

And of so easy and so plain a stop

That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,

The still-discordant wavering multitude,

Can play upon it. But what need I thus 20

My well-known body to anatomize

Among my household? Why is Rumour here?

I run before King Harry's victory;

Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury 24

Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,

Quenching the flame of bold rebellion

Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I

To speak so true at first? my office is 28

To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell

Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,

And that the king before the Douglas' rage

Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death. 32

This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns

*Between the royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiring on, 37
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.*

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBER-LAND'S Castle.

Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!
[The Porter opens the gate.
Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

L. Bard. Tell thou the earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Port. His Lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard: 4

Please it your honour knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

L. Bard. Here comes the earl.
[Exit Porter.

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now
Should be the father of some stratagem. 8
The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose
And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury. 12

North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish.
The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts 16
Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince
John

And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field.
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir
John,

Is prisoner to your son: O! such a day, 20
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times
Since Caesar's fortunes.

North. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence; 25
A gentleman well bred and of good name,

That freely render'd me these news for true.
North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent 28

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;

And he is furnish'd with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me. 32

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard 36
A gentleman, almost forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. 40
He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
With that he gave his able horse the head,
And, bending forward struck his armed heels 44
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head, and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again: 48
Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day, 52
Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then such instances of loss?

L. Bard. Who, he? 56
He was some hilding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 60
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strond, whereon the imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?
Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother?

Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. 69
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, 72
And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd;

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it.
This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and
thus; 76

Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, 80
Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.'

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But, for my lord your son,—

North. Why, he is dead.—
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! 84
He that but fears the thing he would not know
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak,

Morton:
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, 88
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid;
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. 92

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.

I see a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; 96
The tongue offends not that reports his death:
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead. 104

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-
breath'd, 108
To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up.
In few, his death,—whose spirit lent a fire 112
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,—
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops;
For from his metal was his party steel'd; 116

Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead:
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear

That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, 124
Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester

Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword Had three times slain the appearance of the
king, 128

'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight,

Strumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord, 133
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. 136

In poison there is physis; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
And as the wretch, whose fever-weakn'd joints,
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, 141
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire

Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, 144

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quoif!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head 148
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron; and approach
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring

To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland! 152
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die!

And let this world no longer be a stage
To feed contention in a lingering act; 156

But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead! 160

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong,
my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion must perforce decay. 165
You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And summ'd the account of chance, before you said,

'Let us make head.' It was your presumise 168
That in the dole of blows your son might drop:
You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge,
More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
You were advis'd his flesh was capable 172
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit
Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd:

Yet did you say, 'Go forth;' and none of this,
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain 176
The stiff-borne action: what hath then befallen,
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
More than that being which was like to be?

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss
Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one;
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd; 184
And since we are o'erset, venture again.

Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, 188
The gentle Archbishop of York is up,
With well-appointed powers: he is a man
Who with a double surety binds his followers.
My lord your son had only but the corpse', 192
But shadows and the shows of men to fight;
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls;
And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd,
As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side: but, for their spirits and souls,

This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop 200
Turns insurrection to religion:
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
He's follow'd both with body and with mind,
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood 204
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones;

Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause;
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke; 208
And more and less do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,

This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel every man 212
The aptest way for safety and revenge:

Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed:

Never so few, and never yet more need.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for. 5

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whore-son mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now; but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal: God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dombledon about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? 33

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph; he would not take his bond and yours: he liked not the security. 37

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton!
may his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achito-phell! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security.
The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked a' should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends mesecurity. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him. Where's Bardolph? 54

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived. 60

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him. 64

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Ser. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery? 68

Ser. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster. 72

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf. 76

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Ser. Sir John! 82

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me, sir. 90

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldier-ship aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so. 94

Ser. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldier-ship aside, and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man. 98

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gett'st any leave of me, hang me: if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter: hence! avaunt!

Ser. Sir, my lord would speak with you. 104

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health. 115

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales. 120

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty. You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy. 124

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling. 129

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you. 137

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal. 141

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician. 144

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself. 150

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come. 156

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less. 160

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 164

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog. 168

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gads-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action. 173

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf. 176

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out. 180

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity. 185

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 188

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too. 203

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 212

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollaing, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. 226

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him. 230

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland. 234

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever. But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion. 251

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition.

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth? 255

Ch. Just. Not a penny; not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: commend me to my cousin Westmoreland. 258

[Exeunt CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than he can part young limbs and lechery; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy! 264

Page. Sir!

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and twopence. 267

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster;

this to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. [Exit PAGE.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything; I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—York. A Room in the ARCHBISHOP'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, LORD HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:

And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it? 4

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms;
But gladly would be better satisfied
How in our means we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough 8
Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file
To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope 12
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question, then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus:

Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland. 17

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far 20
Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids incertain should not be admitted. 24

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for, indeed

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply, 28
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts;
And so, with great imagination
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, 32
And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt
To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.

L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of war,—
Indeed the instant action,—a cause on foot, 37
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant as despair 40
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection; 44
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at last desist

To build at all? Much more, in this great work,—
Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down 49
And set another up,—should we survey
The plot of situation and the model,
Consent upon a sure foundation, 52

Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else, 56
We fortify in paper, and in figures, 56
Using the names of men instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost 60
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation; 65
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand? 68

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much,
Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French,

And one against Glendower; perforce, a third 72
Must take up us: so is the unfirm king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together 76

And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels: never fear that. 80

L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland;

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth:

But who is substituted 'gainst the French 84
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited. 88
A habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke 92

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be:
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up. 96
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? 100

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,

Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on 104

After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, 'O earth! yield us that king again,
And take thou this!' O, thoughts of men accurst!

Past and to come seem best; things present worst. 108

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY: FANG, and his Boy, with her; and SNARE following.

Quick. Master Fang, have you entered the exion?

Fang. It is entered.

Quick. Where's your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will a' stand to't? 5

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Quick. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here. 8

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.

Quick. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all. 12

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Quick. Alas the day! take heed of him: he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth if his weapon be out: he will foine like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. 20

Fang. If I can close with him I care not for his thrust.

Quick. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow. 24

Fang. An I but fist him once; an a' come but within my vice,— Quick. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure: good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. A' comes continually to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he's indited to dinner to the Lubber's Head in Lumbert-Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices. 47

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly. 51

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel. 54

Quick. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardy rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller. 61

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Quick. Good people, bring a rescue or two! Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe. 68

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Quick. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me! 72

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what! are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York.

Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st upon him? 76

Quick. O, my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum? 80

Quick. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare if I have any vantage of ground to get up. 88

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fiel what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own? 93

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Quick. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it if thou canst. 116

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them. 122

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Quick. Yea, in troth, my lord. 132

Ch. Just. Prithee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: if a man will make curtsy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs. 144

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.]

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower! what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

[Gives a letter.]

Fal. As I am a gentleman. 152

Quick. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Quick. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers. 158

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this. 169

Quick. Prithee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: i' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate,

so God save me, la! 172

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift:
you'll be a fool still.

Quick. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together? 177

Fal. Will I live? [To BARDOLPH.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Quick. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

[*Exeunt MISTRESS QUICKLY, BARDOLPH,
Officers, and Page.*]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord? 184

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord? 188

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred
horse,

Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster,
Against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord? 193

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently.

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord! 196

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here;
I thank you, good Sir John. 201

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go. 204

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair. 211

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the PRINCE and POINS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood. 4

Prince. Faith, it does me, though it dis-colours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer? 8

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say the children are not in the fault;
whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened. 31

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is? 36

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine. 41

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee,—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,—I could be sad, and sad indeed too. 48

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. 56

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite. 61

Prince. It would be every man's thought;

and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me a hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engrafted to Falstaff. 69

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and these two things I confess I cannot help. 76 the mass, here comes Bardolph.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: a' had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bard. God save your Grace! 80

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bard. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is it such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead? 86

Page. A' calls me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince. Hath not the boy profited? 92

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away! 96

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream. 100

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There it is, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. O! that this good blossom could be kept from cankers. Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee. 105

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master? 112

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not. 116

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes. 119

Poins. 'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are akin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There is some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.' 128

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:

Poins. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace! 134

Poins. I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity: sure he means brevity in breath, short-winded.—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so farewell. 142

Thine, by yea and no,—which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FALSTAFF, with my familiars; JOHN, with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe.

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it. 149

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister? 152

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! but I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank? 160

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in East-cheap.

Prince. What company?

Prince. Sup any women with him? 165

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be? 168

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper? 173

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph; no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence. [Gives money.]

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it. 180

Prince. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London. 185

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen? 188

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers. 191

Prince. From a god to a bull! a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs:
Put not you on the visage of the times,
And be like them to Percy troublesome. 4

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more:

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And, but my going, nothing can redeem it. 8

Lady P. O! yet for God's sake, go not to these wars.

The time was, father, that you broke your word

When you were more endear'd to it than now;
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear

Harry, 12

Threw many a northward look to see his father
Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

There were two honours lost, yours and your son's: 16

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!

For his, it stuck upon him as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven; and by his light

Did all the chivalry of England move 20

To do brave acts: he was indeed the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:
He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait;
And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, 24

Became the accents of the valiant;
For those that could speak low and tardily,
Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait, 28
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous
him! 32

O miracle of men! him did you leave,—
Second to none, unseconded by you,—
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field 36
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's
name

Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O! never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice 40
With others than with him: let them alone.
The marshal and the archbishop are strong:
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, 44
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there, 48
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O! fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of their puissance made a little taste. 52

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. Sodd your son; 56
He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. 61

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither
way: 64

Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. 68
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

First Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john. 3

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayst true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered knights.' It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that. 10

First Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight. 15

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poin's anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word. 20

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old it: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

[Exit.]

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Quick. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your puldise beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now? 32

Dol. Better than I was: hem!

Quick. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court—Empty the jordan.—[Exit First Drawer.]—And was a worthy king. How now, Mistress Doll! 38

Quick. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm they are sick. 41

Dol. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll. 44

Dol. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that. 50

Dol. Ay, marry; our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and owches:—' for to serve bravely is to come halting off you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,— 56

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Quick. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel. 65

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hoghead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 72

Re-enter First Drawer.

First Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedest rogue in England. 77

Quick. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you. 84

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Quick. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient. 88

Quick. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last,—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he;—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then;—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name;' now, a' said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers. 103

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer. 108

[Exit First Drawer.]

Quick. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you. 113

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Quick. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Pist. God save you, Sir John! 117

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol,
I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess. 120

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her. 124

Quick. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you. 129

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen matel! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy. 134

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal!
you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when,
I pray you, sir? God's light! with two points on your shoulder? much! 141

Pist. God let me not live. I will murder your ruff for this!

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Quick. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. 148

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slavel for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word 'occupy', which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient. 162

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I; I tell thee what, Corporal Bar-dolph; I could tear her. I'll be revenged of
her. 166

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down fates!
Have we not Hiren here? 172

Quick. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; it is very late, i' faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses, 176

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty miles a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them
with 180

King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys?

Quick. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. 184

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here? 188

Quick. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think
I would deny her? for God's sake! be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis.
Come, give's some sack. 193

Si fortuna me tormento, sperato me contento.
Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire:
Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras
nothing? 197

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif. What!
we have seen the seven stars. 200

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs!
I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. 'Thrust him down stairs!' know we not Galloway nags? 204

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shovegroat shilling: nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs. 208

Pist. What! shall we have incision? Shall we imbrue? [Snatching up his sword.]
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds
Untwine the Sisters Threel! Come, Atropos,
I say! 212

Quick. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw. 216

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing.]

Quick. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and PISTOL.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah! you whoreson little valiant villain, you! 225

Quick. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors? 228

Bard. Yes, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket. 240

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven? 252

Enter behind the PRINCE and POINS, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?
Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good pantler, a' would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit. 260
Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and he plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps upon joint-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois. 277

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore. 280

Prince. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? 284

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper. 290

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all. 296

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone. 301

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping an thou sayst so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end. 305

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

Prince. } [Coming forward.] Anon, anon,

Poins. } sir. 308

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's? And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 312

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears. 316

Quick. O! the Lord preserve thy good Grace; by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales? 320

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood [pointing to DOLL], thou art welcome.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you. 324

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Quick. Blessing on your good heart! and so she is, by my troth. 332

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience. 337

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse. 344

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse! 348

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none: no, faith, boys, none. 355

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked? 362

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too. 368

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not. 373

Quick. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Quick. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent? 381

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within.]

Quick. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news? 388

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster; And there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north: and as I came along, I met and overtook a dozen captains, 392 Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,

So idly to profane the precious time, 396 When tempest of commotion, like the south, Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night. [Exeunt the PRINCE, POINS, PETO, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door! 404

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; A dozen captains stay at door for you. 407

Fal. [To the Page]. Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. 414

Dol. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself. 417

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.]

Quick. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honest, and truer-hearted man, —well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tearsheet!

Quick. What's the matter? 424

Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Quick. O! run, Doll, run; run, good Doll.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY in his night-gown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,

And well consider of them. Make good speed.
[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness? 8

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, 12
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?

O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common 'larum bell? 17

Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seel up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge, 20
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them

With deaf'ning clamour in the slippery clouds,
That with the hurly death itself awakes? 25
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night, 28
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!

K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords? 33

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords.

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege. 37

K. Hen. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it. 40

War. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd,
Which to his former strength may be restor'd
With good advice and little medicine:

My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd. 44

K. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,—

Weary of solid firmness,—melt itself 48
Into the sea! and, other times, to see
The beaky girdle of the ocean

Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
And changes fill the cup of alteration 52

With divers liquors! O! if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,

Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
'Tis not ten years gone 57

Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after
Were they at wars: it is but eight years since 60

This Percy was the man nearest my soul,
Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs

And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard 64

Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,—
[To WARWICK.] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember,—

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, 68

Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
'Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which
My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;'

Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the state 73

That I and greatness were compelled to kiss:
'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it,

'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head, 76

Shall break into corruption:—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition

And the division of our amity.
War. There is a history in all men's lives, 80

Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd;
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,

With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds 84

And weak beginnings lie intresured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of time;

And by the necessary form of this
King Richard might create a perfect guess 88
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities; 93
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord!
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, 97
The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your Grace
To go to bed: upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth 100
Shall bring this prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, 104
And these unseason'd hours perforce must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. 108
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Court before JUSTICE SHALLOW'S House in Gloucestershire.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULLCalf and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence? 4

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? 8

Sil. Alas! a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not? 12

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. A' must, then, to the inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet. 16

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then,
cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing;
and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and Little John

Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were,
and had the best of them all at commandment.
Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk. 29

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when a' was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu!
the mad days that I have spent; and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead! 38

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there. 44

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now? 55

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think. 60

Enter BARDOLPH, and One with him.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me? 66

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you;
my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman,
by heaven, and a most gallant leader. 69

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backwards man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. 74

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. 'Better accommodated!'

it is good; yea indeed, is it: good phrases are surely and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase. 80

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase,' call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is, being, whereby, a' may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing. 89

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you look well and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John. 94

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think.

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin, Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. 100

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fiel this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men? 104

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you. 112

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? 116

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good. In faith, well said, Sir John; very well said. 122

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I. 128

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are? For the other, Sir John: let me see. Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier. 136

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir. 140

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance. 144

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book. 148

Shal. Thomas What?

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart? 152

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more. 158

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir? 164

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor he'd have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 168

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor; well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir. 176

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble. 181

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next? 184

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again. 189

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What! dost thou roar before thou art pricked? 192

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir. 197

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all? 201

Shal. Here is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir: and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner. 204

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that. 212

Shal. Ha! it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me. 216

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well? 221

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago. 227

Shal. Ha! cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen. Ha! Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow. 232

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was, 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come. 237

[Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.]

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because

I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much. 245

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 252

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind: an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind. 260

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. [To FALSTAFF.] Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. [Aside to BARDOLPH.] Go to; well. 265

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me. 268

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service: and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you. 274

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best. 277

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O! give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. 293

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well: go to: very good: exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopp'd, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee. 299

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus: and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in; 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say; 'bounce,' would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come: I shall never see such a fellow. 309

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you; I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats. 314

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you! prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with ye to the court. 319

Fal. 'Fore God I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you. 323

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exeunt SHALLOW and SILENCE.] On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt BARDOLPH, RECRUITS, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord! how subject we old men are to this vice of lying. This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: a' was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake: a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion and sung those tunes to the over-scuted huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn a' never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beefs. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies. 4

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs,

I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd

New-dated letters from Northumberland; 8

Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:

Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality;

The which he could not levy; whereupon 12

He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,

To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers

That your attempts may overlive the hazard

And fearful meeting of their opposite. 16

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,

In goodly form comes on the enemy; 20

And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number

Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.

Let us sway on and face them in the field. 24

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,

The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace, 29
What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your Grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs, 33
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
And countenanc'd by boys and beggary;
I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, 36
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection 40
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,
Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath
touch'd,
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd, 44

Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war; 49 Turning your books to greaves, your ink to
blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet and a point of war? 52

Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.

Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd;
And, with our surfeiting and wanton hours
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, 56
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician, 60
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the throngs of military men;
But rather show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds sick of happiness 64
And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly:
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs
we suffer, 68

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion; 72
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which long ere this we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience. 76
When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,

We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone,— 80
Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood,—and the examples
Of every minute's instance, present now,
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms; 84
Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?
Wherein have you been galled by the king? 89
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, 92
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty,
I make my quarrel in particular. 96

West. There is no need of any such redress;
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all
That feel the bruises of the days before, 100
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?

West. O! my good Lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities, 104
And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me
Either from the king or in the present time 108
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: were you not restor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
Your noble and right well-remember'd father's? 112

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost, 113
That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
The king that lov'd him as the state stood then,
Was force perforce compell'd to banish him:
And then that Harry Bolingbroke and he, 117
Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel, 121

And the loud trumpet blowing them together, Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, 124
O! when the king did throw his warder down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw;
Then threw he down himself and all their lives
That by indictment and by dint of sword 128

Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.
West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what.

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
 In England the most valiant gentleman: 132
 Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
 He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
 For all the country in a general voice 136
 Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love

Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the
 king.

But this is mere digression from my purpose. 140
 Here come I from our princely general
 To know your griefs; to tell you from his Grace
 That he will give you audience; and wherein
 It shall appear that your demands are just, 144
 You shall enjoy them; every thing set off
 That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
 And it proceeds from policy, not love. 148

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so.
 This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
 For, lo! within a ken our army lies
 Upon mine honour, all too confident 152
 To give admittance to a thought of fear.
 Our battle is more full of names than yours,
 Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
 Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
 Then reason will our hearts should be as good:
 Say you not then our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence: 160

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,
 To hear and absolutely to determine 164
 Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name.
 I muse you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule, 168

For this contains our general grievances:
 Each several article herein redress'd;
 All members of our cause, both here and hence,
 That are insinew'd to this action, 172
 Acquitted by a true substantial form
 And present execution of our wills
 To us and to our purposes consign'd;
 We come within our awful banks again 176

And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;
 And either end in peace, which God so frame!
 Or to the place of difference call the swords 181
 Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
 [Exit WESTMORELAND.]

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand. 184

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute
 As our conditions shall consist upon,
 Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such
 That every slight and false-derived cause,
 Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
 Shall to the king taste of this action; 192
 That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
 We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
 That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
 And good from bad find no partition. 196

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances:
 For he hath found to end one doubt by death
 Revives two greater in the heirs of life; 200
 And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
 And keep no tell-tale to his memory
 That may repeat and history his loss
 To new remembrance; for full well he knows
 He cannot so precisely weed this land 205
 As his misdoubts present occasion:
 His foes are so enrooted with his friends
 That, plucking to unfix an enemy, 208
 He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.

So that this land, like an offensive wife,
 That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
 As he is striking, holds his infant up 212
 And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
 That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack 216
 The very instruments of chastisement;
 So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
 May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:
 And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
 If we do now make our atonement well, 221
 Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
 Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
 Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland. 224

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,
To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his Grace: my lord, we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCH-BISHOP, HASTINGS, and Others: from the other side, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WEST-MORELAND, Officers, and Attendants.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray:

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you, 4
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man, 8
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death.
That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, 12
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischief might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord bishop,

It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken 16
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. Of who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, 24
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father; 28
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here upswarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland, 32
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,— 36
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from
the court,—

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep

With grant of our most just and right desires, 40
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down, 44
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up 48
Whiles England shall have generation.

Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly 52

How far forth you do like their articles.

Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them
well;

And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook, 56

And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please
you, 60

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours: and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love and amity. 65

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my word:

And thereupon I drink unto your Grace. 68

Hast. [To an Officer.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army

This news of peace: let them have pay, and
part:

I know it will well please them: hie thee, captain.
[Exit Officer.]

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmore-
land. 72

West. I pledge your Grace: and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter. 76

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;

For I am, on the sudden, something ill. 80

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus, Some good thing comes to morrow. 84

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowb. So much the worse if your own rule be true. [Shouts within.]

Lanc. The word of peace is render'd: hark, how they shout! 87

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.

Lanc. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too. 92

[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings, 96
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

Lanc. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, 100

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Lanc. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses 104

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,

Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place.

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason: 108
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so? 112

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

Lanc. I pawn'd thee none.

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,

I will perform with a most Christian care. 116

But for you, rebels, look to taste the due.

Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours.

Most shallowly did you these arms commence,

Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.

Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray:

God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;

Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath. 124

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale. 4

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff? 11

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy. 17

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general. 26

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and Others.

Lanc. The heat is past, follow no further now.

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? 29

When everything is ended, then you come: These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,

One time or other break some gallows' back. 32

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lanc. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving. 48

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Coleville kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt twopences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount. 61

Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine. 64

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord. 68

Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me 72
You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee. 76

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lanc. Have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lanc. Send Coleville with his confederates To York, to present execution. 80 Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure. [Exit BLUNT and Others with

COLEVILLE, guarded.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:

I hear, the king my father is sore sick:

Our news shall go before us to his majesty, 84
Which, cousin [addressing WESTMORELAND], you shall bear, to comfort him;
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go, Through Gloucestershire, and when you come to court 88

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,

Shall better speak of you than you deserve. 91

[Exeunt all but FALSTAFF.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble fiery and delectable shapes; which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack. 136

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords but what are sanctified. 4
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength; 8
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother? 13

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother Thomas of Clarence with him? 16

Glo. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;

Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect 24
Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace 28
By seeming cold or careless of his will;

For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:
He hath a tear for pity and a hand

Open as day for melting charity; 32
Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;

As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day.
His temper therefore must be well observ'd: 36
Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;
But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40
Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood, 44
Mingled with venom of suggestion—
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As acornitum or rash gunpowder. 48

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that? 52

Cla. With Poins and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;

And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore my grief 56
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death:
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon 60
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.

For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O! with what wings shall his affections fly 65
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay.

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:

The prince but studies his companions 68
Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd; which once attain'd,

Your highness knows, comes to no further use 72
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live, 76

By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here? Westmoreland! 80
West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's
hand:
Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all
Are brought to the correction of your law. 85
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne 88
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

K. Hen. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings 92
The lifting up of day.

Enter HARCOURT.

Look! here's more news.
Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of! 96
The Earl Northumberland, and the Lord Bar-dolph,
With a great power of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and true order of the fight 100
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will Fortune never come with both hands full
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food; 105
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
That have abundance and enjoy it not. 108
I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.

O me! come near me, now I am much ill.
Glo. Comfort, your majesty!

Glo. O my royal father! 112
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself:
look up!
War. Be patient, princes: you do know these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary:
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well. 116

Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs:

The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

So thin, that life looks through and will break
out. 120

Glo. The people fear me; for they do observe
Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over. 124

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;

And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before That our great-grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died. 128

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Glo. This apoplexy will certain be his end.
K. Hen. I pray you take me up, and bear me
hence

Into some other chamber: softly, pray. 132

SCENE V.—Another Chamber.

KING HENRY lying on a bed: CLARENCE, GLOU-CESTER, WARWICK, and Others in attendance.

K. Hen. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;

Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room. 4
K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow
here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter the PRINCE.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness. 8

Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

Glo. He alter'd much upon the hearing it. 12

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he will recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep. 16

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king. [Exeunt all but the PRINCE.]
 Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow, 20
 Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
 O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
 That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
 To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now!
 Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet 25
 As he whose brow with homely biggin bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
 When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
 Like a rich armour worn in heat of day, 29
 That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
 There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
 Did he suspire, that light and weightless down Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father! 33
 This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
 That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
 So many English kings. Thy due from me 36
 Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
 Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
 Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously:
 My due from thee is this imperial crown, 40
 Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
 Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits,
 [Putting it on his head.]
 Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole strength
 Into one giant arm, it shall not force 44
 This lineal honour from me. This from thee
 Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.]
 K. Hen. [Waking.] Warwick! Gloucester!
 Clarence!
Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE,
and the rest.
 Cla. Doth the king call?
 War. What would your majesty? How fares
 your Grace? 48
 K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone,
 my lords?
 Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my
 liege,
 Who undertook to sit and watch by you.
 K. Hen. The Prince of Wales! Where is he?
 let me see him: 52
 He is not here.
 War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
 Glo. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
 K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow? 56
 War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it
 here.
 K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence: go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
 My sleep my death? 60
 Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him
 hither. [Exit WARWICK.]
 This part of his conjoins with my disease,
 And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!
 How quickly nature falls into revolt 64
 When gold becomes her object!
 For this the foolish over-careful fathers
 Have broke their sleeps with thoughts,
 Their brains with care, their bones with industry; 68
 For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
 The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
 For this they have been thoughtful to invest
 Their sons with arts and martial exercises: 72
 When, like the bee, culling from every flower
 The virtuous sweets,
 Our thighs packed with wax, our mouths with honey,
 We bring it to the hive, and like the bees, 76
 Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
 Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
 Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me? 80
 War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
 Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
 With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow
 That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood, 84
 Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
 With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
 K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry.
 Depart the chamber, leave us here alone. 89
 [Exeunt WARWICK, and the rest.]
 Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again.
 K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:
 I stay too long by thee, I weary thee. 92
 Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair
 That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine
 honours
 Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
 Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm
 thee. 96
 Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
 Is held from falling with so weak a wind
 That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.

Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours 100
Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it. 104
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself, 109
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head: 113
Only compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form. 117
Harry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
hence!
And to the English court assemble now, 120
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit 124
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more;
England shall double gild his treble guilt.
England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows. 132
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants. 136 Prince. O! pardon me, my liege; but for my tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And he that wears the crown immortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, 144
Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
Which my most true and inward duteous spirit
Teacheth,—this prostrate and exterior bending.
God witness with me, when I here came in, 148
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die

And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed. 153
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown as having sense, 156
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending
Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold:
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, 160
Preserving life in medicine potable;
But thou most fine, most honour'd, most re-nown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal
liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head, 164
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy, 168
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it, 172
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
K. Hen. O my son! 176
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's
love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry: sit thou by my bed; 180
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well 184
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes 188
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances; 192
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene 196
Acting that argument; and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garment wear'st successively. 200
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;

And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd, 205
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
I cut them off; and had a purpose now 208

To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds 212
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
out,

May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
That strength of speech is utterly denied me. 216
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live.

Prince. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me; 220
Then plain and right must my possession be:
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster. 224

Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight
My worldly business makes a period. 229
Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

Re-enter WARWICK and Others.

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoond? 232
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

K. Hen. Laud be to God! even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years
I should not die but in Jerusalem, 236
Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Gloucestershire. A Hall in SHALLOW'S House.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow. 4

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy! 8

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused. 13

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served; and again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat? 16

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons. 20

Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had: and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair? 26

Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir? 32

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite. 36

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy business, Davy. 40

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge. 46

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced. 57

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit DAVY.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph. 61

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph:—[To the Page.] and welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John. 65

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit SHALLOW.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which is four terms, or two actions,—and a' shall laugh without intervallums. O! it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up! 94

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow: I come, Master Shallow. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Westminster. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature; 4
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him:

The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries. 8

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself,

To welcome the condition of the time;
Which cannot look more hideously upon me 12
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WESTMORELAND and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:

O! that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen. 16
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be overturn'd.

Lanc. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow. 20

Glo. } Good morrow, cousin.

Cl. }
Lanc. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk. 24

Lanc. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glo. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed;

And I dare swear you borrow not that face 28
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

Lanc. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise. 32

Cl. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair,

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; 36
And never shall you see that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocence fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead, 40

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

K. Hen. V. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty, 44

Sits not so easy on me as you think.

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds, 48
 But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
 For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you:
 Sorrow so royally in you appears
 That I will deeply put the fashion on 52
 And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
 But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
 Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
 For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, 56
 I'll be your father and your brother too;
 Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:
 Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;
 But Harry lives that shall convert those tears 60
 By number into hours of happiness.

Lanc., &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

K. Hen. V. You all look strangely on me: [To the CHIEF JUSTICE.] and you most;
 You are, I think, assur'd I love you not. 64
Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,
 Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

K. Hen. V. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget 68
 So great indignities you laid upon me?
 What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
 The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
 May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten? 72

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lay then in me:
 And, in the administration of his law,
 Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth, 76
 Your highness pleased to forget my place,
 The majesty and power of law and justice,
 The image of the king whom I presented,
 And struck me in my very seat of judgment; 80
 Whereon, as an offender to your father,
 I gave bold way to my authority,
 And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
 Be you contented, wearing now the garland, 84
 To have a son set your decrees at nought,
 To pluck down justice from your awful bench,
 To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
 That guards the peace and safety of your person:
 Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image
 And mock your workings in a second body. 90 Question your royal thoughts, make the case
 yours;

Be now the father and propose a son, 92
 Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
 See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
 Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;
 And then imagine me taking your part, 96
 And in your power soft silencing your son:
 After this cold consideration, sentence me;
 And, as you are a king, speak in your state
 What I have done that misbecame my place, 100

My person, or my liege's sov' reignity.

K. Hen. V. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
 And I do wish your honours may increase 104
 Till you do live to see a son of mine
 Offend you and obey you, as I did.
 So shall I live to speak my father's words:
 'Happy am I, that have a man so bold 108
 That dares do justice on my proper son;
 And not less happy, having such a son,
 That would deliver up his greatness so
 Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:
 For which, I do commit into your hand 112
 The unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;
 With this remembrance, that you use the same
 With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit 116
 As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand:
 You shall be as a father to my youth;
 My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
 And I will stoop and humble my intents 120
 To your well-practis'd wise directions.

And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;
 My father is gone wild into his grave,
 For in his tomb lie my affections; 124
 And with his spirit sadly I survive,
 To mock the expectation of the world,
 To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
 Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down 128
 After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
 Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
 Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
 Where it shall mingle with the state of floods 132
 And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
 Now call we our high court of parliament;
 And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
 That the great body of our state may go 136
 In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
 That war or peace, or both at once, may be
 As things acquainted and familiar to us;
 In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
 Our coronation done, we will accite, 141
 As I before remember'd, all our state:
 And, God consigning to my good intents,
 No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
 God shorten Harry's happy life one day. 145

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Gloucestershire. The Garden of SHALLOW'S House.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an labour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of caraways, and so forth; come, cousin Silence; and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich. 6

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread, Davy; spread, Davy: well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband. 11

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down. Come, cousin. 11

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth a', we shall 16

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise God for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there, 20
So merrily.
And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon. 24

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon: most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good master page, sit. Profacie! What you want in meat we'll have in drink: but you must bear: the heart's all. [Exit.]

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry. 32

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide. 36
Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now. 41

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you.

[Setting them before BARDOLPH.]

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight. A cup of wine, sir? 45

Sil. A cup of wine that's brisk and fine
And drink unto the leman mine;
And a merry heart lives long-a. 48

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence. 53

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wantest anything and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. [To the Page.] Welcome, my little tiny thief; and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph and to all the cavaleiroles about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die. 61

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together: hal! will you not, Master Bardolph? 64

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's liggers, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: a' will not out; he is true bred. 68

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking within.] Look who's at door there. Hol who knocks? [Exit DAVY.]

Fal. [To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right. 74

Sil. Do me right,
And dub me knight:
Samingo. 77

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat. 81

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in. 84

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. 88

Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think a' be, but Goodman Puff of Barson. 92

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, 96

And tidings do I bring and lucky joys
And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutra for the world and worldlings base! 100

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John. 104

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding. 109

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways: either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority. 114

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die. 116

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A foutra for thine officel
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;
Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like 121
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just. 124

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.
Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities. 128

Bard. O joyful day!

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news. 131

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph! [Exit BARDOLPH.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends, and woe unto my lord chief justice! 143

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! 'Where is the life that late I led?' say they: Why, here it is: welcome these pleasant days! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter BEADLES, dragging in MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Quick. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God I might die that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

First Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her. 7

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on;

I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain. 12

Quick. O the Lord! that Sir John were come; he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat among you.

Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swinged, I'll forswear half-kirtles. 24

First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Quick. O, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come: bring me to a justice. 29

Quick. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death! goodman bones!

Quick. Thou atomy, thou! 32

Dol. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!

First Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

Sec. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice. 3

First Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch. [Exeunt.]

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace. I will leap upon him, as a' comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me. 9

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. O! if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him. 16

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion. 20

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me. 24

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est:

'Tis all in every part. 32

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, 36
Is in base durance and contagious prison;
Hal'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand:

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell
Alecto's snake, 40

For Doll is in: Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within and trumpets sound.]

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH and his Train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hall! 45

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy! 48

K. Hen. V. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

K. Hen. V. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers; 52

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. 56
Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandising; know the grave doth gape
For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest: 60

Presume not that I am the thing I was;

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,
That I have turn'd away my former self;

So will I those that kept me company. 64

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots:

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, 68

As I have done the rest of my misleaders,

Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you,

That lack of means enforce you not to evil: 72

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will, according to your strength and qualities,

Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my
lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word. 76

Set on. [Exeunt KING HENRY V. and his Train.]

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have with me. 80

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. 85

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. 89

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir
John. 93

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner.
Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph: I shall be sent for soon at night. 96

Re-enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE; Officers with them.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord!

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon. 100

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero contenta.

[*Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL,
BARDOLPH, Page, and Officers.*]

Lanc. I like this fair proceeding of the king's.

He hath intent his wonted followers 104

Shall all be very well provided for;

But all are banish'd till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are. 108

Lanc. The king hath call'd his parliament,
my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

Lanc. I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire,
We bear our civil swords and native fire 112
As far as France. I heard a bird so sing,
Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.
Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

Spoken by a Dancer.

First, my fear; then, my curtsy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure, my curtsy, my duty, and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this; which, if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here,

I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely. 18

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly. 27

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen. 38

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE FIFTH

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

KING HENRY THE FIFTH.
DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, } Brothers to the King.
DUKE OF BEDFORD, }
DUKE OF EXETER, Uncle to the King.
DUKE OF YORK, Cousin to the King.

SCENE.—England; afterwards France.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. O! for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention;
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene. 4
Then should the war-like Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword,
and fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirits that hath dar'd 9
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
So great an object: can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram 12
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure may
Attest in little place a million;
And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder:

Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
Into a thousand parts divide one man, 24
And make imaginary puissance;
Think when we talk of horses that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth;
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our 28
kings,
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times,
Turning the accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass: for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history; 32
Who prologue-like your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play. [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the KING'S Palace.

16 Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Can't. My lord, I'll tell you; that self bill is urg'd,
20 Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,

But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,

We lose the better half of our possession;
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the church
Would they strip from us; being valu'd thus:
As much as would maintain, to the king's
honour,

Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came,
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady currance, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat and all at once
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate:

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say it hath been all in all his study:
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences;
So that the art and practic part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoric:

Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean it,

Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;

And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:
And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd;

And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,

How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent,

Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation,

And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save that there was not time enough to hear,—

As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,—
The severals and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And generally to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant

Crav'd audience; and the hour I think is come
To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in to know his embassy;
Which I could with a ready guess declare
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Presence Chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would be resolv'd,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold

Why the law Salique that they have in France

Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim.

And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,

That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul

With opening titles miscreate, whose right

Suits not in native colours with the truth;

For God doth know how many now in health

Shall drop their blood in approbation

Of what your reverence shall incite us to.

Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,

How you awake the sleeping sword of war:

We charge you in the name of God, take heed;

For never two such kingdoms did contend

Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops

Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,

'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords

That make such waste in brief mortality.

Under this conjuration speak, my lord,

And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,

That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services

To this imperial throne. There is no bar

To make against your highness' claim to France

But this, which they produce from Pharamond,

In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,

'No woman shall succeed in Salique land.'

Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze

To be the realm of France, and Pharamond

The founder of this law and female bar.

Yet their own authors faithfully affirm

That the land Salique is in Germany,

Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;

Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain French;

Who, holding in disdain the German women

For some dishonest manners of their life,

Establish'd then this law; to wit, no female

Should be inheritrix in Salique land:

Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,

Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear the Salique law

Was not devised for the realm of France;

Nor did the French possess the Salique land

Until four hundred one-and-twenty years

After defunction of King Pharamond,

Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;

Who died within the year of our redemption

Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great

Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French

Beyond the river Sala, in the year

Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,

King Pepin, which deposed Childeric,

Did, as heir general, being descended

Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clothair,

Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown

Of Charles the Duke of Loraine, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,

To find his title with some shows of truth,—

Though in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,—

Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Lingare,

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son

To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son

Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the

Tenth,

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,

Could not keep quiet in his conscience,

Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied

That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,

Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare,

Daughter to Charles the aforesaid Duke of Loraine:

By the which marriage the line of Charles the

Great

Was re-united to the crown of France.

So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,

King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,

King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear

To hold in right and title of the female:

So do the kings of France unto this day;

Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net 93
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim? 96

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers is it writ:
'When the son dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter.' Gracious lord, 100
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's
tomb,

From whom you claim; invoke his war-like spirit, 104

And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill 108
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.

O noble English! that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by, 113
All out of work, and cold for action.

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant
dead,

And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne,
The blood and courage that renowned them
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth, 120
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood. 124

West. They know your Grace hath cause and means and might;

So hath your highness; never King of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England 128

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O! let their bodies follow, my dear
liege,

With blood and sword and fire to win your right;

In aid whereof we of the spirituality 132
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade
the French, 136

But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, 140

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot, 144
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach, 149
With ample and brim fullness of his force,
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence, 153
Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;

For hear her but exampl'd by herself: 156
When all her chivalry hath been in France
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken and impounded as a stray 160
The King of Scots; whom she did send to
France,

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,
And make your chronicle as rich with praise
As is the owse and bottom of the sea 164
With sunken wrack and sumless treasuries.

West. But there's a saying very old and true;
If that you will France win,

Then with Scotland first begin: 168

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, 172
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.

Exe. It follows then the cat must stay at home:

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities 176
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.

While that the armed hand doth fight abroad
The advised head defends itself at home:
For government, though high and low and lower, 180

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions, 184
Setting endeavour in continual motion;

To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach 188
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king and officers of sorts;
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings, 193
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring
home

To the tent-royal of their emperor: 196
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in 200
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer, 204
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark; as many ways meet in one 208
town;

As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne 212
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.
Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake. 216
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy. 220

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exit an Attendant.]
Now are we well resolv'd; and by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe 224
Or break it all to pieces: or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample empery
O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn, 228
Tombleless, with no remembrance over them:
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless 232 mouth,
Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

First Amb. May't please your majesty to give us leave 237
Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? 240
K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian
king;
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons:
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plain-
ness 244

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.
First Amb. Thus then, in few.
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third. 248

In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd there's nought in
France
That can be with a nimble galliard won; 252
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.

He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim 256
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.
K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege.
K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us:

His present and your pains we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls, 261

We will in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler 264

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chaces. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them. 268
We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous licence; as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from
home. 272

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king and show my sail of greatness
When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
For that I have laid by my majesty 276
And plodded like a man for working-days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. 280
And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his soul

Shall stand sore-charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them: for many a thousand widows

Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down;

And some are yet ungotten and unborn

That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.

But this lies all within the will of God,

To whom I do appeal; and in whose name

Tell you the Dauphin I am coming on,

To venge me as I may and to put forth

My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.

So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin

His jest will savour but of shallow wit

When thousands weep more than did laugh at it.

Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Exe. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour

That may give furtherance to our expedition;

For we have now no thought in us but France,

Save those to God, that run before our business.

Therefore let our proportions for these wars

Be soon collected, and all things thought upon

That may with reasonable swiftness add

More feathers to our wings; for, God before,

We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.

Therefore let every man now task his thought,

That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt. Flourish.]

ACT II.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,

And silent dalliance in the wardrobe lies;

Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought

Reigns solely in the breast of every man:

They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,

Following the mirror of all Christian kings,

With winged heels, as English Mercuries.

For now sits Expectation in the air

And hides a sword from hilts unto the point

With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets,

Promis'd to Harry and his followers.

The French, advis'd by good intelligence

Of this most dreadful preparation,

Shake in their fear, and with pale policy

Seek to divert the English purposes.

O England! model to thy inward greatness,

Like little body with a mighty heart,

What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,

Were all thy children kind and natural!

But see thy fault! France hath in thee found out

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills

With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted men,

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,

Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third,

Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,

Have, for the gilt of France,—O guilt, indeed!—

Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;

And by their hands this grace of kings must die,—

If hell and treason hold their promises,—

Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.

Linger your patience on; and well digest

The abuse of distance while we force a play.

The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;

The king is set from London; and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton:

There is the playhouse now, there must you sit:

And thence to France shall we convey you safe,

And bring you back, charming the narrow seas

To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,

We'll not offend one stomach with our play.

But, till the king come forth and not till then,

Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—London. Eastcheap.

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and your friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles; but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will: and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and, certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may: though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol!

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host? Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term; 32 Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym and PISTOL draw.] O well-a-day, Lady! if he be not drawn now: we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. 40

Bard. Good lieutenant! good corporal! offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou pricked cur of Iceland! 44

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus. [Sheathing his sword.]

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile! The solus in thy most mervallous face; The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy; And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! 53 I do retort the solus in thy bowels; For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up, And flashing fire will follow. 56

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight! 64 The grave doth gape, and doting death is near; Therefore exhale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give; Thy spirits are most tall. 72

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge!

That is the word. I thee defy again. 76 O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?

No; to the spital go, And from the powdering-tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, 80 Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse: I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough. Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess: he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill. 88

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days. The king has killed his heart. Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy.]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats? 96

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays. 100

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. [They draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will. 105

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then, be enemies with me too. Prithee, put up. 109

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay; And liquor likewise will I give to thee, 113 And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me. Is not this just? for I shall sutler be 116 Unto the camp, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid. [Paying him.]

Nym. Well then, that's the humour of it. 121

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it. 128

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right; His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers. 133

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live. [Exeunt. 133

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council-chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his Grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat, 4
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours, 9

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard. 12

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts: Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France, 16

Doing the execution and the act

For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well persuaded 20

We carry not a heart with us from hence

That grows not in a fair consent with ours;

Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish

Success and conquest to attend on us. 24

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd

Than is your majesty: there's not, I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness

Under the sweet shade of your government. 28

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve you

With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness, 32

And shall forget the office of our hand,

Sooner than quittance of desert and merit

According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinews toil, 36

And labour shall refresh itself with hope,

To do your Grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday 40

That rail'd against our person: we consider

It was excess of wine that set him on;

And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example 45
Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O! let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too. 48

Grey. Sir,

You show great mercy, if you give him life After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas! your too much love and care of me 52

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch.

If little faults, proceeding on distemper,

Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, 56

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care,

And tender preservation of our person,

Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes: 60

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord:

Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege. 64

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard, Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours: 68
Read them; and know, I know your worthiness.
My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,
We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen!

What see you in those papers that you lose 72
So much complexion? Look ye, how they change!

Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you
there,

That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood
Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault, 76
And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey. } To which we all appeal.
Scroop. }

K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd: 80
You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.

See you, my princes and my noble peers, 84
These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge
here,

You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents
Belonging to his honour; and this man 88
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,
And sworn unto the practices of France,
To kill us here in Hampton: to the which
This knight, no less for bounty bound to us 92
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O!
What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou
cruel,

Ingrateful, savage and inhuman creature!
Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels,
That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, 97
That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold
Wouldest thou have practis'd on me for thy use!
May it be possible that foreign hire 100
Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange That, though the truth of it stands off as gross

As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.
Treason and murder ever kept together, 105
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
Working so grossly in a natural cause
That admiration did not whoop at them: 108
But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder:
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously 112
Hath got the voice in hell for excellence:
And other devils that suggest by treasons
Do botch and bungle up damnation

With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch'd 116

From glistering semblances of piety;
But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do
treason,

Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. 120
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee
thus

Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back,
And tell the legions, 'I can never win 124

A soul so easy as that Englishman's.'
O! how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance. Show men dutiful?
Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned? 128

Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family?
Why, so didst thou: seem they religious?

Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet,
Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger, 132 Constant in spirit, not swerving with the
blood,

Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye without the ear,
And but in purged judgment trusting neither?
Such and so finely-bolted didst thou seem: 137

And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
To mark the full-fraught man and best indu'd
With some suspicion. I will weep for thee; 140
For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. Their faults are open:
Arrest them to the answer of the law;

And God acquit them of their practices! 144
Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham. 148

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath dis-cover'd,

And I repent my fault more than my death; 152
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce,

Although I did admit it as a motive 156
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention;
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
Beseeching God and you to pardon me. 160

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason
Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise. 164
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers 168

Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,

His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt, 172
And his whole kingdom into desolation.
Touching our person seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws 176

We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
The taste whereof, God of his mercy give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance 180
Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.

[Exeunt CAMBRIDGE, SCROOP, and GREY, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France! the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky war, 184
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now

But every rub is smoothed on our way. 188
Then forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissiance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerly to sea! the signs of war advance: 192
No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Before a Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins; 4
Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is
dead,

And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell! 8

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. A' made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child; a' parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o'

the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' babbled of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I:
'what man! be of good cheer.' So a' cried out
'God, God, God!' three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God, I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone. 28

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that a' did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that a' did not. 32

Boy. Yes, that a' did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. A' could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked. 36

Boy. A' said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon. 41

Boy. Do you not remember a' saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire? 44

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be gone from Southampton. 49

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me
thy lips.

Look to my chattels and my moveables:
Let senses rule, the word is, 'Pitch and pay;' 52
Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:
Therefore, caveto be thy counsellor. 56

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my boys,
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say. 61

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu. 65

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. An Apartment in the FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING, attended; the DAUPHIN, the DUKES OF BERRI AND BRITAINE, the CONSTABLE, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us;
And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and Britaine, 4
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,
And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant: 8

For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.

It fits us then to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late examples 12
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,— Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,— 17

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation. 20

Therefore, I say 'tis meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France:
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more than if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance: 25
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, 28
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king.
Question your Grace the late ambassadors,
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors, 33
How modest in exception, and, withal
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find his vanities forespent 36
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate. 40

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;

But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems: 44

So the proportions of defence are fill'd;
Which of a weak and niggardly projection
Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong; 48
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon
us,

And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths: 52

Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand

Of that black name, Edward Black Prince of Wales; 56

Whiles that his mounting sire, on mountain standing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him

Mangle the work of nature, and deface 60
The patterns that by God and by French fathers

Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him. 64

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England

Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

[Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords.
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends. 68

Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten

Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know

Of what a monarchy you are the head: 73
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England?

Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty. 76

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart

The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations 'long 80

To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain

By custom and the ordinance of times Unto the crown of France. That you may know

'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim, 85

Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd
days,

Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line, 88

[Gives a pedigree.

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree;
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors, 92
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows? 96

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown

Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:
Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake like a Jove, 100

That, if requiring fail, he will compel;
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war 104
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens'
groans,

For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers, 108
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message;

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too. 112

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:

To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England? 116

Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt,

And anything that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: an if your father's high-
ness 120

Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and womby vaultages of France 124 Shall chide your trespass and return your mock

In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will; for I desire 128
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with the Paris balls.

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it, 132

Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe:
And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference—
As we his subjects have in wonder found—
Between the promise of his greener days 136
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time

Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. 140

Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king

Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions: 144

A night is but small breath and little pause
To answer matters of this consequence.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies

In motion of no less celerity Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen

The well-appointed king at Hampton pier 4
Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning:

Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing; 8
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
To sounds confus'd; behold the threaden sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea, 12

Breasting the lofty surge. O! do but think
You stand upon the rivage and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing;
For so appears this fleet majestical, 16
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight
still,

Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women, 20

Either past or not arriv'd to pilth and puissance:

For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
Those cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to
France? 24

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege;

*Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose the ambassador from the French comes
back;* 28

Tells Harry that the king doth offer him Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry,

*Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms:
The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner* 32
With linstock now the devilish cannon touches,
[Alarum; and chambers go off.]

*And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind.*
[Exit.]

SCENE I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BED-FORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;

*Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility:* 4

*But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,*

*Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage; 8
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;*

*Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm
it*

As fearfully as doth a galled rock 12
*O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.*

*Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his high height! On, on, you noblest English!*

*Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof;
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.* 21

*Dishonour not your mothers; now attest
That those whom you call'd fathers did beget
you.*

Be copy now to men of grosser blood, 24
And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,

*Whose limbs were made in England, show us
here*

*The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not;* 28

*For there is none of you so mean and base
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot: 32
Follow your spirit; and, upon this charge
Cry 'God for Harry! England and Saint George!'
[Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.]*

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knocks are too hot; and for mine own part, I have not a case of lives: the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just, for humours do abound: 8

*Knocks go and come: God's vassals drop and die;
And sword and shield
In bloody field
Doth win immortal fame.* 12

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London!
I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety.

Pist. And I: 16
*If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie.*

Boy. As duly, 26
*But not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.*

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs! avaunt, you cullions! [Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould! 24

*Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage!
Abate thy rage, great duke!*

Good bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humours! your honour wins bad humours. 29

[Exeunt NYM, PISTOL, and BARDOLPH, followed by FLUELLEN.]

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed three such antiques do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-livered and red-faced; by the means whereof, a' faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof a' breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men;

and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds; for a' never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal any thing and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel;—I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals,—they would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers: which makes much against my manhood if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them and seek some better service: their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit.

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines: the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you. 62

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke it is not so good to come to the mines. For look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' athversary—you may discuss unto the duke, look you—is digt himself four yards under the countermines; by Cheshu, I think, a' will plow up all if there is not better directions. 71

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not? 76

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verify as much in his peard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog. 82

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance.

Gow. Here a' comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans. 91

Jamy. I say gud day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioners given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish, la! tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour: O! tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done! 103

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point. 112

Jamy. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: [Aside.] and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and be Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la! 125

Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do gud service, or aile lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sal I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway. 132

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation— 135

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation? 139

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities. 146

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head. 149

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Al that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded.

Gow. The town sounds a parley. 153

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of wars; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parole we will admit:

Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves; Or like to men proud of destruction 4

Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier,—A name that in my thoughts, becomes me best,—

If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur 8 Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart, In liberty of bloody hand shall range 12

With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.

What is it then to me, if impious war, Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends, 16 Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause, If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20 Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness

When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil 25 As send precepts to the leviathan

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur, Take pity of your town and of your people, 28

Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command; Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil, and villany. 32

If not, why, in a moment, look to see

The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards, 36 And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen. 41 What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end.

The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated, 45 Returns us that his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king, We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy. Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours; 49 For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates! Come, uncle Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain, 52 And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French:

Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle, The winter coming on and sickness growing

Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais. 56

To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest; To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. KING HENRY and his Train enter the town.

SCENE IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame. 3

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigner; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez vous la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appellée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts? 8

Alice. Les doigts? ma joy, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendray. Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appellés de fingres; ouy, de fingres. 12

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon escolier. J'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vistement. Comment appelez vous les ongles? 16

Alice. Les ongles? nous les appellons, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Escoutez; dites moy, si je parle bien: de hands, de fingres, et de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dict, madame; il est fort bon Anglois. 21

Kath. Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude? 24

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent. 28

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez moy, Alice; escoutez: de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arma, de bilbow. 32
Alice. De elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; de elbow. Comment appelez vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame. 36

Kath. De nick. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick: le menton, de sin. 40

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur, en vérité vous prononcez les mots aussi droict que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps. 45

Alice. N'avez vous déjà oublié ce que je vous ay enseignée?

Kath. Non, je recileray à vous promptement. De hand, de fingre, de mails, — 40

Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arme, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf vostre honneur, d'elbow. 52

Kath. Ainsi dis je; d'elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de coun. 55

Kath. De foot, et de coun? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user. Je ne voudrois prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Foh! le foot, et le coun. Néanmoins je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arm, d'elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun. 64

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons nous à diner. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BOURBON, the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and Others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord, Let us not live in France; let us quit all, And give our vineyards to a barbarous people. 4

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us, The emptying of our fathers' luxury, Our scions, put in wild and savage stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds, 8 And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along

Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, 12 To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull, 16 On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth, Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat? 20 And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, Seem frosty? O! for honour of our land, Let us not hang like roping icicles

Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people 24

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields; Poor we may call them in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us, and plainly say 28 Our mettle is bred out; and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools, 32

And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos; Saying our grace is only in our heels, And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald? speed him hence: 36

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance. Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour edg'd More sharper than your swords, hie to the field: Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France; 40 You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and Berri, Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix, Lestrale, Bouciqualt, and Charolois; 45 High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great seats now quit you of great shames.

Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur: Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: 52 Go down upon him, you have power enough. And in a captive chariot into Roan Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great. Sorry am I his numbers are so few, 56 His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march, For I am sure when he shall see our army He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear, And for achievement offer us his ransom. 60

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy,
 And let him say to England that we send
 To know what willing ransom he will give.
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Roan.
Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. 65
Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain
 with us.
 Now forth, lord constable and princes all,
 And quickly bring us word of England's fall. 68
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the pidge. 4

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not—God be praised and plesed!—any hurt in the world; but keeps the pidge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient lieutenant there at the pidge, I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service. 17

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not. 20

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours:

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands. 25

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart,

And of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate
 And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel, 28
 That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffer afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind: and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls: in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral. 40

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;

For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must a' be,

A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free 44

And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.

But Exeter hath given the doom of death

For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak; the duke will hear thy voice; 48

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut

With edge of penny cord and vile reproach:

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning. 53

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for, if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd; and figo for thy friendship! 60

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit.]

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal: I remember him now; a bawd, a cut-purse. 66

Flu. I'll assure you a' uttered as prave words at the pidge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve. 71

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook. 88

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

Flu. God pless your majesty!

K. Hen. Now now, Fluellen! cam'st thou from the bridge? 96

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter hath very gallantly maintained the pridge: the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge. I can tell your majesty the duke is a prave man. 104

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church; one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out. 115

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit. 124

K. Hen. Well then I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it. 127

Mont. Thus says my king: Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master, so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality. 149

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,

And tell thy king I do not seek him now, 152

But could be willing to march on to Calais

Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth,—

Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much

Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,— 156

My people are with sickness much enfeebled,

My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French:

Who, when they were in health, I tell thee,

herald, 160

I thought upon one pair of English legs

Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me,

God,

That I do brag thus! this your air of France

Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent. 164

Go therefore, tell thy master here I am:

My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,

My army but a weak and sickly guard;

Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, 168

Though France himself and such another neighbour

Stand in our way. There's for thy labour,

Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself:

If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, 172

We shall your tawny ground with your red blood

Discolour: and so, Montjoy, fare you well.

The sum of all our answer is but this:

We would not seek a battle as we are; 176

Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it:

So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit.]

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now. 180

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward night:

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves,

And on to-morrow bid them march away. 184

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, and Others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due. 4

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour— 8

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ça, ha! He bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs: le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 20

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse. 28

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin. 32

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world—familiar to us, and unknown—to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus: 'Wonder of nature!'— 44

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress. 49

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress. 53

Con. Ma foi, methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours. 56

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O! then belike she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your straight strossers. 60

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress. 65

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair. 68

Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au boubier: thou makest use of any thing. 73

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress: or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose. 76

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord. 80

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away. 86

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted. 89

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces. 93

Con. I will not say so for fear I should be faced out of my way. But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English. 97

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them. 101

Dau. 'Tis midnight: I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English. 104

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath. 109

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing. 113

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still. 116

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he? 120

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him. 124

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour;
and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. 'Ill will never said well.' 128

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship.'

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.' 132

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb, with 'A pox of the devil.'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.' 137

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. 141

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.
Would it were day! Alas! poor Harry of England, he longs not for the dawning as we do. 146

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension they would run away. 151

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures: their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage. 157

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. 162

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. 168

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm; come, shall we about it? 173

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter Chorus.

*Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of
night,* 4

*The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames* 8

*Each battle sees the other's umber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents*

*The armourers, accomplishing the knights, 12
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.*

*The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name. 16
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And hide the cripple tardy-gaited night 20
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,*

*Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and intly ruminate 24
The morning's danger, and their gesture sad
Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O! now, who will behold* 28

*The royal captain of this ruin'd band
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'*

For forth he goes and visits all his host, 32
 Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,
 And calls them brothers, friends, and country-
 men.

Upon his royal face there is no note
 How dread an army hath enrouned him; 36
 Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
 Unto the weary and all-watched night:
 But freshly looks and overbears attaint
 With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty; 40
 That every wretch, pining and pale before,
 Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.
 A largess universal, like the sun

His liberal eye doth give to every one, 44
 Thawing cold fear. Then mean and gentle all,
 Behold, as may unworthiness define,
 A little touch of Harry in the night.

And so our scene must to the battle fly; 48
 Where,—O for pity,—we shall much disgrace,
 With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
 Right ill dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
 The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see; 52
 Minding true things by what their mockeries be. [Exit.

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;
 The greater therefore should our courage be.
 Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!
 There is some soul of goodness in things evil, 4
 Would men observingly distil it out;
 For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
 Which is both healthful, and good husbandry:
 Besides, they are our outward consciences, 8
 And preachers to us all; admonishing
 That we should dress us fairly for our end.
 Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
 And make a moral of the devil himself. 12

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
 A good soft pillow for that good white head
 Were better than a churlish turf of France.
 Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better, 16
 Since I may say, 'Now lie I like a king.'

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains
 Upon example; so the spirit is eas'd:
 And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt, 20
 The organs, though defunct and dead before,
 Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
 With casted slough and fresh legerity.

Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both,
 Commend me to the princes in our camp; 25
 Do my good morrow to them; and anon
 Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege. 28

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BEDFORD.

Erp. Shall I attend your Grace?
 K. Hen. No, my good knight;
 Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
 I and my bosom must debate awhile,
 And then I would no other company. 32

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble
 Harry! [Exit.

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là?

K. Hen. A friend. 36

Pist. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?
 Or art thou base, common and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike? 40

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold, 44

A lad of life, an imp of fame:
 Of parents good, of fist most valiant:
 I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-string
 I love the lovely bully. What's thy name? 48

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen? 52

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate
 Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours. 57

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee then! 60

K. Hen. I thank you. God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.
 [Retires.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen! 64

Flu. Sol in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and auncient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept.

If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise. 76

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you heard him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, in your own conscience now?

Gow. I will speak lower. 83

Flu. I pray you and peseech you that you will. [Exeunt GOWER and FLUELLEN.]

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion,
There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder? 89

Bates. I think it be; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you? 96

K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate? 100

K. Hen. Even as men wracked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king? 104

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army. 118

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck, and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here. 123

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved. 129

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know. 136

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us. 140

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make; when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all, 'We died at such a place;' some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection. 155

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcilable iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death they have borne life away, and where they would be safe they perish. Then, if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained: and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare. 199

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head: the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed. 206

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after. 211

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch. You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying. 218

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round; I should be angry with you if the time were convenient. 221

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it. 224

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine. 230

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it. 237

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company. 240

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon. 244

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper. 249

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, Our children, and our sins lay on the king! 252 We must bear all. O hard condition!

Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel

But his own wringing. What infinite heart's ease Must kings neglect that private men enjoy! 257

And what have kings that privates have not too, Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idle ceremony? 260

What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?

What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in? O ceremony! show me but thy worth: 264

What is thy soul of adoration?

Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men?

Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd, 268 Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,

But poison'd flattery? O! be sick, great greatness, 272

And bid thy ceremony give thee cure.

Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out

With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low-bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's

knee, 276

Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,

That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;

I am a king that find thee; and I know

'Tis not the balm, the sceptre and the ball, 280

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,

The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,

The farced title running 'fore the king,

The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp 284

That beats upon the high shore of this world,

No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,

Not all these, laid in bed majestical,

Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave, 283
Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread;
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set 292
Sweats in the eye of Phœbus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever-running year 296
With profitable labour to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king. 300
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots
What watch the king keeps to maintain the
peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages. 304

Re-enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent:
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts; 309

Possess them not with fear; take from them
now

The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to-day, O
Lord! 312

O! not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown.

I Richard's body have interr'd anew,
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears 316

Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,

Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built 320

Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests

Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
Though all that I can do is nothing worth,

Since that my penitence comes after all, 324
Imploping pardon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloucester's voice! Ay;
I know thy errand, I will go with thee: 328

The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and Others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour: up, my lords!

Dau. *Montez à cheval! My horse! varlet!
lacquais! ha!*

Orl. O brave spirit!

Dau. Via! les eaux et la terre! 4

Orl. Rien puis? l'air et le feu.

Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my lord constable!

Con. Hark how our steeds for present service neigh! 8

Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,

That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And dout them with superfluous courage: ha!

Ram. What! will you have them weep our horses' blood? 12

How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattail'd, you
French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!

Do but behold yon poor and starved band, 16
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,

Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands;

Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins 20
To give each naked curtal-axe a stain,

That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheathe for lack of sport: let us but blow on
them,

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them. 24

'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,

Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our squares of battle, were enow 28

To purge this field of such a hilding foe,
Though we upon this mountain's basis by

Took stand for idle speculation:
But that our honours must not. What's to say?

A very little little let us do, 33
And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound

The tucket sonance and the note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,

That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords
of France?

Yon island carrions desperate of their bones,
 Ill-favour'dly become the morning field: 40
 Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
 And our air shakes them passing scornfully:
 Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
 And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps: 44
 The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
 With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor jades
 Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
 The gum down-roping from their pale-dead
 eyes, 48
 And in their pale dull mouths the gimmel bit
 Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless;
 And their executors, the knavish crows,
 Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour. 52
 Description cannot suit itself in words
 To demonstrate the life of such a battle
 In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. 56

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,

And give their fasting horses provender,
 And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard: on, to the field! 60

I will the banner from a trumpet take,
 And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!
 The sun is high, and we outwear the day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English host; GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh. 4

Sal God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.

God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:
 If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
 Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford, 8
 My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord
 Exeter,

And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly today: 12

And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,

For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.
 [Exit SALISBURY.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;
 Princely in both.

Enter KING HENRY.

West. O! that we now had here 16
 But one ten thousand of those men in England
 That do no work to-day.

K. Hen. What's he that wishes so?
 My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin:
 If we are mark'd to die, we are enow 20
 To do our country loss; and if to live,

The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.
 By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, 24

Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
 It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
 Such outward things dwell not in my desires:

But if it be a sin to covet honour, 28
 I am the most offending soul alive.

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
 God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more, methinks, would share from
 me, 32

For the best hope I have. O! do not wish one
 more:

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
 Let him depart; his passport shall be made, 36
 And crowns for convoy put into his purse:

We would not die in that man's company
 That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian: 40
 He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
 And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

He that shall live this day, and see old age, 44
 Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,

And say, 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian:'
 Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,

And say, 'These wounds I had on Crispin's day.'
 Old men forget: yet all shall be forgot, 49

But he'll remember with advantages
 What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,

Familiar in his mouth as household words, 52
 Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,

Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
 Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

This story shall the good man teach his son; 56
 And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,

From this day to the ending of the world,
 But we in it shall be remembered;

We few, we happy few, we band of brothers; 60

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
 Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile
 This day shall gentle his condition:
 And gentlemen in England, now a-bed 64
 Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not
 here,
 And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
 That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sov'reign lord, bestow yourself with speed: 68

The French are bravely in their battles set,
 And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now! 72

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,

Without more help, could fight this royal battle!

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men; 76

Which likes me better than to wish us one.
 You know your places: God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee,
 King Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, 80
 Before thy most assured overthrow:

For certainly thou art so near the gulf Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy,

The constable desires thee thou wilt mind 84
 Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
 May make a peaceful and a sweet retire

From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies

Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now? 88
Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer
 back:

Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
 Good God! why should they mock poor fellows
 thus? 92

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
 While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting
 him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt
 Find native graves; upon the which, I trust, 96
 Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;

And those that leave their valiant bones in
 France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dung-hills,

They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them, 100

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven,
 Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
 The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark then abounding valour in our English,
 That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing, 105

Break out into a second course of mischief,
 Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly: tell the constable, 108
 We are but warriors for the working-day;

Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
 With rainy marching in the painful field;

There's not a piece of feather in our host— 112
 Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—

And time hath worn us into slovenry:
 But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;

And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night 116
 They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck

The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'
 heads,

And turn them out of service. If they do this,—
 As, if God please, they shall,—my ransom then

Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour; 121

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:
 They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints;

 Which if they have as I will leave 'em them, 124

Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so, fare thee well:

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.

K. Hen. I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom. 128

Enter YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg

The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away:

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
 [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier, PRISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur!

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality? Calen O cuture me! Art thou a gentleman? 4

What is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O Signieur Dew should be a gentleman:—

Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark:

O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox 9
Except, O signieur, thou do give to me

Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitié de moy! 13

Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys;

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat

In drops of crimson blood. 16

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, curl!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, 20
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moy!

Pist. Sayst thou me so? is that a ton of moys?

Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French
What is his name. 25

Boy. Escoutez: comment estes vous appelé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer. 28

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and fir him, and ferret him. Discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fir. 33

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prest; car ce soldat icy est disposé tout à cette heure de couper vostre gorge.

Pist. Ouy, cupple gorge, permafoy,

Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns; 40

Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O! je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous don-neray deux cents escus. 45

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom
he will give you two hundred crowns. 49

Pist. Tell him, my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il? 52

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier; neant-moins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchise-

ment. 57

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciemens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy. 63

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one—as he thinks—the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England. 68

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.—

Follow me!

[Exeunt PISTOL and French Soldier.

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine. I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil! the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be if he durst steal anything adventurously.
I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, BOUR-BON, CONSTABLE, RAMBURES, and Others.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur! le jour est perdu! tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all!
Reproach and everlasting shame 4
Sit mocking in our plumes. O meschante fortune!

Do not run away. [A short alarum.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame! let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice
for? 8

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let's die in honour! once more back again;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now, 12
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,
Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,
His fairest daughter is contaminated. 16
Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us
now!

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough yet living in the field
To smother up the English in our throngs, 20
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the throng:

Let life be short, else shame will be too long.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY and Forces;
EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-vaillant countrymen:

But all's not done; yet keep the French the
field.

Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour 4

I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting;
From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie,
Larding the plain; and by his bloody side,— 8
Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,—
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died: and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd, 12
And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face;
And cries aloud, 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven; 16
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast,
As in this glorious and well-foughten field,
We kept together in our chivalry!

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up:
He smil'd me in the face, rought me his hand,
And with a feeble gripe says, 'Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.'

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck 24
He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;
And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble-ending love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd 28
Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;

But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not; 32
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.

[Alarums.]

But hark! what new alarum is this same?
The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd men:
Then every soldier kill his prisoners! 37
Give the word through. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer't: in your conscience now, is it not? 4

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive;
and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king most worthily hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O! 'tis a gallant king. 11

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great. 15

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge,
or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings,
save the phrase is a little variations. 19

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon: his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander,—God knows, and you know,—in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Cleitus. 42

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups, so also

Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great belly-douplet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name. 54

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you, there is goot men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty. 58

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, with a part of the English Forces; WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald; 60 Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill:

If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or void the field; they do offend our sight.

If they'll do neither, we will come to them, 64 And make them skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.

Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take 68 Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not 72

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king.

I come to thee for charitable licence, That we may wander o'er this bloody field 76

To book our dead, and then to bury them; To sort our nobles from our common men;

For many of our princes—woe the while!— Lie down'd and soak'd in mercenary blood; 80

So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds

Fret fetlock-deep in gore, and with wild rage Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,

Killing them twice. O! give us leave, great king, To view the field in safety and dispose

Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not if the day be ours or no; 88

For yet a many of your horsemen peer And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours. K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by? Mont. They call it Agincourt. 93

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave battle here in France. 100

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true. If your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your majesty know, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day. 109

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour; For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your pody, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman. 116

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man. 121

K. Hen. God keep me so! Our heralds go with him:

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY and Others.]

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap? 127

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if a' live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap,—which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear if alive,—I will strike it out soundly. 137

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience. 141

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your Grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la! 151

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege. 156

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege. [Exit.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love. 167

Flu. Your Grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see. 173

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an't please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent. 177

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels. 180

The glove which I have given him for a favour, May haply purchase him a box o' the ear; It is the soldier's; I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick: If that the soldier strike him,—as, I judge 185 By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,—Some sudden mischief may arise of it; For I do know Fluellen valiant, 188 And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder, And quickly will return an injury: Follow and see there be no harm between them. Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Before KING HENRY's Pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, captain, I peseech you now come apace to the king: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of. 5

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. 8 [Strikes him.

Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn? 12

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he is a friend of the Duke Alençon's. 18

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter? Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is,—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter? 24

Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your Grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word. 33

Flu. Your majesty hear now,—saving your majesty's manhood,—what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is. I hope your majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and avowments, that this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me; in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it. 41

'Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An't please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the 'orld.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction? 48

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was yourself thou didst abuse. 52

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man;

witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fault and not mine: for had you been as I took you for I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me. 60

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,
And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow;
And wear it for an honour in thy cap
Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns: 64
And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money. 72

Flu. It is with a good will; I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good shilling, I warrant you, or I will change it. 77

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French. [Delivers a paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle? 80

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king;

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciquault:
Of other lords and barons, knights and squires,
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men. 84

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French

That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number,

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead
One hundred twenty-six: added to these, 88

Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen,
Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:

So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, 92
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;

The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights,
squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality.

The names of those their nobles that lie dead: 96
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France;

Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France;

The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambures;

Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guischaud
Dauphin; 100

John Duke of Alençon; Antony Duke of Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy,
And Edward Duke of Bar: of lusty earls,
Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and Foix, 104
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestraie.
Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper.]

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire: 109

None else of name: and of all other men

But five and twenty. O God! thy arm was here;
And not to us, but to thy arm alone, 112

Ascribe we all. When, without stratagem,
But in plain shock and even play of battle,
Was ever known so great and little loss
On one part and on the other? Take it, God,
For it is none but thine!

Exe. 'Tis wonderful! 117

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village:

And be it death proclaimed through our host
To boast of this or take the praise from God 120
Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknowledgment, 124

That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites:

Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum; 128
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay.

We'll then to Calais; and to England then,
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit the excuse

Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, 4
Which cannot in their huge and proper life

Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen,

Heave him away upon your winged thoughts 8
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach

Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,

Which, like a mighty whifflet 'fore the king, 12
Seems to prepare his way: so let him land

And solemnly see him set on to London.
 So swift a pace hath thought that even now
 You may imagine him upon Blackheath; 16
 Where that his lords desire him to have borne
 His bruised helmet and his bended sword
 Before him through the city: he forbids it, Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride; 20

Giving full trophy, signal and ostent,
 Quite from himself, to God. But now behold,
 In the quick forge and working-house of thought,
 How London doth pour out her citizens. 24

The mayor and all his brethren in best sort,
 Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
 With the plebeians swarming at their heels,
 Go forth and fetch their conquering Cæsar in:
 As, by a lower but loving likelihood, 29
 Were now the general of our gracious empress,—

As in good time he may,—from Ireland coming,
 Bringing rebellion broached on his sword, 32
 How many would the peaceful city quit
 To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,

Did they this Harry. Now in London place
 him;

As yet the lamentation of the French 36
 Invites the King of England's stay at home,—
 The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
 To order peace between them;—and omit
 All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, 40
 Till Harry's back-return again to France:
 There must we bring him; and myself have play'd

The interim, by remembering you 'tis past.
 Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
 After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.

SCENE I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's house is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, asse my friend, Captain Gower. The rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, praggling knave, Pistol,—which you and yourself and all the 'orld know to be no petter than a fellow,—look you now, of no merits, he is come to me and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and pid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not preed no contentation with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock. 16

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol!
 you scurvy, lousy knave, God pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Troyan, 20

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
 Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy lousy knave, at my desires and my requests and my petitions to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestions does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it. 28

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.
 Flu. [Strikes him.] There is one goat for you.
 Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Troyan, thou shalt die. 32

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time and eat your victuals; come, there is sauce for it. [Strikes him again.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished
 him. 41

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days. Bite, I pray you; it is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb. 45

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and ambiguities. 48

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge. I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by. 53

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel: thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good. 60

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat. 66

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this. 72

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.]

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? 85

News have I that my Nell is dead i' the spital Of malady of France:

And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. 88

Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs

Honour is cudgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn,

And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand.

To England will I steal, and there I'll steal: 92

And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,

And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Enter, from one side, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords; from the other side, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHARINE, ALICE and other Ladies; the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day; joy and good wishes To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine; And, as a branch and member of this royalty, 5 By whom this great assembly is contriv'd, We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy; And, princes French, and peers, health to you all 8

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England; fairly met: So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day and of this gracious meeting, 13 As we are now glad to behold your eyes; Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them

Against the French, that met them in their bent, The fatal balls of murdering basilisks: 17

The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,

Have lost their quality, and that this day

Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love. 20

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great Kings of France and England! That I have labour'd 24

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours,

To bring your most imperial majesties

Unto this bar and royal interview,

Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.

Since then my office hath so far prevail'd 29

That face to face, and royal eye to eye,

You have congregated, let it not disgrace me

If I demand before this royal view, 32

What rub or what impediment there is,

Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,

Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births,

Should not in this best garden of the world, 36

Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage?

Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd,

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,

Corrupting in its own fertility. 40

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,

Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd,

Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,

Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas 44

The darnel, hemlock and rank fumitory

Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts

That should deracinate such savagery;

The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth

The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,

Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,

Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems 51

But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,

Losing both beauty and utility;

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,

Even so our houses and ourselves and children

Have lost, or do not learn for want of time, 57

The sciences that should become our country,

But grow like savages,—as soldiers will,

That nothing do but meditate on blood,— 60

To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire,

And every thing that seems unnatural.

Which to reduce into our former favour

You are assembled; and my speech entreats 64

That I may know the let why gentle Peace

Should not expel these inconveniences,

And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would

the peace, 68

Whose want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that
peace

With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects 72
You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which as yet,

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer. 76

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'erglanc'd the articles: pleaseth your Grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed 80
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester, 84

Warwick and Huntingdon, go with the king;
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity, 88
Anything in or out of our demands,
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister,

Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with
them. 92

Haply a woman's voice may do some good
When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here
with us;

She is our capital demand, compris'd 96
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[*Exeunt all except KING HENRY,
KATHARINE, and ALICE.*]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,
Such as will enter at a lady's ear, 100
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty sall mock at me; I cannot speak your standard.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine! if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate? 107

Kath. Pardonnez moy, I cannot tell vat is
'like me.'

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges? 113

Alice. Ouy, vrayment, sauf vostre grace, ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it. 117

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines des tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits? 121

Alice. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you:' then, if you urge me further than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; i' faith do: and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. Sauz vostre honneur, me understand vell.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure, and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength.
If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken,
I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me;
if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rime themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rime is but a ballad. A good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow, but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon;
for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France? 178

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 185

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moy,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—donc vostre est France, et vous estes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me. 197

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, le François que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle. 200

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English, Canst thou love me? 205

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night when you come into your closet you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate,—as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt,—I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce? 224

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très cher et divine déesse? 231

Kath. Your majesté ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France. 234

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English I love thee, Kate: by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me: therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine:' which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine;' who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English: wilt thou have me? 265

Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roy mon père.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate. 268

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma joy, je ne veux point que vous abaissez vostre grandeur, en baisant la main d'une vostre indigne serviteure: excusez moy, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur. 276

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, et demoiselles, pour estre baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas la coutume de France. 280

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is baiser in English. 284

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moy.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say? 289

Alice. Ouy, vrayment.

K. Hen. O Kate! nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouths of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding [Kissing her]. You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father. 304

Re-enter the KING and QUEEN, BURGUNDY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! My royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English. 309

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness. 315

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up Love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to. 325

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do. 329

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too. 341

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way. 346

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspective, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you. 352

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will. 356

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter first, and then in sequel all, 361 According to their firm proposed natures.

Exe. Only he hath not yet subscribed this:

Where your majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French, Notre très cher filz Henry roy d'Angleterre, Héritier de France; and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliæ, et Hæres Franciæ.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,

But your request shall make me let it pass. 372

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest; And thereupon give me your daughter.

Fr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up 376 Issue to me; that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale

With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

All. Amen! 384

K. Hen. Now, welcome, Kate: and bear me witness all, That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

[Flourish.]

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love, 389
So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league;
That English may as French, French English-
men,

Receive each other! God speak this Amen! 396
All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage: on which day,

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath,
And all the peers', for surety of our leagues. 400
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me;
And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be! [Sennet. Exeunt.]

Enter Chorus.

SCENE.—Partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the Funeral of KING HENRY THE FIFTH attended on by the DUKES of BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER; the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Heralds, &c.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars,
That have consented unto Henry's death! 5
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!

England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time.
Virtue he had, deserving to command: 9

His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire, 12
More dazzled and drove back his enemies
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered. 16

Exe. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.

Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
And death's dishonourable victory 20
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow? 24
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings. 28

Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd 33

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom like a school-boy you may over-awe. 36

Win. Gloucester, whate'er we like thou art protector,

And lookest to command the prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God or religious churchmen may. 40

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh,

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou
go'st,

Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace! 44

Let's to the altar: heralds, wait on us:
Instead of gold we'll offer up our arms,
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.
Posterity, await for wretched years, 48
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,

Our isle be made a marish of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.
Henry the Fifth! thy ghost I invoke: 52
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Cæsar, or bright— 56

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans, 60
Paris, Guysors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What sayst thou, man, before dead
Henry's corse?

Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead and rise from
death. 64

Glo. Is Paris lost? is Roan yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd? 68

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.

Among the soldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought, 72

You are disputing of your generals.
One would have lingering wars with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third thinks, without expense at all, 76
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!

Let not sloth dim your honours new-begot:
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms; 80
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral
These tidings would call forth their flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; Regent I am of
France. 84

Give me my steeled coat: I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
To weep their intermissive miseries. 88

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance.

France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty towns of no import:
The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims; 92

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The Duke of Alençon flieth to his side.

Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him! 96

O! whither shall we fly from this reproach?
Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies'
throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.
Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness? 100

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight 105
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so?

Third Mess. O, no! wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown: 108

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop, 112
By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.
No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers; 116 Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued; 120
Where valiant Talbot above human thought
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand
him;

Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he flew:
The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms; 125
All the whole army stood agaz'd on him.
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out amain, 128
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,
If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward.
He, being in the vaward,—plac'd behind, 132
With purpose to relieve and follow them,—
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.

Hence grew the general wrack and massacre;
Enclosed were they with their enemies. 136
A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face. 140

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself,
For living idly here in pomp and ease
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd. 144

Third Mess. O no! he lives; but is took prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hunger-
ford:

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay: 148

I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.

Farewell, my masters; to my task will I; 152
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal:

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe
quake. 156

Third Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieg'd;

The English army is grown weak and faint;
The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, 160
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke. 164

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave,

To go about my preparation. [Exit.]

Glo. I'll to the Tower with all the haste I can,

To view the artillery and munition; 168
And then I will proclaim young Henry king.

[Exit.]
Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young king is,

Being ordain'd his special governor;
And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit.]

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend: 173

I am left out; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office.
The king from Eltham I intend to steal, 176
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces:
ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens

So in the earth, to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side;
Now we are victors; upon us he smiles. 4
What towns of any moment but we have?

At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;
Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,

Faintly besiege us one hour in a month. 8
Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves:

Either they must be dieted like mules
And have their provender tied to their mouths,
Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice. 12

Reig. Let's raise the siege: why live we idly
here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall; 16
Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarum! we will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
Him I forgive my death that killeth me 20
When he sees me go back one foot or fly.

[Exeunt.]

Alarums; Excursions; afterwards a retreat.
Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!

Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled

But that they left me 'midst my enemies. 24

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life:

The other lords, like lions wanting food,

Do rush upon us as their hungry prey. 28

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records,

England all Olivers and Rowlands bred

During the time Edward the Third did reign.

More truly now may this be verified; 32

For none but Samsons and Goliases,

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!

Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose

They had such courage and audacity? 36

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hare-brain'd slaves,

And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth

The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege. 40

Reig. I think, by some odd gimmals or device,

Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on;

Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.

By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone. 44

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS.

Bast. Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd: 48

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?

Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:

A holy maid hither with me I bring,

Which by a vision sent to her from heaven 52

Ordained is to raise this tedious siege,

And drive the English forth the bounds of

France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,

Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome; 56

What's past and what's to come she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit BASTARD.] But first, to try her skill, 60

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place:

Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern:

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires.]

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE and Others.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats? 64

Joan. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before.

Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me: 68

In private will I talk with thee apart.

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a while.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Joan. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter, 72

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.

Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd

To shine on my contemptible estate:

Lo! whilst I waited on my tender lambs, 76

And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's mother deigned to appear to me,

And in a vision full of majesty

Will'd me to leave my base vocation 80

And free my country from calamity:

Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success;

In complete glory she reveal'd herself;

And, whereas I was black and swart before, 84

With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,

That beauty am I bless'd with which you see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible

And I will answer unpremeditated: 88

My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,

And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.

Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate

If thou receive me for thy war-like mate. 92

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,

In single combat thou shalt buckle with me,

And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true; 96

Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Joan. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;

The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard, 100

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Joan. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[They fight, and JOAN LA PUCELLE overcomes.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon, 104

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Joan. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:

Impatiently I burn with thy desire; 108

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant and not sovereign be;

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus. 112

Joan. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above:

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense. 116

Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean? 121

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on? 124

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Joan. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm: we'll fight it out. 128

Joan. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars. 132

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.

With Henry's death the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included. 137

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then. 141

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays and let us raise the siege. 146

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans and be immortalis'd.

Char. Presently we'll try. Come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust if she prove false. 150
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter at the Gates the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men, in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day;

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance. Where be these warders that they wait not here?

Open the gates! 'Tis Gloucester that calls. 4 [Servants knock.]

First Ward. [Within.] Who's there that knocks so imperiously?

First Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.

Sec. Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

First Serv. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector? 8

First Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:

We do not otherwise than we are will'd.

Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?

There's none protector of the realm but I. 12

Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize:

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[GLOUCESTER'S Men rush at the Tower gates, and WOODVILLE the Lieutenant speaks within.]

Wood. What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?

Open the gates! here's Gloucester that would enter. 17

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble Duke; I may not open;

The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:

From him I have express commandment 20

That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him 'fore me?

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook? 24

Thou art no friend to God or to the king:

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly

First Serv. Open the gates unto the Lord Protector;
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly. 28

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by Serving-men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this?

Glo. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor, And not protector, of the king or realm. 32

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead lord; Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin: I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, 36 If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot:

This be Damascus, be thou curs'd Cain, To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. 40

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back: Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I'll beard thee to thy face. 44

Glo. What! am I dar'd and bearded to my face?—

Draw, men, for all this privileged place; Blue coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard; [GLOUCESTER and his men attack the CARDINAL.

I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly. 48 Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat, In spite of pope or dignities of church, Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloucester, thou'lt answer this before the pope. 52

Glo. Winchester goose! I cry a rope! a rope! Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.

Out, tawny coats! out, scarlet hypocrite! 56

Here GLOUCESTER'S Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glo. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor King, Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use. 61

Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens;

One that still motions war and never peace, O'ercharging your free purses with large fines, 64 That seeks to overthrow religion

Because he is protector of the realm, And would have armour here out of the Tower, To crown himself king and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife

But to make open proclamation. Come, officer: as loud as e'er thou canst; 72 Cry.

Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death. 80

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law; But we shall meet and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloucester, we will meet; to thy cost, be sure:

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work. May. I'll call for clubs if you will not away.

This cardinal's more haughty than the devil. 86 Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloucester! guard thy head; For I intend to have it ere long.

[Exeunt, severally, GLOUCESTER and WINCHESTER, with their Serving-men.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart. 90

Good God! these nobles should such stomachs bear;

I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won. Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,

Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim. 4

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:

Chief heart-gunner am I of this town; Something I must do to procure me grace.

The prince's espials have informed me 8 How the English, in the suburbs close entrench'd,

Went through a secret gate of iron bars In yonder tower to overpeer the city,

And thence discover how with most advantage
 They may vex us with shot or with assault. 13
 To intercept this inconvenience,
 A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
 And fully even these three days have I watch'd
 If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch, 17
 For I can stay no longer.
 If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;
 And thou shalt find me at the Governor's. [Exit.]
Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care; 21
 I'll never trouble you if I may spy them. [Exit.]

*Enter, on the turrets, the LORDS SALISBURY and TALBOT; SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR
 THOMAS GARGRAVE, and Others.*

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return'd!
 How wert thou handled being prisoner? 24
 Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd,
 Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner
 Called the brave Lord Ponton de Santrailles; 28
 For him I was exchang'd and ransomed.
 But with a baser man at arms by far Once in contempt they would have barter'd
 me:

Which I disdain'd scorn'd, and craved death 32
 Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.
 In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
 But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my
 heart:

Whom with my bare fists I would execute 36
 If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs and scorns and contume-lious taunts.

In open market-place produc'd they me, 40
 To be a public spectacle to all:
 Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
 The scarecrow that affrights our children so.
 Then broke I from the officers that led me, 44
 And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground

To hurl at the beholders of my shame.
 My grisly countenance made others fly.
 None durst come near for fear of sudden death.
 In iron walls they deem'd me not secure; 49
 So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel
 And spurn in pieces posts of adamant: 52
 Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
 That walk'd about me every minute-while;
 And if I did but stir out of my bed
 Ready they were to shoot me to the heart. 56

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd;

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Orleans:

Here, through this grate, I count each one, 60

And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:

Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions 64

Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think at the North gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd, 68

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[*Here they shoot. SALISBURY and SIR
 THOMAS GARGRAVE fall.*]

Sal. O Lord! have mercy on us, wretched sinners.

Gar. O Lord! have mercy on me, woeful man.

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us? 72

*Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst
 speak:*

How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?

One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!

Accurs'd tower! accurs'd fatal hand 76

That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!

In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;

Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars;

Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck up, 80

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.
 Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech

doth fail,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace:

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. 84

Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,

If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands!

Bear hence his body; I will help to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life? 88

Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.

Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;

Thou shalt not die, whiles—

He beckons with his hand and smiles on me, 92

As who should say, 'When I am dead and gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French.'

Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero,

Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn: 96

Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[It thunders and lightens. An alarm.]

What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?

Whence cometh this alarm and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd head: 100
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,
A holy prophetess new risen up
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[Here SALISBURY lifteth himself up and groans.]

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan! 104

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you:
Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent, 110
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.]

SCENE V.—The Same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. *Enter TALBOT, pursuing the DAUPHIN; drives him in, and exit:
then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them. Then re-enter TALBOT.*

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee:
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee: 5
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Joan. Come, come; 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [They fight.]

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail? 9

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. 12
[They fight again.]

Joan. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

[A short alarum; then LA PUCELLE enters the town with Soldiers.]

O'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men; 16
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be. [Exit.]

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

I know not where I am, nor what I do: 20

A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal, Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists:

So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome
stench,

Are from their hives and houses driven away. 24
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarum.]

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat; 28

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,
Or horse or oxen from the leopard,

As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves. 32

[Alarum. Another skirmish.]

It will not be: retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.

Pucelle is entered into Orleans 36
In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O! would I were to die with Salisbury.

The shame hereof will make me hide my head.

[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt TALBOT and his Forces, &c.]

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Flourish. Enter, on the walls, JOAN LA PU-CELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Joan. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English:
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astraea's daughter, 4
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess! 8
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets, 13
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,

When they shall hear how we have play'd the
men. 16

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;

For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm

Shall in procession sing her endless praise. 20

A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear
Than Rhodope's or Memphis ever was:
In memory of her when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious 24
Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry, 28
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in, and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Orleans.

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.
If any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard. 4
First Sent. Sergeant, you shall.

[Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors—
When others sleep upon their quiet beds—
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces with scaling-ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy, 8
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted: 12
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit
Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame, 16

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid, and be so martial! 21
Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long;

If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour, as she hath begun. 24

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits;

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow
thee. 28

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways,
That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force. 32
Bed. Agreed. I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear 36
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying, 'Saint George! 'A Talbot!' and all enter the town.]

First Sent. Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the Walls in their shirts.
Enter, several ways, BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what! all un-ready so?

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scap'd so
well. 40

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave
our beds,

Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors.

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd arms,

Ne'er heard I of a war-like enterprise 44
More venturous or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour
him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how he sped. 48

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter CHARLES and JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain, 52

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Joan. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking must I still prevail, 56

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,
That, being captain of the watch to-night, 61

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been so safely kept
As that whereof I had the government, 64
We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct 68

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels:

Then how or which way should they first break in?

Joan. Question, my lords, no further of the case, 72

How or which way: 'tis sure they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.

And now there rests no other shift but this;

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new platforms to endamage them. 77

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying, 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;

For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80

Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Tow'n.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled, Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.

Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. [Retreat sounded.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury, 4

And here advance it in the market-place,

The middle centre of this cursed town.

Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;

For every drop of blood was drawn from him 8

There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold

What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,

Within their chiefest temple I'll erect 12

A tomb wherein his corse shall be interr'd:

Upon the which, that every one may read,

Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,

The treacherous manner of his mournful death,

And what a terror he had been to France. 17

But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,

I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,

Nor any of his false confederates. 21

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,

They did amongst the troops of armed men 24

Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself—as far as I could well discern

For smoke and dusky vapours of the night—

Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull, 28

When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves

That could not live asunder day or night.

After that things are set in order here, 32

We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the war-like Talbot, for his acts

So much applauded through the realm of France? 36

Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,

By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe 40

To visit her poor castle where she lies,

That she may boast she hath beheld the man

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars

Will turn into a peaceful comic sport, 45

When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.

You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men 48

Could not prevail with all their oratory,

Yet hath a woman's kindness over-rul'd:

And therefore tell her I return great thanks,

And in submission will attend on her. 52

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will;

And I have heard it said, unbidden guests

Are often welcomest when they are gone. 56

Tal. Well then, alone,—since there's no remedy,—

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.

Come hither, captain. [Whispers.] You perceive my mind.

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;

And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right, 4
I shall as famous be by this exploit
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account: 8
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd, 12
By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad, 16
That with his name the mothers still their babes?

I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect, 20
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:

It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies. 24

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes. 28

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here. 32

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me, 36

For in my gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny, these many years 40
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan. 44

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond

To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am, indeed. 48

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see is but the smallest part 52
And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it. 56

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;

He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently. 60

He winds a horn. Drums strike up; a peal of ordnance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks, 64
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;

For I am sorry that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art. 72

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor miscon-ster

The mind of Talbot as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me; 76
Nor other satisfaction do I crave,
But only, with your patience, that we may Taste of your wine and see what cates you have;

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.
Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured 81

To feast so great a warrior in my house.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the EARLS OF SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VER-NON, and a Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud;
The garden here is more convenient. 4

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth,

Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it; 8

And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;
Between two blades, which bears the better temper; 13

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye;
I have perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment; 16

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbearance:

The truth appears so naked on my side, 20
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak, 25

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth, 28
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth, 32
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours, and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery

I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet. 36

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset:

And say withal I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more,

Till you conclude that he, upon whose side 40
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:

If I have fewest I subscribe in silence. 44

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side. 48

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,

Lest bleeding you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed, 52
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,

And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: who else?

Law. [To SOMERSET.] Unless my study and my books be false, 56

The argument you held was wrong in you,
In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here, in my scabbard; meditating that 60

Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Meantime, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet, 64

'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheeks Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet? 69

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses, 72

That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,

I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy. 76

Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away! good William de la Pole:

We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset: 82

His grandfather was Lionel, Duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward, King of England.
Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words 88

On any plot of ground in Christendom.
Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed in our late king's days?
And, by his treason stand'st not thou attained,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood; 94
And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attained;
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.
For your partaker Pole and you yourself, 100
I'll note you in my book of memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Look to it well and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee
still, 104
And know us by these colours for thy foes;
For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, 108
Will I for ever and my faction wear,
Until it wither with me to my grave
Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition: 112

And so farewell until I meet thee next. [Exit.
Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

Plan. How I am brav'd and must perforce endure it!

War. This blot that they object against your
house 116

Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament, Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;

And if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120
Meantime in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset and William Pole,
Will I upon thy party wear this rose.
And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day, 124
Grown to this faction in the Temple garden,
Shall send between the red rose and the white
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to
you, 128

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still would I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir. 132

Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair by two Gaolers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment; 4
And these gray locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent, 8

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening
grief,

And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground:
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb, 13

Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have. 16
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

First Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come:

We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber.
And answer was return'd that he will come. 20

Mor. Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied.
Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
Before whose glory I was great in arms, 24
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd,
Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.

But now the arbitrator of despairs, 28
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost. 32

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

First Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he
come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes. 36

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp:
O! tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. 40
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say of late thou wert de-spis'd?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;

And in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease. 44
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me;

Among which terms he us'd a lavish tongue
And did upbraid me with my father's death: 48
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.
Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet, 52
And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprisonment'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth 56
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. 60

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son, 64
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent:
During whose reign the Percies of the North,
Finding his usurpation most unjust, 68
Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this
Was, for that—young King Richard thus remov'd,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body— 72

I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son
To King Edward the Third; whereas he 76
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark: as, in this haughty great attempt
They labour'd to plant the rightful heir, 80
I lost my liberty, and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the Fifth
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd 84
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my sister that thy mother was,
Again in pity of my hard distress

Levied an army, weening to redeem 88

And have install'd me in the diadem;
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd. 92

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue have,

And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather: 96

But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me.

But yet methinks my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. 100

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic:
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And like a mountain, not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence, 104
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle! would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age. 108

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me,—as the slaughterer doth,

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill.—
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;

Only give order for my funeral: 112

And so farewell; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war!

[Dies.

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage, 116
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.

Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine let that rest.

Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself 120
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out the body of MORTIMER.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort:

And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries, 124
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,

I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament,

Either to be restored to my blood, 128
Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament House.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP of WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others. GLOUCESTER offers to put up a bill; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge, 4
Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I, with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience 8
Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able 12
Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride. 16
Thou art a most pernicious usurer,
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems
A man of thy profession and degree; 20
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life
As well at London Bridge as at the Tower.
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted, 24
The king, thy sov'reign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall reply. 28
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how haps it I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling? 32
And for dissension, who preferreth peace
More than I do, except I be provok'd?
No, my good lords, it is not that offends;
It is not that that hath incens'd the duke: 36
It is, because no one should sway but he;
No one but he should be about the king;
And that engenders thunder in his breast,
And makes him roar these accusations forth. 40
But he shall know I am as good—

Glo. As good! Thou bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another's throne? 44

Glo. Am I not protector, saucy priest?

Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
And useth it to patronage his theft. 48

Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo. Thou art reverent,
Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious,
And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler; 56

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that?
Is not his Grace protector to the king? 60

Plan. [Aside.] Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue,

Lest it be said, 'Speak, sirrah, when you should;
Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?' 64

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal,
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity. 68

O! what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye should jar.

Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell

Civil dissension is a viperous worm, 72

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

[A noise within: 'Down with the tawny coats!']

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the bishop's men.

[A noise again within: 'Stones! Stones!']

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pity the city of London, pity us! 77

The bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men,

Forbidden late to carry any weapon,

Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones, 80

And banding themselves in contrary parts

Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,

That many have their giddy brains knock'd
out:

Our windows are broke down in every street, 84
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Serving-men of GLOU-CESTER and WINCHESTER, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves,

To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the peace.—

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife. 88

First Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

Sec. Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again.]

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil, 92

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

- Third Serv.* My lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Just and upright, and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty; 96
And ere that will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight, 100
And have our bodies slaught'ed by thy foes.
- First Serv.* Ay, and the very parings of our nails
Shall pitch a field when we are dead.
[Skirmish again.]
Glo. Stay, stay, I say! 104
And, if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear a while.
- K. Hen.* O! how this discord doth afflict my soul!
Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent? 108
Who should be pitiful if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?
- War.* Yield, my Lord Protector; yield, Winchester; 112
Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity: 116
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.
- Win.* He shall submit or I will never yield.
- Glo.* Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
Or I would see his heart out ere the priest 120
Should ever get that privilege of me.
- War.* Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the duke
Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear: 124
Why look you still so stern and tragical?
- Glo.* Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.
- K. Hen.* Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,
That malice was a great and grievous sin; 128
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?
- War.* Sweet king! the bishop hath a kindly gird.
For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent! 132
What! shall a child instruct you what to do?
- Win.* Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;
Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.
Glo. [Aside.] Ay; but I fear me, with a hollow heart. 136
See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce,
- Betwixt ourselves and all our followers.
So help me God, as I dissemble not! 140
Win. [Aside.] So help me God, as I intend it not!
K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,
How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more; 144
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
- First Serv.* Content: I'll to the surgeon's.
Sec. Serv. And so will I.
Third Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.
[Exeunt Mayor, Serving-men, &c.]
War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign, 148
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.
- Glo.* Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for, sweet prince,
An if your Grace mark every circumstance, 152
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.
- K. Hen.* And those occasions, uncle, were of force: 156
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is That Richard be restored to his blood.
- War.* Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd. 160
Win. As will the rest, so willetth Winchester.
- K. Hen.* If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give
That doth belong unto the house of York, 164
From whence you spring by lineal descent.
- Plan.* Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service till the point of death.
- K. Hen.* Stoop then and set your knee against my foot; 168
And, in requerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York. 172
- Plan.* And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!
All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York! 176
- Som.* [Aside.] Perish, base prince, ignoble Duke of York!
Glo. Now, will it best avail your majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France.
The presence of a king engenders love 180
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.

K. Hen. When Gloucester says the word,
King Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes. 184
Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.
[Flourish. Exeunt all except EXETER.
Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in
France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers 188
Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester'd members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away, 192
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy
Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe; 196
That Henry born at Monmouth should win
all;
And Henry born at Windsor should lose all:
Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time. 200
[Exit.

SCENE II.—France. Before Roan.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, disguised, and Soldiers dressed like countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Joan. These are the city gates, the gates of Roan,
Through which our policy must make a breach:
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men 4
That come to gather money for their corn.
If we have entrance,—as I hope we shall,—
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends, 8
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

First Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,
And we be lords and rulers over Roan;
Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là? 13
Joan. Paisans, pauvres gens de France:

Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn.
Guard. [Opening the gates.] Enter, go in;
the market-bell is rung. 16

Joan. Now, Roan, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[JOAN LA PUCELLE, &c., enter the city.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy strata-gem!
And once again we'll sleep secure in Roan.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle and her practisans; 20
Now she is there how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in?
Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder
tower;
Which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning is, 24
No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE on a battlement, holding out a torch burning.

Joan. Behold! this is the happy wedding torch
That joineth Roan unto her countrymen, 27
But burning fatal to the Talbotites! [Exit.
Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend,
The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes! 32
Alen. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends;

Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' presently,
And then do execution on the watch.
[They enter the town.

Alarum. Enter TALBOT in an Excursion.
Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears, 36
If Talbot but survive thy treachery.
Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France. 40
[Exit.

*Alarum: Excursions. Enter from the town,
BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter
TALBOT and BURGUNDY, and the English
Forces. Then, enter on the walls, JOAN LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, the BASTARD OF OR-LEANS, ALENÇON, and Others.*

Joan. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast
Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'Twas full of darnel; do you like the taste? 44
Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtezan!

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine
own,
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your Grace may starve perhaps,
before that time. 48

Bed. O! let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!

Joan. What will you do, good grey-beard?
break a lance,

And run a tilt at death within a chair?

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, 52

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age

And twit with cowardice a man half dead?

Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again, 56

Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Joan. Are you so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[TALBOT and the rest consult together.

God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker? 60

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?

Joan. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate, 64

But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest;

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang! base mulesters of
France! 68

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Joan. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls;

For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks. 72

God be wi' you, my lord! we came but to tell
you

That we are here.

[Exeunt JOAN LA PUCELLE, &c., from the Walls.

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long,

Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame! 76

Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,—

Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,—

Either to get the town again, or die;

And I, as sure as English Henry lives, 80

And as his father here was conqueror,

As sure as in this late-betrayed town

Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried,

So sure I swear to get the town or die. 84

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord.

We will bestow you in some better place, 88

Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:

Here will I sit before the walls of Roan,

And will be partner of your weal or woe. 92

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to begone from hence; for once I read,
That stout Pendragon in his litter, sick,
Came to the field and vanquished his foes: 96
Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!
Then be it so: heavens keep old Bedford safe!
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, 101
But gather we our forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt all but BEDFORD and Attendants.

Alarum: Excursions; in one of which, enter SIR
JOHN FASTOLFE and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste? 104

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight:
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave Lord
Talbot?

Fast. Ay,
All the Talbots in the world, to save my life. 108

[Exit.
Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.

Retreat: Excursions. Re-enter, from the town,
JOAN LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, CHARLES, &c., and exeunt, flying.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when Heaven
please,

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.

What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They, that of late were daring with their scoffs

Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.
[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.

Alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY,
and Others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy: 116

Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy
Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects

Thy noble deeds as valour's monument. 120

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep.

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What! all amort? Roan hangs her head for
grief, 124

That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,

Placing therein some expert officers,

And then depart to Paris to the king; 128
 For there young Henry with his nobles lie.
Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.
Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
 The noble Duke of Bedford late deceas'd, 132
 But see his exequies fulfill'd in Roan:
 A braver soldier never couched lance,
 A gentler heart did never sway in court;
 But kings and mightiest potentates must die, 136
 For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Plains near Roan.

*Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS,
 ALENÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces.*

Joan. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
 Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered;
 Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
 For things that are not to be remedied. 4
 Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
 And like a peacock sweep along his tail;
 We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,
 If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd. 8

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
 And of thy cunning had no diffidence:
 One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
 And we will make thee famous through the
 world. 13

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place
 And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint:
 Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good. 16

Joan. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
 We will entice the Duke of Burgundy
 To leave the Talbot and to follow us. 20

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do
 that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors;
 Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
 But be extirp'd from our provinces. 24

Alen. For ever should they be expul's'd from
 France,

And not have title of an earldom here.

Joan. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end. 28

[Drums heard afar off.]

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
 Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
 And all the troops of English after him. 32

A French march. Enter the DUKE OF BUR-GUNDY and his Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and
 his:

Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.

Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[A parley.]

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy!

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy? 37

Joan. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What sayst thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. 40

Joan. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Joan. Look on thy country, look on fertile
 France, 44

And see the cities and the towns defac'd

By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.

As looks the mother on her lowly babe

When death doth close his tender dying eyes, 48

See, see the pining malady of France;

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
 Which thou thyself hast giv'n her woeful breast.

O! turn thy edged sword another way; 52

Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore:

Return thee therefore, with a flood of tears, 56

And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her
 words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Joan. Besides, all French and France ex-claims on thee, 60

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation
 That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France, 64

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,

Who then but English Henry will be lord,

And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?

Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof, 68

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe,

And was he not in England prisoner?

But when they heard he was thine enemy,

They set him free, without his ransom paid, 72

In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.

See then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen!

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-
men.

Come, come, return; return thou wand'ring
lord; 76

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished; these haughty words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees. 80

Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:

My forces and my power of men are yours.
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee. 84

Joan. Done like a Frenchman: turn, and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this, 88

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers:

And seek how we may prejudice the foe.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER; VERNON, BASSET, and Others. To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers,

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have a while giv'n truce unto my wars,

To do my duty to my sovereign: 4
In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd

To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,

Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,— 8
Lets fall his sword before your highness' feet,
[Kneels.]

And with submissive loyalty of heart,
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,

First to my God, and next unto your Grace. 12
K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle

Glooucester,
That hath so long been resident in France?

Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord! 16

When I was young,—as yet I am not old,—
I do remember how my father said,
A stouter champion never handled sword.

Long since we were resolved of your truth, 20
Your faithful service and your toil in war;

Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,

Because till now we never saw your face: 24
Therefore, stand up; and for these good deserts,

We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but VERNON and BASSET.]

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,

Disgracing of these colours that I wear 29
In honour of my noble Lord of York,

Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir: as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue 33

Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as
York. 36

Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that. [Strikes him.]

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such

That, whoso draws a sword, 'tis present death,
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest
blood. 40

But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong;

When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you; 44

And, after, meet you sooner than you would.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room of State.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and Others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name
the sixth.

Glo. Now, Governor of Paris, take your oath,— [Governor kneels.]

That you elect no other king but him, 4
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,

And none your foes but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his state:

This shall ye do, so help you righteous God! 8
[Exeunt Governor and his Train.]

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,

To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your Grace from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee! 13

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg;

[Plucking it off.

Which I have done, because unworthily 16
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong, 20
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away:

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside, 25
Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.

Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear 28
This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous
And ill beseming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain and a leader. 32

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,

Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars; 36
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.

He then that is not furnish'd in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight, 40
Profaning this most honourable order;

And should—if I were worthy to be judge—
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood. 44

K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom.

Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.

[Exit FASTOLFE.

And now, my Lord Protector, view the letter 48
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. [Viewing superscription.] What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?

No more, but plain and bluntly, To the King!
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign? 52

Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here? *I have, upon especial cause,
Mov'd with compassion of my country's wrack,
Together with the pitiful complaints* 57

*Of such as your oppression feeds upon,
Forsaken your pernicious faction,
And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of France.* 60

O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so,
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt? 64

Glo. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.

K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

K. Hen. Why then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him, 68

And give him chastisement for this abuse.
How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege! Yes: but that I am prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd. 72

K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still 76
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!

Bas. And me, my lord; grant me the combat too!

York. This is my servant: hear him, noble prince! 80

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favour him!

K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom? 84

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you. 88

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,

This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear;

Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves 92
 Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
 When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
 About a certain question in the law
 Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him; 96
 With other vile and ignominious terms.
 In confutation of which rude reproach,
 And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
 I crave the benefit of law of arms. 100

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
 For though he seem with forged quaint conceit,
 To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
 Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him; 104
 And he first took exceptions at this badge,
 Pronouncing, that the paleness of this flower
 Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left? 108

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men,

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause, 112
 Such factious emulations shall arise!

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
 Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight, 116

And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us
 alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it, then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somers-
 set. 120

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strifel

And perish ye, with your audacious prate! 124
 Presumptuous vassals! are you not asham'd,

With this immodest clamorous outrage
 To trouble and disturb the king and you?—

And you, my lords, methinks you do not well 128
 To bear with their perverse objections;

Much less to take occasion from their mouths
 To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves:

Let me persuade you take a better course. 132
Exe. It grieves his highness: good my lords,

be friends.
K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants.

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,
 Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause. 136

And you, my lords, remember where we are;
 In France, amongst a fickle wav'ring nation.

If they perceive dissension in our looks,

And that within ourselves we disagree, 140
 How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
 To wilful disobedience, and rebel!

Beside, what infamy will there arise,
 When foreign princes shall be certified 144

That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
 King Henry's peers and chief nobility

Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France!

O! think upon the conquest of my father, 148
 My tender years, and let us not forego

That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
 Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.

I see no reason, if I wear this rose, 152
 [Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
 I more incline to Somerset than York:

Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
 As well they may upbraid me with my crown,

Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.
 But your discretions better can persuade

Than I am able to instruct or teach:
 And therefore, as we hither came in peace, 160

So let us still continue peace and love.
 Cousin of York, we institute your Grace

To be our regent in these parts of France:
 And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite 164

Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot;
 And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,

Go cheerfully together and digest
 Your angry choler on your enemies. 168

Ourselves, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
 After some respite will return to Calais;

From thence to England; where I hope ere
 long

To be presented by your victories, 172
 With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but YORK, WARWICK,
EXETER, and VERNON.]

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the king
 Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
 In that he wears the badge of Somerset. 177

War. Tush! that was but his fancy, blame him not;

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.

York. An if I wist he did,—But let it rest;
 Other affairs must now be managed. 181

[Exeunt YORK, WARWICK, and VERNON.
Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;

For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
 I fear we should have seen decipher'd there 184

More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
 Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.

But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees

This jarring discord of nobility, 188
This shouldering of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands;
But more, when envy breeds unkind division:
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpet;
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry King of England; 4
And thus he would: Open your city gates,
Be humble to us, call my sov'reign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power; 8
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who in a moment even with the earth 12
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge! 16
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight: 20
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight; 24
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery 29
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit: 32
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'due thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour, 36
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,

Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul; 40
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c., from the Walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O! negligent and heedless discipline; 44
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then, in blood; 48
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay: 52
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's right,

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight! 56
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter YORK, with Forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and give it out,
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along, 5
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux. 8

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid, 12
And I am louted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier.
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France. 16

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.
To Bourdeaux, war-like duke! To Bourdeaux,
York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.

York. O God! that Somerset, who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury, make me weep
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O! send some succour to the distress'd lord.

York. He dies, we lose; I break my war-like word;

We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;

All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul;

And on his son young John, whom two hours since

I met in travel toward his war-like father.
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath
That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.

Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.
Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away,
'Long all of Somerset and his delay.

[Exit, with his Soldiers.

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglect doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce cold conqueror,
That ever living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth: Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all hurry to loss.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains in Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his Army; a Captain of TALBOT'S with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheeded, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Lord Talbot;

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.

Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:

Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your Grace exclaims;

Swearing that you withhold his levied host

Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:

I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he bear his life,
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight:

Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is ta'en or slain,

For fly he could not if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd
When sapless age, and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.

But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavowed danger: 8
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight: come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son? 12

And shall I fly? O! if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me:
The world will say he is not Talbot's blood 16
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly: 21

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast; 24
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
But mine it will that no exploit have done:
You fled for vantage everyone will swear; 28
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay
If the first hour I shrink and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality, 32
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it. 40

John. Yes, your renowned name: shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly. 44

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side 48
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide.

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son, 52

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die,
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarm: Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hummed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath: 4

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death.
John. O! twice my father, twice am I thy son:

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done,
Till with thy war-like sword, despite of fate, 8
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, 12
Quicken'd with youthful spleen and war-like rage,
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.

The ireful bastard Orleans,—that drew blood 16
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight,—I soon encountered
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace, 20
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy: 24

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care,
Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, 28
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead;
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O! too much folly is it, well I wot, 32
To hazard all our lives in one small boat.
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:
By me they nothing gain an if I stay; 36
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day.

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,

My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay; 40
All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
To save a paltry life and slay bright fame, 45

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and diel

And like me to the peasant boys of France, 48
To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son:

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot; 52
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side, 56

And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Old TALBOT, wounded, led by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone;—

O! where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.

When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,

And like a hungry lion did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience; 8

But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tendering my ruin and assail'd of none,

Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart
Suddenly made him from my side to start 12

Into the clust'ring battle of the French;
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench

His overmounting spirit; and there died
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride. 16

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of Young TALBOT.

Serv. O, my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!

Tal. Thou antick, death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, 20

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,

In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.

O! thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd death,

Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath; 24
Brave death by speaking whe'r he will or no;

Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,

Had death been French, then death had died to-day. 28

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms:
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.

Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. 32

[Dies.]

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in

We should have found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood, 35

Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Joan. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said:
'Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid:'

But with a proud majestic high scorn,
He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not born

To be the pillage of a glot wench.' 41
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,

He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.
Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble

knight; 44
See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms

Of the most bloody nurser of his harms.
Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones

asunder,
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, nol forbear; for that which we have fled 49

During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended: a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,

To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what submissive message art thou sent? 53

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word;

We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en,

And to survey the bodies of the dead. 57

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is.

But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. Where is the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury? 61
Created, for his rare success in arms, Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield, 64
Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,

The thrice-victorious Lord of Falconbridge;
Knight of the noble order of Saint George, 68
Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleece;
Great mareschal to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France?

Joan. Here is a silly stately style indeed! 72
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.

Him that thou magnifiest with all these titles,
Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet. 76

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?
O! were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd.
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces!
O! that I could but call these dead to life! 81
It were enough to fright the realm of France.
Were but his picture left among you here
It would amaze the proudest of you all. 84
Give me their bodies, that I may bear them
hence,

And give them burial as beseems their worth.
Joan. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them
here 89
They would but stink and putrefy the air.

Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence:
But from their ashes shall be rear'd 92
A phoenix that shall make all France afeard.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein:
All will be ours now bloody Talbot's slain. 96
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,

The emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac?

Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:
They humbly sue unto your excellence 4
To have a godly peace concluded of
Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means 8

To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stablish quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural 12
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity, 16

The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your Grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are young, 21

And fitter is my study and my books
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.
Yet call the ambassadors; and, as you please, 24
Go let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with WINCHESTER, now CARDINAL BEAUFORT, and habited accordingly.

Exe. [Aside.] What! is my Lord of Winchester install'd, 28

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then, I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,—
'If once he come to be a cardinal, 32
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown.'

K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd, and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable; 36
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France. 40

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his highness so at large,
As,—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower,— 44
He doth intend she shall be England's queen.

K. Hen. [To the Ambassador.] In argument and proof of which contract,

Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded, 48
And safely brought to Dover; where inshipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt KING HENRY and Train; GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Ambassadors.]

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised 52
Should be deliver'd to his holiness

For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. [Aside.] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow, 56

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.

Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive

That neither in birth or for authority

The bishop will be overborne by thee: 60

I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,

Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lord, may cheer our drooping spirits;

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt,

And turn again unto the war-like French.

Alen. Then, march to Paris, royal Charles of France, 4

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Joan. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;

Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general, 8
And happiness to his accomplices!

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one, 12
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is:

But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there: 16

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Joan. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine;

Let Henry fret and all the world repine. 20

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—France. Before Angiers.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Joan. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts;

And ye choice spirits that admonish me

And give me signs of future accidents: 4

[Thunder.]

You speedy helpers, that are substitutes

Under the lordly monarch of the north,

Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof

Of your accustom'd diligence to me. 9

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd

Out of the powerful regions under earth,

Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They walk, and speak not.]

O! hold me not with silence over-long. 13

Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,

I'll lop a member off and give it you,

In earnest of a further benefit, 16

So you do condescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice 20

Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?

Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,

Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.]

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come, 24

That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest,

And let her head fall into England's lap.

My ancient incantations are too weak,

And hell too strong for me to buckle with: 28

Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.]

Alarum. Enter French and English fighting:

JOAN LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand: JOAN LA PUCELLE is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast:

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,

And try if they can gain your liberty. 32

A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!

See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,

As if with Circe she would change my shape.

Joan. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be. 36

York. O! Charles the Dauphin is a proper man;

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Joan. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!
And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd 40
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!
York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!
Joan. I prithee, give me leave to curse a while.
York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
[Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty! do not fear nor fly,
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, 48
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
What art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a
king,

The King of Naples, whosoe'er thou art. 52

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle.

Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, 56

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings.

Yet if this servile usage once offend,

Go and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.]

O stay! I have no power to let her pass; 60

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,

Twinkling another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. 64

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:

I'll call for pen and ink and write my mind.

Fie, De la Pole! disable not thyself;

Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner? 68

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be
so,— 72

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. [Aside.] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,

Before thou make a trial of her love? 76

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. [Aside.] She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd,

She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea or no?

Suf. [Aside.] Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife; 81

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. [Aside.] There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card. 84

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. [Aside.] And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. [Aside.] I'll win this Lady Margaret.
For whom? 88

Why, for my king; tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. [Overhearing him.] He talks of wood:
it is some carpenter.

Suf. [Aside.] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these realms. 92
But there remains a scruple in that too;

For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match. 96

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. [Aside.] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:

Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.

Madam, I have a secret to reveal. 100

Mar. [Aside.] What though I be enthralld?
he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. [Aside.] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French; 104

And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush, women have been captive ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so? 108

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose

Your bondage happy to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile
Than is a slave in base servility; 113

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto
me? 116

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love. 120

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife
And have no portion in the choice myself. 124
How say you, madam, are you so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth!

And, madam, at your father's castle walls 128
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.]

A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the Walls.

Suf. See, Reignier, see thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier, and unapt to weep, 132
Or to exclaim on Fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent, and for thy honour, give consent,
Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king, 136
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;
And this her easy-held imprisonment
Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows 140

That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend
To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming. 144

Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories:

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king. 148

What answer makes your Grace unto my suit?

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord,
Upon condition I may quietly 152

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her; 156
And those two counties I will undertake
Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king, 160

Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king:

[Aside.] And yet, methinks, I could be well content 164

To be mine own attorney in this case.

I'll over then, to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
So farewell, Reignier: set this diamond safe, 168
In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers 172

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! but hark you,
Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, say to him. 177

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But madam, I must trouble you again,

No loving token to his majesty? 180

Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unspotted heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.]

Mar. That for thyself: I will not so presume,
To send such peevish tokens to a king. 185

[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.]

Suf. O! wert thou for myself! But Suffolk, stay;

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk. 188

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount

And natural graces that extinguish art;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas, 192

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Camp of the DUKE OF YORK, in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, guarded; and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright.

Have I sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out, 4
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?

Ah, Joan! sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee.

Joan. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!

I am descended of a gentler blood: 8
 Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you, 'tis not so;
 I did beget her all the parish knows:
 Her mother liveth yet, can testify 12
 She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.
War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parent-age?
York. This argues what her kind of life hath been:
 Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes. 16
Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!
 God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh;
 And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
 Deny me not, I prithe thee, gentle Joan. 20
Joan. Peasant, avaunt! You have suborn'd
 this man,
 Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
 The morn that I was wedded to her mother. 24
 Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
 Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
 Of thy nativity! I would the milk
 Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast, 28
 Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!
 Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field
 I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
 Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab? 32
 O! burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.
 [Exit.
York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too
 long,
 To fill the world with vicious qualities.
Joan. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd: 36
 Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
 But issu'd from the progeny of kings;
 Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
 By inspiration of celestial grace, 40
 To work exceeding miracles on earth.
 I never had to do with wicked spirits:
 But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
 Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, 44
 Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
 Because you want the grace that others have,
 You judge it straight a thing impossible
 To compass wonders but by help of devils. 48
 No misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
 A virgin from her tender infancy,
 Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
 Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd, 52
 Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.
York. Ay, ay: away with her to execution!
War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,

Spare for no fagots, let there be enow: 56
 Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
 That so her torture may be shortened.
Joan. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
 Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity; 60
 That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.
 I am with child, ye bloody homicides:
 Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
 Although ye hale me to a violent death. 64
York. Now, heaven forefend! the holy maid with child!
War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought!
 Is all your strict preciseness come to this?
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling: 68
 I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well, go to; we will have no bastards live;
 Especially since Charles must father it.
Joan. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his: 72
 It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.
York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!
 It dies an if it had a thousand lives.
Joan. O! give me leave, I have deluded you:
 'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd,
 But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd.
War. A married man: that's most intolerable.
York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well, 80
 There were so many, whom she may accuse.
War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.
York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.
 Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee:
 Use no entreaty, for it is in vain. 85
Joan. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:
 May never glorious sun reflex his beams
 Upon the country where you make abode; 88
 But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
 Environ you, till mischief and despair Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves! [Exit, guarded.
York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes, 92
 Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.
Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
 With letters of commission from the king.
 For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
 Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
 Have earnestly implor'd a general peace 98
 Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;

And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter. 101

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, 104
That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns, 108
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered?

O! Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France. 112

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a
peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENÇON, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed, 116
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes 120

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That, in regard King Henry gives consent, 124
Of mere compassion and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,
You shall become true liegemen to his crown:
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity. 132

Alen. Must he be then, as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man? 136
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king: 140
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep 144
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret
means

Us'd intercession to obtain a league, 148
And now the matter grows to compromise,

Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king 152
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract: 156
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. [Aside to CHARLES.] To say the truth,
it is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre 160
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How sayst thou, Charles? shall our condition stand? 165

Char. It shall;
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison. 168

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.

[CHARLES, &c., give tokens of fealty.
So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK; GLOUCESTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart: 4
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive 8
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good lord, this superficial tale

Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely dame— 12
Had I sufficient skill to utter them—
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:

And, which is more, she is not so divine, 16
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents, 20
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.
 Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent
 That Margaret may be England's royal queen.
Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin. 25
 You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
 Unto another lady of esteem;
 How shall we then dispense with that contract,
 And not deface your honour with reproach? 29
Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths;
 Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
 To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists 32
 By reason of his adversary's odds.
 A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
 And therefore may be broke without offence.
Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? 36
 Her father is no better than an earl,
 Although in glorious titles he excel.
Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
 The King of Naples and Jerusalem; 40
 And of such great authority in France
 As his alliance will confirm our peace,
 And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.
Glo. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do, 44
 Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.
Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower,
 Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.
Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your
 king, 48
 That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
 To choose for wealth and not for perfect love.
 Henry is able to enrich his queen,
 And not to seek a queen to make him rich: 52
 So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
 As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
 Marriage is a matter of more worth
 Than to be dealt in by attorneyship: 56
 Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
 Must be companion of his nuptial bed;
 And therefore, lords, since he affects her most
 It most of all these reasons bindeth us, 60
 In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
 For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
 An age of discord and continual strife?
 Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, 64
 And is a pattern of celestial peace.
 Whom should we match with Henry, being a
 king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
 Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, 68
 Approves her fit for none but for a king:
 Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit—
 More than in women commonly is seen—
 Will answer our hope in issue of a king; 72
 For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
 Is likely to beget more conquerors,
 If with a lady of so high resolve
 As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love. 76
 Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with
 me
 That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.
K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
 My noble lord of Suffolk, or for that 80
 My tender youth was never yet attain'd
 With any passion of inflaming love,
 I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,
 I feel such sharp dissension in my breast, 84
 Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
 As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
 Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to
 France;
 Agree to any covenants, and procure 88
 That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
 To cross the seas to England and be crown'd
 King Henry's faithful and anointed queen:
 For your expenses and sufficient charge, 92
 Among the people gather up a tenth.
 Be gone, I say; for till you do return
 I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.
 And you, good uncle, banish all offence: 96
 If you do censure me by what you were,
 Not what you are, I know it will excuse
 This sudden execution of my will.
 And so, conduct me, where, from company 100
 I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.
Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EXETER.
Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,
 As did the youthful Paris once to Greece; 104
 With hope to find the like event in love,
 But prosper better than the Trojan did.
 Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the
 king;
 But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. 108
 [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then hautboys. Enter, on one side, KING HENRY, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT; on the other, QUEEN MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace; 4
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Britaine, and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops, 8
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:

And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen 12
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd. 16
K. Hen. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen Margaret:

I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss. O Lord! that lends me
life,

Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness! 20
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great King of England and my gracious lord, 24
The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams,

In courtly company, or at my beads,
With you, mine alderliest sovereign, 28
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish, but her grace in speech, 32

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.

Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my
love. 36

All. Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness!

O. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your
Grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace 40
Between our sovereign and the French King Charles,

For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William De la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father.— [Lets the paper fall.

K. Hen. Uncle, how now!

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
further. 56

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.

K. Hen. They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down: 64

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
We here discharge your Grace from being regent

I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen months 68

Be full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favour done, 72
In entertainment to my princely queen.

Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, 76

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.

What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars? 80
Did he so often lodge in open field,

In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?

And did my brother Bedford toil his wits, 84
To keep by policy what Henry got?

Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself, 89
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house

Early and late, debating to and fro 92
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?

And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?

And shall these labours and these honours die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance, 97

Your deeds of war and all our counsel die?
O peers of England! shameful is this league,

Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, 100
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,

Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been. 104

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle; we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should. 109

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine

Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse. 113

Sal. Now, by the death of him who died for
all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy. 115
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,

My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes
no tears. 119

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu! 124

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,
That dims the honour of this war-like isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart
Before I would have yielded to this league. 128
I never read but England's kings have had Largesums of gold and dowries with their wives;
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages. 132
Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France, 136
Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now you grow too hot:

It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind: 140

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury. If I longer stay 144
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied France will be lost ere long. [Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy, 149
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.

Consider lords, he is the next of blood, 152
And heir apparent to the English crown:
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it. 156
Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him, 'Humphrey, the good Duke of
Gloucester;' 160
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice,
'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'
With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, 164
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?
Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, 168
And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk, We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride 173

And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal:
His insolence is more intolerable 176
Than all the princes in the land beside:
If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector,

Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal. 180
[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.]

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester,
Did bear him like a noble gentleman. 185

Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal
More like a soldier than a man o' the church,
As stout and proud as he were lord of all, 188
Swear like a ruffian and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,
Have won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey:

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline, 196

Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people.

Join we together for the public good, 200
In what we can to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,

With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's
deeds, 204

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the
land,

And common profit of his country!

York. [Aside.] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause. 208

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost!

That Maine which by main force Warwick did win,

And would have kept so long as breath did last:
Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine, 213

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt WARWICK and SALISBURY.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy 216

Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles,

The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter. 220

I cannot blame them all: what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtézans,
Still revelling like lords till all be gone; 225
While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shar'd and all is borne away, 229
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own:
So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue
While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.
Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland 233

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althæa burn'd
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. 236
Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!
Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come when York shall claim his own;
And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts 241
And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit. 244
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right.
Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:
Watch thou and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state;
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, 252
With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd, 256
And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the
crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S House.

Enter GLOUCESTER and his DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd
corn

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world? 4
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem
Enchas'd with all the honours of the world? 8
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:
What! is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine; 12

And having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground. 16
Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy
lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world! 21
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream. 24
Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand 28
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset,

And William De la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk.
This was my dream: what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. Tut! this was nothing but an argument 32

That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought I sat in seat of majesty 36
In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are
crown'd;

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to
me,
And on my head did set the diadem. 40

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out-
right:

Presumptuous dame! ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, belov'd of him? 44
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,

To tumble down thy husband and thyself 48
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric

With Eleanor, for telling but her dream? 52
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure 56

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's, Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with
us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently. 60

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Messenger.]

Follow I must; I cannot go before,
While Gloucester bears this base and humble
mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks
And smooth my way upon their headless necks;
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortune's pageant.

Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not,
man, 68

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What sayst thou? majesty! I am but
Grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice, 72

Your Grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What sayst thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer? 76
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions 80
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough: I'll think upon the questions.

When from Saint Alban's we do make return
We'll see these things effected to the full. 84
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;

Marry and shall. But how now, Sir John
Hume! 88

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum:

The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil. 92

Yet have I gold flies from another coast:

I dare not say from the rich cardinal

And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;

Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain, 96
They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the duchess

And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say, 'A crafty knave does need no broker;'
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker. 101

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last 104
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wrack,

And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall.

Sort how it will I shall have gold for all. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Ar-mourer's man, being one.

First Pet. My masters, let's stand close: my Lord Protector will come this way by and by,
and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill. 4

Sec. Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET.

First Pet. Here a' comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure. 8

Sec. Pet. Come back, fool! this is the Duke of Suffolk and not my Lord Protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst anything
with me? 12

First Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me: I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Q. Mar. [Glancing at the Superscriptions.]
To my Lord Protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?

First Pet. Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, my wife and all, from me. 21

Suf. Thy wife tool that is some wrong indeed.
What's yours? What's here? Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford! How now, sir knave! 25

Sec. Pet. Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What sayst thou? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown? 32

Pet. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said that he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? 36

Enter Servants.

Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exeunt Servants with PETER.]

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected 40

Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions.]

Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. 44

[Exeunt Petitioners.]

Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion of the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king? 48

What! shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke? 52

I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought King Henry had resembled thee 56

In courage, courtship, and proportion:

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads;

His champions are the prophets and apostles;

His weapons holy saws of sacred writ; 61

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.

I would the college of the cardinals 64

Would choose him pope, and carry him to

Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head:

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient; as I was cause 68

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your Grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham, 72

And grumbling York; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all Cannot do more in England than the Nevils: 76

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife: She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, 80

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the queen:

She bears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our poverty. 84

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

Contemptuous base-born callot as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day

The very train of her worst wearing gown 88

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds 92

That she will light to listen to the lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;

For I am bold to counsel you in this. 96

Although we fancy not the cardinal,

Yet must we join with him and with the lords

Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late complaint 100

Will make but little for his benefit:

So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,

And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a sennet. Enter KING HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET; DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which; 104

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place, Let York be regent; I will yield to him. 109

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak. 112

War The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all. Sal. Peace, son! and show some reason, Buckingham, 116

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself To give his censure: these are no women's matters. 120

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm; And at his pleasure will resign my place. 124

Suf. Resign it then and leave thine insolence. Since thou wert king,—as who is king but thou?—The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack; The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas; And all the peers and nobles of the realm 129 Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions. 132

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution Upon offenders hath exceeded law, 136

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great, Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOUCESTER. The QUEEN drops her fan.

Give me my fan: what, minion! can ye not?

[Giving the DUCHESS a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, madam, was it you?

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-woman:

Could I come near your beauty with my nails I'd set my ten commandments in your face. 145

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to't .in time;

She'll hamper thee and dandle thee like a baby: Though in this place most master wear no breeches, 149

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveng'd. [Exit.

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor, And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:

She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs, She'll gallop far enough to her destruction.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown With walking once about the quadrangle, 156 I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections, Prove them, and I lie open to the law: But God in mercy so deal with my soul 160

As I in duty love my king and country! But to the matter that we have in hand.

I say, my sov'reign, York is meetest man To be your regent in the realm of France. 164

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave To show some reason, of no little force, That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet: 168

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride; Next, if I be appointed for the place,

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here, Without discharge, money, or furniture, 172

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands. Last time I danc'd attendance on his will Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact Did never traitor in the land commit. 177

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNER and PETER.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason: 180

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man That doth accuse his master of high treason. 185

His words were these: that Richard, Duke of York,

Was rightful heir unto the English crown, And that your majesty was a usurper. 188

K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain. 192

Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.

I do beseech your royal majesty 198
Let him have all the rigour of the law.

Hor. Alas! my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this: therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge. 208
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place; 212
For he hath witness of his servant's malice.
This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

K. Hen. Then be it so. My Lord of Somerset, We make your Grace lord regent o'er the French. 216

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pel. Alas! my lord, I cannot fight: for God's sake, pity my case! the spite of man prevaileth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd. 224

K. Hen. Away with them to prison; and the day

Of combat shall be the last of the next month. Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. The DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S Garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided. Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms? 5

Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter DUCHESS aloft, HUME following.

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all. 16

To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,

The time of night when Troy was set on fire; 20
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,

And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,

That time best fits the work we have in hand. Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise We will make fast within a hallow'd verge. 25

[Here they perform the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; BOLINGBROKE, or SOUTHWELL reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath!

By the eternal God, whose name and power 28
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!

Boling. First, of the king: what shall of him become? 32

Spir. The Duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, SOUTHWELL writes the answers.]

Boling. What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset? 37

Spir. Let him shun castles:

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand. 40

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!

False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their Guards, and Others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash. 44

Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE I.—St. Alban's.

uncle, would 'twere come to that!

Car. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Marry, when thou dar'st.

Glo. [Aside to the CARDINAL.] Make up no factious numbers for the matter;
In thine own person answer thy abuse. 40

Car. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st, This evening on the east side of the grove.

K. Hen. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester, Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, We had had more sport. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Come with thy two-hand sword. 45

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are you advis'd? [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] the east side of the grove.

Glo. [Aside to the CARDINAL.] Cardinal, I am with you. 48

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester!

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.—

[Aside to the CARDINAL.] Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown
For this, or all my fence shall fail. 52

Car. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Mediceteipsum; Protector, see to't well, protect yourself.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart! 56

When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter One, crying, 'A Miracle.'

Glo. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim? 60

One. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,
Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight; 64
A man that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd, that to believing souls
Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and his Brethren, and SIMPCOX, borne between two persons in a chair; his Wife and a great multitude following.

Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession,
To present your highness with the man. 69

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters; bring him near the king: 72

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
That we for thee may glorify the Lord.
What! hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd? 76

Simp. Born blind, an't please your Grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship. 80

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee: 84

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance, 88

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd
A hundred times and oft'ner in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban; who said, 'Simpcox, come;
Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.'
Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft 93

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What! art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree. 96

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O! born so, master.

Glo. What! and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear. 100

Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas! master, my wife desir'd some damsons,
And made me climb with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.
Let me see thine eyes: wink now: now open them: 105

In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Sayst thou me so? What colour is this cloak of? 108

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of? 112

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns before this day a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name? 116

Simp. Alas! master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his? 120

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunder Simpecox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lyingest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think that cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O, master, that you could! 133

Glo. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beadles in your town, and things called whips? 136

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.]

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.

Simp. Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone: 144

You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool. 148

Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand. 152

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away: and the people follow and cry, 'A miracle!']

K. Hen. O God! seest thou this, and bear'st so long?

Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run. Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas! sir, we did it for pure need. 156

Glo. Let them be whipp'd through every market town

Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came. [Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.]

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away. 160

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I; You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold. 164

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife, The ringleader and head of all this rout, 168 Have practis'd dangerously against your state, Dealing with witches and with conjurers: Whom we have apprehended in the fact; Raising up wicked spirits from under-ground, Demanding of King Henry's life and death, 173 And other of your highness' privy council, As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Car. And so, my Lord Protector, by this means Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. 177 This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour. Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart: 180

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers; And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee, Or to the meanest groom.

K. Hen. O God! what mischiefs work the wicked ones, 184 Whence confusion on their own heads thereby.

Q. Mar. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest;

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal, How I have lov'd my king and commonweal; 189 And, for my wife, I know not how it stands. Sorry I am to hear what I have heard:

Noble she is, but if she have forgot 192 Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such

As, like to pitch, defile nobility, I banish her my bed and company, And give her, as a prey, to law and shame, 196 That hath dishonour'd Gloucester's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night we will repose us here:
To-morrow toward London back again,
To look into this business thoroughly, 200
And call these foul offenders to their answers;
And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,
Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. The DUKE OF YORK'S Garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk to satisfy myself,
In craving your opinion of my title, 4
Which is infallible to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good,
The Nevils are thy subjects to command. 8

York. Then thus:

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom 13
Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;
The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of
York;

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester; 16

William of Windsor was the seventh and last.
Edward the Black Prince died before his father,
And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as
king; 20

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king, 24 Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,

And him to Pomfret; where as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown. 29

York. Which now they hold by force and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd. 32

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue, Philippe a daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March:
Edmund had issue Roger, Earl of March: 37
Roger had issue Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Boling-broke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown; 40
And but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown, 44 Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge, who was son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth
son.

By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir
To Roger, Earl of March; who was the son 48
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe,
Sole daughter unto Lionel, Duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the eldest son

Succeed before the younger, I am king. 52

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,

The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign: 56
It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.

Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together,
And in this private plot be we the first 60
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York. We thank you, lords! But I am not your king 64

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy. 68

Do you as I do in these dangerous days,
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham and all the crew of them, 72
Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey:
'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy. 76

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of
Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, 80

Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England but the king.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. 4
You four, from hence to prison back again;
From thence, unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows. 9
You, madam, for you are more nobly born, 9
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment, 12
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee:

I cannot justify whom the law condemns.— 16

[Exeunt the DUCHESS, and the other Prisoners, guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey! this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go; 20
Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester: ere thou go,

Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself
Protector be; and God shall be my hope, 24
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet.
And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years 28

Should be to be protected like a child.
God and King Henry govern England's helm!
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff! here, noble Henry, is my staff: 32

As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it
As others would ambitiously receive it. 36

Farewell, good king! when I am dead and gone,

May honourable peace attend thy throne.

[Exit.]

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;

And Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, scarce himself, 40

That bears so shrewd a maim: two pulls at once;

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honour raught: there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand. 44

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go. Please it your majesty

This is the day appointed for the combat; 48

And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore 52

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them end it; and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, 56
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: on the other side, PETER, with a drum and a sand-bag; and Prentices drinking to him.

First Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack: and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 61

Sec. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter! 68

First Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

Sec. Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices. 72

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already. 80

Sal. Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more? 84

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen; and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow! 94

York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and PETER strikes down his Master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way. 100

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight; 104

For by his death we do perceive his guilt:

And God in justice hath reveal'd to us

The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,

Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. 108

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Sound a flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter GLOUCESTER and Serving-men, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds

Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold: So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. 4

Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess: Uneath may she endure the flinty streets, 8 To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.

Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook The abject people, gazing on thy face With envious looks still laughing at thy shame, That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels 13 When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries. 16

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, with papers pinned upon her back, in a white sheet, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; lether pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look! how they gaze. 20

See! how the giddy multitude do point, And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks,

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame, 24 And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine!

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ay, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself;

For whilst I think I am thy wedded wife, 28 And thou a prince, protector of this land,

Methinks I should not thus be led along, Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back,

And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice 32 To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet, And when I start, the envious people laugh,

And bid me be advised how I tread. 36

Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this shameful yoke? Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,

Or count them happy that enjoy the sun? No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;

To think upon my pomp shall be my hell. 41

Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife;

And he a prince and ruler of the land: Yet so he rul'd and such a prince he was 44

As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess, Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock

To every idle rascal follower. But be thou mild and blush not at my shame;

Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death 49 Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will; For Suffolk, he that can do all in all With her that hateth thee, and hates us all, 52

And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings;
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee:

But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd, 56
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell! forbear: thou aimest all awry;
I must offend before I be attained;
And had I twenty times so many foes, 60
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scath,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach? 64

Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience; 68
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month. 72

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before!

This is close dealing. Well, I will be there. 74
[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave: and, master sheriff,
Let not her penance exceed the king's commission. 76

Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays;

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here? 80

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray
You use her well. The world may laugh again;

And I may live to do you kindness if 84
You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell.

Duch. What! gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.
[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Serving-men.]

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee! 88

For none abides with me: my joy is death;
Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
Because I wish'd this world's eternity.
Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence; 92
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man;

There to be us'd according to your state. 96

Duch. That's bad enough; for I am but reproach:

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady:

According to that state you shall be us'd. 100

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged. 104

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet: 108

No; it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury St. Edmund's.

Sound a sennet. Enter to the Parliament, KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others.

K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come:

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will ye not observe 4

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?

With what a majesty he bears himself,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself? 8

We know the time since he was mild and affable,
An if we did but glance a far-off look,

Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admir'd him for submission:

But meet him now, and, be it in the morn, 13
When everyone will give the time of day,

He knits his brow and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, 16

Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the lion roars;

And Humphrey is no little man in England. 20
First note that he is near you in descent,

And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
 Me seemeth then it is no policy,
 Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, 24
 And his advantage following your decease,
 That he should come about your royal person
 Or be admitted to your highness' council.
 By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts, 28
 And when he please to make commotion,
 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now and they'll o'ergrow the garden, 32

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
 The reverent care I bear unto my lord
 Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
 If it be fond, call it a woman's fear; 36
 Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
 I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke.
 My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
 Reprove my allegation if you can 40
 Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;

And had I first been put to speak my mind,
 I think I should have told your Grace's tale. 44
 The duchess, by his subornation,
 Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
 Or if he were not privy to those faults,
 Yet, by reputed of his high descent, 48
 As, next the king he was successive heir,
 And such high vaunts of his nobility,
 Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
 By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall. 52
 Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
 And in his simple show he harbours treason.
 The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb:

No, no, my sov'reign; Gloucester is a man 56
 Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
 Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
 Levy great sums of money through the realm
 For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
 By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown, 64

Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: the care you have of us,

To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
 Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience, 68

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
 From meaning treason to our royal person,

As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove.
 The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given 72
 To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
 For he's disposed as the hateful raven: 76
 Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
 For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.
 Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
 Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all 80
 Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
 Is utterly bereft you; all is lost. 85

K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done!

York. [Aside.] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,

As firmly as I hope for fertile England. 88

Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
 And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
 But I will remedy this gear ere long,
 Or sell my title for a glorious grave. 92

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
 Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon,

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art: 96
 I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk's duke, thou shalt not see me blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
 A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 100

The purest spring is not so free from mud
 As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France, 104

And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
 By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay, 108
 Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,
 Ay, night by night, in studying good for England,

That do it that e'er I wrested from the king, 112
 Or any great I hoarded to my use,

Be brought against me at my trial-day!
 No; many a pound of mine own proper store,

Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I disbursed to the garrisons, 117
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God! 120

York. In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was protector, 124

Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer, 128
Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon or what trespass else. 132

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd:

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name; 136
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspect: 140
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah! gracious lord, these days are dangerous.

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand; 144
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil'd your highness' land.

I know their complot is to have my life;
And if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny, 149
I would expend it with all willingness;

But mine is made the prologue to their play;
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy. 153
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart; 157
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accuse doth level at my life: 160

And you, my sov'reign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My liefest liege to be mine enemy. 164

Ay, all of you have laid your heads together;
Myself had notice of your conventicles;
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt; 169
The ancient proverb will be well effected:
'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.'

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable. 172
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitor's rage
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech, 176
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here

With ignominious words, though clerkly couch'd,
As if she had suborned some to swear 180
False allegations to o'erthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Glo. Far truer spoke than meant: I lose, indeed;

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day.

Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure. 188

Glo. Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body:
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first. 192

Ah! that my fear were false, ah! that it were;
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants with GLOUCESTER.]

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best

Do or undo, as if ourself were here. 196

Q. Mar. What! will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
My body round engirt with misery, 200
For what's more miserable than discontent?

Ah! uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come
That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
What low'ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life? 208
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man

wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house, 212
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence;
And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;
Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case,
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good;
So mighty are his vowed enemies. 220
His fortunes I will weep; and, 'twixt each groan, Say 'Who's a traitor, Gloucester he is none.'

[Exit.

Q. Mar. Fair lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs, 224
Too full of foolish pity; and Gloucester's show
Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank, 228
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child

That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,—
And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,— 232
This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
And yet we want a colour for his death. 236
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But in my mind that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life;
The commons haply rise to save his life; 240
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy
death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah! York, no man alive so fain as I. 244

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.

But my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were't not all one an empty eagle were set 248
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true: and were't not madness, then, 252

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over

Because his purpose is not executed. 256
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quilllets how to slay him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit 264
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.
Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often spoke and seldom meant;
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word and I will be his priest. 272

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner; 276
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.
York. And I: and now we three have spoke
it, 280
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come
again,
To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword. 284
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient
stop! 288

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither.

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France. 292

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so
long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast
done: 296

I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin: 300
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.
No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still:
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,
Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What! worse than nought? nay, then a shame take all.

Som. And in the number thee, that wishest shame. 308

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men, 312
Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent, 316
And what we do establish he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content: provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. 320

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more. 324
And so break off; the day is almost spent.

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers; 328
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.
[Exeunt all except YORK.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,

And change misdoubt to resolution: 332
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art
Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoying.
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart. 336
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. 340
Well, nobles, well; 'tis politicly done,
To send me packing with a host of men:
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts. 344

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:
I take it kindly; yet be well assur'd

You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, 348
I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head, 352
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman, 356
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade 360
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine:
And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen 364
Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy, 368
And undiscover'd come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanies.

This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, 372
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble;
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured, 376
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms.
Say that he thrive,—as 'tis great like he will,—
Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength, 380

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Bury St. Edmund's. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

First Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know

We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded.

Sec. Mur. O! that it were to do. What have we done?

Didst ever hear a man so penitent? 4

Enter SUFFOLK.

First Mur. Here comes my lord.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing?

First Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house; 8
I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the bed? is all things well,
According as I gave directions? 12

First Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers.]

Sound trumpets. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight;

Say, we intend to try his Grace to-day, 16
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord.

[Exit.]

K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all,

Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester
Than from true evidence, of good esteem, 21
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail

That faultless may condemn a nobleman! 24
Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk? 28

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forfend!

Car. God's secret judgment: I did dream tonight

The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The KING swoons.]

Q. Mar. How fares my lord? Help, lords! the king is dead. 33

Som. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help! O Henry, ope thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again. Madam, be patient. 36

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, comfort!

K. Hen. What! doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note, 40

Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers,
And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound? 44
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words:
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say:
Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight! 48
Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:

Yet do not go away; come, basilisk, 52
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;
For in the shade of death I shall find joy,
In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus? 56

Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death:
And for myself, foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans 60
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,

And all to have the noble duke alive. 64
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow friends:
It may be judg'd I made the duke away:

So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded, 68

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.
This get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy!
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah! woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man. 72

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What! dost thou turn away and hide thy face?

I am no loathsome leper; look on me.
What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf? 76
Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?

Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:
Erect his statua and worship it, 80
And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this nigh wrack'd upon the sea,
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime? 84
What boded this, but well forewarning wind
Did seem to say, 'Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?'

What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts 88

And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves;
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
Yet Æolus would not be a murderer, 92
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkind-
ness: 96

The splitting rocks cower'd in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret. 100
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from thy shore the tempest beat us
back,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm,
And when the dusky sky began to rob 104
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
And threw it towards thy land: the sea receiv'd
it, 108

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart:
And even with this I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles 112
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue—
The agent of thy foul inconstancy—
To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did 116
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy!
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?

Ay me! I can no more. Die, Margaret! 120
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALIS-BURY.

The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey trait'rously is murder'd
By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees 125
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny, 128
Until they hear the order of his death.

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick,
'tis too true;
But how he died God knows, not Henry.
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,

And comment then upon his sudden death. 133
War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude till I return.

[WARWICK goes into an inner chamber.
SALISBURY retires.

K. Hen. O! Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts, 136
My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's
life.

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
For judgment only doth belong to thee. 140
Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
To tell my love unto his deaf dumb trunk, 144
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean obsequies,
And to survey his dead and earthly image
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Re-enter WARWICK and Others bearing
GLOUCESTER'S body on a bed.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body. 149

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made;

For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
For seeing him I see my life in death. 152

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon
him

To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid 156
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, 161
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death, 164
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black and full of blood, 168
His eyeballs further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man;
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling:

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.
Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here; 177
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection; 180
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes,

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy. 185

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noble-men

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh, 188

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead, 192
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men; 197
But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,

That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, and Others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit, 204

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf 208
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed 212
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,

And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee, 216

And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sov'reign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murd'rous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech, 221
And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st;
That thou thyself wast born in bastardy:
And after all this fearful homage done, 224
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.
War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence: 229

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost.
[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK.]

K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted! 232

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

Q. Mar. What noise is this? [A noise within.]

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn 237
Here in our presence! dare you be so bold?
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury, 240
Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Noise of a crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. [Speaking to those within.] Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.
Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories, 245
They will by violence tear him from your palace
And torture him with grievous lingering death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died;
They say, in him they fear your highness' death;
And mere instinct of love and loyalty,
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking, 252
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest 256

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty, 260
It were but necessary you were wak'd,
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, wher you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving unce, twenty times his worth, 268
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my Lord of Salisbury!

Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign; 272
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won
Is that he was the lord ambassador, 276
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we will all break in!

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,

I thank them for their tender loving care; 280
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means:
And therefore, by his majesty I swear, 285
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death. 288

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Q. Mar. O Henry! let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk!

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. 292
Had I but said, I would have kept my word,
But when I swear, it is irrevocable.

[To SUFFOLK.] If after three days' space thou here be'st found

On any ground that I am ruler of, 296
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you! 300

Heart's discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third,
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy? 308

Suf. A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,

As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear, 312

Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,

With full as many signs of deadly hate,

As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave.

My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words; 316

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;

My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;

Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:

And even now my burden'd heart would break

Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!

Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks! 324

Their softest touch as smart as lizard's stings!

Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,

And boding screech-owls make the concert full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell— 328

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,

Or like an over-charged gun, recoil,

And turn the force of them upon thyself. 332

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,

Well could I curse away a winter's night,

Though standing naked on a mountain top, 336

Where biting cold would never let grass grow,

And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O! let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears; 340

Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,

To wash away my woeful monuments.

O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

[Kisses his hand.]

That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,

Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd

for thee. 345

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;

'Tis but surmis'd 't whiles thou art standing by,

As one that surfeits thinking on a want. 348

I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,

Adventure to be banished myself;

And banished I am, if but from thee.

Go; speak not to me; even now be gone. 352

Ol go not yet. Even thus two friends condemn'd Embrace and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.

Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,

Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.

'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;

A wilderness is populous enough, 360

So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:

For where thou art, there is the world itself,

With every several pleasure in the world,

And where thou art not, desolation. 364

I can no more: live thou to joy thy life;

Myself to joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I prithee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty 368

That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;

For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,

That makes him gasp and stare, and catch the air,

Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.

Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost

Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,

And whispers to his pillow, as to him,

The secrets of his overcharged soul: 376

And I am sent to tell his majesty

That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go tell this heavy message to the king. [Exit VAUX.]

Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,

Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?

Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,

And with the southern clouds contend in tears,

Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows? 385

Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming;

If thou be found by me thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live; 388

And in thy sight to die, what were it else

But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,

As mild and gentle as the cradle babe, 392

Dying with mother's dug between its lips;

Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,

To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:

So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul, 397

Or I should breathe it so into thy body,

And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee, were but to die in jest; 400

From thee to die were torture more than death.

Ol let me stay, befall what may befall!

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corsive,

It is applied to a deathful wound. 404

To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from

thee;

For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,

I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee. 408

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask

That ever did contain a thing of worth.

Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:

This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. 412

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE III.—London. CARDINAL BEAUFORT'S Bedchamber.

Enter KING HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Others. The CARDINAL in bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain. 4

K. Hen. Ah! what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible.

War. Beaufort, it is thy sov'reign speaks to
thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will. 8

Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

Can I make men live whe'r they will or no?

Ol torture me no more, I will confess.

Alive again? then show me where he is: 12

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands up-
right,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul. 16

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary

Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens!

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch; 20

Ol beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,

And from his bosom purge this black despair.

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin! 24

Sal. Disturb him not! let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord Cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope. 28
He dies, and makes no sign. O God, forgive him!

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close; 32
And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Kent. The Seashore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and Others; with them SUFFOLK disguised, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea,
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragic melancholy night; 4
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize, 8
For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs
Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.
Master, this prisoner freely give I thee: 12

And thou that art his mate make boot of this;
The other [Pointing to SUFFOLK], Walter
Whitmore, is thy share.

First Gent. What is my ransom, master?
let me know.

Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head. 16

Male. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Cap. What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen?

Cut both the villains' throats! for die you shall:
The lives of those which we have lost in fight 21
Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum!

First Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

Sec. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight. 24

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,

[To SUFFOLK.] And therefore to revenge it shalt thou die;

And so should these if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash: take ransom; let him
live. 28

Suf. Look on my George; I am a gentleman:
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now! why start'st thou? what! doth death affright? 32

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water I should die:

Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded; 36
Thy name is—Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is I care
not;

Never yet did base dishonour blur our name
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot: 40

Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Lays hold on SUFFOLK.]

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince, 44

The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:

Jove sometimes went disguis'd, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt
be. 49

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's
blood,

The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom. 52

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrump?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup, 56
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it and let it make thee crest-fall'n;

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride. 60

How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood
And duly waited for my coming forth?

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain? 65

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side 68

Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.
Cap. Yes, Pole.
Suf. Pole!
Cap. Pool! Sir Pool! lord!
 Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
 Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
 Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth 73
 For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
 Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the
 ground;
 And thou, that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death, 76
 Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
 Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again:
 And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
 For daring to affy a mighty lord 80
 Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
 Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
 By devilish policy art thou grown great,
 And, like ambitious Sylla, overgor'd 84
 With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
 By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,
 The false revolting Normans thorough thee
 Disdain to call us lord, and Picardy 88
 Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
 And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
 The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain, 92
 As arising thee, are rising up in arms:
 And now the house of York, thrust from the
 crown
 By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
 And lofty proud encroaching tyranny, 96
 Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours
 Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
 Under the which is writ Invitis nubibus.
 The commons here in Kent are up in arms; 100
 And to conclude, reproach and beggary
 Is crept into the palace of our king,
 And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.
Suf. O! that I were a god, to shoot forth
 thunder 104
 Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges.
 Small things make base men proud: this villain
 here,
 Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
 Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate. 108
 Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob beehives.
 It is impossible that I should die
 By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
 Thy words move rage, and not remorse in me:
 I go of message from the queen to France; 113
 I charge thee, waft me safely cross the Channel.
Cap. Walter!

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy
 death. 116
Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus: 'tis thee
 I fear.
Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.
 What! are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?
First Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair. 120
Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,
 Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
 Far be it we should honour such as these
 With humble suit: no, rather let my head 124
 Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
 And sooner dance upon a bloody pole
 Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom. 128
 True nobility is exempt from fear:
 More can I bear than you dare execute.
Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no
 more.
Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
 That this my death may never be forgot. 133
 Great men oft die by vile bezonians.
 A Roman sworder and banditto slave
 Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand 136
 Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders
 Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.
[Exit with SUFFOLK, WHITMORE and Others.
Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have set,
 It is our pleasure one of them depart: 140
 Therefore come you with us and let him go.
[Exeunt all but first Gentleman.
Re-enter WHITMORE, with SUFFOLK's body.
Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
 Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.
First Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle! 144
 His body will I bear unto the king:
 If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
 So will the queen, that living held him dear.
[Exit with the body.

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.
Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath: they have been up these two days.
John. They have the more need to sleep now
 then. 5
Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it. 8

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.
Well, I say it was never merry world in England
since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men. 13

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay, more; the king's council are no good workmen. 17

John. True; and yet it is said, 'Labour in thy vocation:' which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates. 21

Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham,— 25

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's-leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,— 28

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver,—

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun. 32

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. [Aside.] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings. 37

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence. 40

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer.—

Dick. [Aside.] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. 44

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. [Aside.] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,— 48

Dick. [Aside.] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside.] But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home. 53

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable
house.

Dick. [Aside.] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am. 60

Smith. [Aside.] A' must needs, for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside.] No question of that, for I have seen him whipped three market-days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside.] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof. 68

Dick. [Aside.] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And when I am king,—as king I will be,—

All. God save your majesty! 80

Cade. I thank you, good people: there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord. 85

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings; but I say, 'tis the bee's wax, for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there? 95

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain! 100

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand. 105

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee. What is thy name? 109

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters. 'Twill go hard with you. 112

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name. 117

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him! I say: hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck. 121

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces. 126

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is a'?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him. 133

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and WILLIAM his Brother, with drum and Forces.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,
Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down;

Home to your cottages, forsake this groom: 136
The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not: 140

It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom, in time to come I hope to reign;
For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain! thy father was a plasterer;
And thou thyself a shearman, art thou not? 145

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staf. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, 148

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That's false. 152

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say, 'tis true:

The elder of them, being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away;
And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, 156
Became a bricklayer when he came to age:
His son am I; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words,

That speaks he knows not what? 164

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York' hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside.] He lies, for I invented it myself. Go to, sirrah; tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him. 172

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it a eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor. 181

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to then, I ask but this, can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, 188

Assail them with the army of the king.

Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
That those which fly before the battle ends 192
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors:

And you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces.]

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me. 196

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:
Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon,
For they are thrifty honest men, and such 200
As would, but that they dare not take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march! forward! 204

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one. 8

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; [Puts on SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD'S armour.] and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the Mayor's sword borne before us. 14

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come; let's march towards London. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, reading a Supplication; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and LORD SAY with him: at a distance, QUEEN MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK'S head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind,

And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep and look on this? 4
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication? 8

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
For God forbid so many simple souls
Should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, 12
Will parley with Jack Cade their general.
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me, 16
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have his. 20

K. Hen. How now, madam!
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me. 24

Q. Mar. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, 28
Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house,
And calls your Grace usurper openly,
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.

His army is a ragged multitude 32
Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed.

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, 36
They call false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth,
Until a power be rais'd to put them down. 40

Q. Mar. Ah! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Killingworth. 44
Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may. 48

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London bridge;

The citizens fly and forsake their houses;
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear 52
To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away! take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd. 56

K. Hen. [To LORD SAY.] Farewell, my lord: trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower.

*Enter LORD SCALES and Others, on the Walls.
Then enter certain Citizens, below.*

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

First Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command;

But I am troubled here with them myself; 8
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe:
Fight for your king, your country, and your lives; 12
And so, farewell, for I must hence again.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—London. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE, and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade! 8

Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning. 12

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them. But first, go and set London-bridge on fire, and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

Alarums. Enter, on one side, CADE and his company; on the other, Citizens, and the KING'S Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOFFE. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOFFE is slain.

Cade. So, sirs:—Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court: down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship. 4
Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth. 8

John. [Aside.] Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside.] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. 14

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away! burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. [Aside.] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common. 21

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. 25

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah! thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord; now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Monsieur Basimecu, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school; and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when indeed only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that? 53

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 56

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent? 60

Say. Nothing but this: 'tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will. 64

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle:
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy; 68
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done; 72
Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, 76
Because my book prefer'd me to the king,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, 80
You cannot but forbear to murder me:
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof,—

Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field? 84

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks! 88

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting, to determine poor men's causes, 92

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man? 96

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you: I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away and behead him. 101

Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth, or honour? speak.
Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? 104
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?

Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,

This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts. 108

O! let me live.

Cade. [Aside.] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither. 118

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life. 123

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some, with LORD SAY.] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it; men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell. 132

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheap-side and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O! brave! 136

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of LORD SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss. Away! 144
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—The Same. Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down St. Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! [A parley sounded, then a retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and Old CLIFFORD, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.
Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king 8

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all
That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent, 12

And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you,
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?

Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his majesty!' 16

Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What! Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one, and so, God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade! 36

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth,
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
Alas! he hath no home, no place to fly to; 41
Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us.
Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you?

Methinks already in this civil broil
I see them lording it in London streets, 48
Crying Villago! unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

To France, to France! and get what you have lost; 52

Spare England, for it is your native coast.
Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford. 57

Cade. [Aside.] Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to a hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying. In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.]

Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow him;

And he that brings his head unto the king
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.]

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean 72
To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the terrace.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king at nine months old: 4
Was never subject long'd to be a king
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd? 8

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of CADE's followers, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death. 12

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And show'd how well you love your prince and country: 16

Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be infortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
And so, with thanks and pardon to you all, 20
I do dismiss you to your several countries.
All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your Grace to be advertised,
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland;
And with a puissant and a mighty power 25
Of Gallowglasses, and stout kerns,
Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along, 28
His arms are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship, that, having scap'd a tempest, 32
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate.
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd;
And now is York in arms to second him.

I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him, 36
And ask him what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him. 40

Som. My lord,
I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms; 44

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal
As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better; 48

For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now I am so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word 'sallet' must serve me to feed on. 17

Enter IDEN with Servants behind.

Iden. Lord! who would live turmoiled in the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
This small inheritance my father left me 20
Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy:
Sufficeth that I have maintains my state, 24
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. [Aside.] Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain! thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part. 32

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be,

I know thee not; why then should I betray thee?
Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds, 36
Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days;
yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray
God I may never eat grass more. 44

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine, 48
See if thou canst out-face me with thy looks:
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast; 53

And if mine arm be heaved in the air
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for more words, whose greatness answers
words, 56

Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chins of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees, thou mayst be turned to hobnails. [They fight; CADE falls.] O, I am slain! Famine and no other hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'll defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled. 69

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:
No'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, 74
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge. 81

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels 85
Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king, 88
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit, with Servants, dragging out the body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Kent. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The KING's camp on one side. On the other, enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king. 4
Ah sancta majestas, who would not buy thee dear?

Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
I cannot give due action to my words, 8
Except a sword, or sceptre balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me? 12

The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure? 16

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou,—being a subject as I am,—
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, 20
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,

Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:

O! I could heap up rocks and fight with flint, 24
I am so angry at these abject terms;

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.

I am far better born than is the king, 28
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;

But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.

[Aloud.] Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me, 32
That I have given no answer all this while;

My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king, 36
Seditious to his Grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:

But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand: 40
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he a prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is a prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers. 44

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and everything you wish,
And let my sov'reign, virtuous Henry, 48
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,

As pledges of my fealty and love;
I'll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die. 53

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter KING HENRY, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us, 56

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York. In all submission and humility
York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring? 60

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence,

And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition 64

May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo! I present your Grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade! Great God, how just art thou! 68

O! let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty. 72

K. Hen. How art thou call'd, and what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss 76

He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us. 80

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See! Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen:

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke. 84

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

But boldly stand and front him to his face.

York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts 88

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse? 92

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;
Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff, 97

And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure. 101

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more 104

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor:—I arrest thee, York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.

Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace. 108

York. Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of these

If they can brook I bow a knee to man.

Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

[Exit an Attendant.]

I know ere they will have me go to ward, 112

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come amain,

To say if that the bastard boys of York

Shall be the surety for their traitor father. 116

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those

That for my surety will refuse the boys! 121

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forces at one side; at the other, with

Forces also, Old CLIFFORD and his Son.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

Clif. [Kneeling.] Health and all happiness to my lord the king! 124

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:

We are thy sov'reign, Clifford, kneel again;

For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee. 128

Clif. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;

But thou mistak'st me much to think I do.

To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour 132

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey: 136

His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. 140

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so: I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor. Call hither to the stake my two brave bears, 144 That with the very shaking of their chains They may astonish these fell-lurking curs: Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death, 148

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains, If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld; Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw, 153 Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cried:

And such a piece of service will you do, If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick. 156

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shapel York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. 160

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son! What! wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian, 164

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles? O! where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head, Where shall it find a harbour in the earth? 168 Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war, And shame thine honourable age with blood? Why art thou old, and want'st experience? Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? 172 For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me, That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself The title of this most renowned duke; 176 And in my conscience do repute his Grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. 180

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin, But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow 184 To do a murderous deed, to rob a man, To force a spotless virgin's chastity, To reave the orphan of his patrimony, To wring the widow from her custom'd right, And have no other reason for this wrong 189 But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

O. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. 192

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again, 196

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm Than any thou canst conjure up to-day; And that I'll write upon thy burget, 200 Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff, This day I'll wear aloft my burget,— 204 As on a mountain-top the cedar shows, That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,— Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burget I'll rend thy bear, 208

And tread it underfoot with all contempt, Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father, To quell the rebels and their complices. 212

Rich. Fie! charity! for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear, Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm, And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, 4 Clifford, I say, come forth, and fight with me! Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland, Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what! all afoot? 8 York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well. 12

Enter Old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
York. Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.
War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st. 16
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd. [Exit.] Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in
love, 20
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,
But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword
As I in justice and true right express it. 25

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! address thee instantly.

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. 28

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls and dies.] York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!
[Exit.]

Enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the roust:

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds 32
Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly: 36
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour. [Seeing his father's body.]

O! let the vile world end, 40
And the premised flames of the last day
Knit heaven and earth together;
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds 44
To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days thus

To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight 49
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine
It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal 52
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity: 56
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame. 60
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:

[Taking up the body.]

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load, 64
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET, fighting;
SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset 68
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.]

Alarums: Excursions. Enter KING HENRY,
QUEEN MARGARET, and Others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow: for shame, away! 72

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay.

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor fight nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us 76
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect, 80
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
And where this breach now in our fortunes
made

May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set, 84

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must: uncurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live 88
To see their day and them our fortune give.
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Field near Saint Alban's.

Alarum. Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, 4
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse, 8
Three times bestrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;

And like rich hangings in a homely house, 12
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought
to-day;

By the mass, so did we all. I thank you,
Richard: 16
God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to-
day

You have defended me from imminent death.
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have: 20

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London, 24
To call a present court of parliament:

Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth:—
What says Lord Warwick? shall we after
them?

War. After them! nay, before them, if we
can. 28

Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.
Sound, drums and trumpets, and to London
all: 32

And more such days as these to us befall!
[Exeunt.]

LORD STAFFORD,

SCENE.—During part of the Third Act, in France; during the rest of the Play, in England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of YORK's party break in. Then, enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slyly stole away and left his men:

Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland, 4

Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,

Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,

Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast,

Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking 8

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain or wounded dangerously;
I cleft his beaver with a downright blow: 12
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood, [To YORK, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what

I did. [Throwing down the DUKE OF SOMERSET's head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons. 17

But, is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's

head. 20

War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,

I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close. 24

This is the palace of the fearful king,

And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs'.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will; 28

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norfolk. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me,
my lords;

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night. 32

War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

[The Soldiers retire.]

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council: 36
By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this
house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, 40
And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right. 44

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.
Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[WARWICK leads YORK to the throne, who seats himself.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD,
NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXE-
TER, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! belike he means—Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer—
To aspire unto the crown and reign as king. 53
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father,
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!
Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What! shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it. 60

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, such as he:
He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.
My gracious lord, here in the parliament 64
Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so.

K. Hen. Ah! know you not the city favours
them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Exe. But when the duke is slain they'll quickly fly. 69

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats, 72
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.

[They advance to the DUKE.]

Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;

I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine. 76

Exe. For shame! come down: he made thee
Duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown
In following this usurping Henry. 81

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural
king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard,
Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne? 84

York. It must and shall be so: content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster: let him be king.

West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster;
And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain. 88

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March'd through the city to the palace gates. 92

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my
grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more
lives 96

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that instead of
words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger

As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100
War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats.
York. Will you we show our title to the crown?
 If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.
K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? 104
Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March;
 I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
 Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
 And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. 109
War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
K. Hen. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:
 When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.
Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose. 113
 Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.
Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.
Mont. [To YORK.] Good brother, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms, 116
 Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus.
Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.
York. Sons, peace!
K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak. 120
War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords;
 And be you silent and attentive too,
 For he that interrupts him shall not live.
K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, 124
 Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?
 No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;
 Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,
 And now in England to our heart's great sorrow,
 Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords? 129
 My title's good, and better far than his.
War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.
K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown. 132
York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.
K. Hen. [Aside.] I know not what to say: my title's weak.
 [Aloud.] Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York. What then? 136
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;
 For Richard, in the view of many lords,
 Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
 Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
 And made him to resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
 Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown? 144
Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown
 But that the next heir should succeed and reign.
K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?
Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me. 148
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?
Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.
K. Hen. [Aside.] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, 152
 Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,
 Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, 156
 Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
 Can set the duke up in despite of me.
Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
 Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence: 160
 May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
 Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!
York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.
 What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York,
 Or I will fill the house with armed men,
 And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits, 168
 Write up his title with usurping blood.
 [He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.]
K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:—
 Let me for this my life-time reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs, 172
 And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet, Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son! 176
War. What good is this to England and himself!
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles!

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us. 64

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

York. What! with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need:

A woman's general; what should we fear? 68
[A march afar off.]

Edw. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight.

York. Five men to twenty! though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory. 72
Many a battle have I won in France,

When as the enemy hath been ten to one:

Why should I not now have the like success?
[Alarum. Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Field of Battle between Sandal Castle and Wakefield.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?

Ah! tutor, look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke, 4
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah! Clifford, murder not this innocent
child, 8

Lest thou be hated both of God and man!

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or is it fear

That makes him close his eyes? I'll open them.
Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch 12

That trembles under his devouring paws;

And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,

And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.

Ah! gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword, 16
And not with such a cruel threatening look.

Sweet Clifford! hear me speak before I die:

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath;

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live. 20

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it
again:

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him. 24

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine

Were not revenge sufficient for me;

No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains, 28

It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;

And till I root out their accursed line, 32

And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore— [Lifting his hand.]

Rut. O! let me pray before I take my
death.

To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me! 36

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.
Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me, 40

Lest in revenge thereof, sith God is just,

He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah! let me live in prison all my days;

And when I give occasion of offence, 44

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

[Stabs him.]

Rut. *Dii faciant laudis summa sit ista
tuae!* [Dies.]

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! 49

And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade

Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,

Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Plains.

Alarum. Enter YORK.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;

And all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind, 4

Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.

My sons, God knows what hath bechanced
them:

But this I know, they have demean'd themselves

Like men born to renown by life or death. 8

Three times did Richard make a lane to me,

And thrice cried, 'Courage, father! fight it out!'

And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt 12
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardiest warriors did retire,
Richard cried, 'Chargel and give no foot of ground!'

And cried, 'A crown, or else a glorious tomb! 16
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!'
With this, we charg'd again; but, out, alas!
We bodg'd again: as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide, 20
And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short alarm within.]

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue;
And I am faint and cannot fly their fury;
And were I strong I would not shun their 24
fury:

The sands are number'd that make up my life;
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, the young PRINCE, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage: 28
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Planta-genet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm
With downright payment show'd unto my 32
father.

Now Phæthon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth

A bird that will revenge upon you all; 36
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning hate'er you can afflict me with.

Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no
further; 40

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford! but bethink thee once
again, 44

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere
this. 48

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for
word,

But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.
[Draws.]

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes

I would prolong awhile the traitor's life. 52
Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much

To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin, 56
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages,
And ten to one is no impeach of valour. 60

[They lay hands on YORK, who struggles.]

Clif. Ay, ay; so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.
[YORK is taken prisoner.]

York. So triumph thieves upon their con-quer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'er-matched.
North. What would your Grace have done unto him now? 65

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and North umberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught at mountains with outstretched
arms, 68

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's
king?

Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you
now? 73

The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice 76
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?

Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the
blood

That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point 80
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly, 84
I should lament thy miserable state.

I prithee grieve, to make me merry, York.
What! hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death? 88
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be
mad;

And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.

Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.

Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me sport:
York cannot speak unless he wear a crown. 93
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him:
Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king! 96
Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair;
And this is he was his adopted heir.
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king 101
Till our King Henry had shook hands with death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem, 104
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O! 'tis a fault too-too unpardonable.

Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head;

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead. 108

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth! 112

How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging, 116
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless. 120

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen, 125

Unless the adage must be verified,
That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;
But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:
'Tis government that makes them seem divine;
The want thereof makes thee abominable. 133
Thou art as opposite to every good
As the Antipodes are unto us,

Or as the south to the septentrion. 136

O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face? 140

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
Bidd'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:

Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will; 144

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins.

These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies,
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman. 149

North. Beshrew me, but his passion moves me so

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood; 153

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,—
O! ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.

See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears: 156
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this;

[Giving back the handkerchief.]

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, 160

Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say, 'Alas! it was a piteous deed!'

There, take the crown, and, with the crown my curse, 164

And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads! 168

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What! weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland? 172

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath; here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.]

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.]

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God! 177

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies.]

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;

So York may overlook the town of York. 180
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father 'scap'd,

Or whether he be 'scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.
Had he been ta'en we should have heard the news; 4

Had he been slain we should have heard the news;

Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.
How fares my brother? why is he so sad? 8

Rich. I cannot joy until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about,
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop 13
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof and bark at him. 17

So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my war-like father:
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son. 20

See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun;
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimmi'd like a younker prancing to his love. 24

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;

Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. 28
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.

In this the heaven figures some event. 32

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds, 36

Should notwithstanding join our lights together,

And over-shine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair-shining suns. 40

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue? 44

Mess. Ah! one that was a woeful looker-on,
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Edw. O! speak no more, for I have heard too much. 48

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy. 52

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was subdu'd; 56
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite;

Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he wept, 60

The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:

And after many scorns, many foul taunts, 64
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York! our prop to lean upon, 68

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay!
O Clifford! boist'rous Clifford! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him, 72
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.

Now my soul's palace is become a prison:
Ah! would she break from hence, that this my body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest, 76
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O! never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart: 80

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great
burden;

For self-same wind, that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench. 84

To weep is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears then, for babes; blows and revenge for
me!

Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it. 88

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun: 92
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say;

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK and the MARQUESS OF MONTAGUE, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare?
what news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount 96

Our baleful news, and at each word's deliv'rance

Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord! the Duke of York is slain. 100

Edw. O Warwick! Warwick! that Planta-
genet

Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,

Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in
tears, 104

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, 108

Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.
I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought, 113 March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the
queen,

Bearing the king in my behalf along;
For by my scouts I was advertised 116
That she was coming with a full intent

To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.

Short tale to make, we at Saint Alban's met, 120
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his war-like queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success; 125
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth, 128
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;

Our soldiers—like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thresher with a flail—

Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause, 133

With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day; 136

So that we fled: the king unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here we heard you were, 140
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle
Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the
soldiers; 144

And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled: 148

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of
mine 152

Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous, and as bold in war
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not: 157

'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
But, in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, 160
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms? 164
If for the last, say 'Ay,' and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.

He swore consent to your succession, 172
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster. 176
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry, 'Charge upon our foes!' 184
But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries 'Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay. 188
Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour!—

Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forbend!
War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of
York: 192

The next degree is England's royal throne;
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every borough as we pass along;
And he that throws not up his cap for joy 196
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task. 200

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,—

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,—
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums! God, and Saint George for us! 204

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news?

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,

The queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts; brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before York.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drums and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord? 4
K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack:

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,

Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow. 8

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den. 12

Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.

Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back. 16

The smallest worm will turn being trodden on,
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown;
Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows: 20

He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue like a loving sire;

Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him, 24

Which argu'd thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young;

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones, 28

Who hath not seen them, even with those wings

Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,

Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?

For shame, my liege! make them your precedent.
Were it not pity that this goodly boy

Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child, 36

'What my great grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away?'

Ah! what a shame were this. Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promiseth 40

Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart: 80

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great
burden;

For self-same wind, that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,

And let his manly face, which promiseth 40

To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force. 44
 But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
 That things ill got had ever bad success?
 And happy always was it for that son
 Whose father for his hoarding went to hell? 48
 I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
 And would my father had left me no more!
 For all the rest is held at such a rate
 As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep 52
 Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
 Ah! cousin York, would thy best friends did know

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes are nigh, 56
 And this soft courage makes your followers faint.
 You promis'd knighthood to our forward son:
 Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently.
 Edward, kneel down. 60

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
 And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly
 leave,

I'll draw it as apparent to the crown, 64
 And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness:
 For with a band of thirty thousand men 68
 Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York;
 And in the towns, as they do march along,
 Proclaims him king, and many fly to him:
 Darraign your battle, for they are at hand. 72

Clif. I would your highness would depart
 the field:

The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay. 76

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble
 lords,

And hearten those that fight in your defence:
 Unsheathe your sword, good father: cry, 'Saint Georcel' 80

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD,
 WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head;
 Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy! 84

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms

Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?

Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee;

I was adopted heir by his consent: 88

Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
 You, that are king, though he do wear the
 crown,

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
 To blot out me, and put his own son in. 92

Clif. And reason too:

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher? O! I cannot speak.

Clif. Ay, crook-back; here I stand to answer
 thee, 96

Or any he the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. 100

War. What sayst thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,
 Your legs did better service than your hands. 104

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now
 'tis thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay. 108

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer. 112

Clif. I slew thy father: call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,

As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;
 But ere sun-set I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak. 117

Q. Mar. Defy them, then, or else hold close
 thy lips.

K. Hen. I prithee, give no limits to my
 tongue:

I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. 120

Clif. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here

Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword.

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd 124
That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right or no?
A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day,
That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown. 128

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;

For York in justice puts his armour on.

Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right,

There is no wrong, but everything is right. 132

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

For well I wot thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam,

But like a foul misshapen stigmatic, 136

Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,

As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt,
Whose father bears the title of a king,— 140

As if a channel should be call'd the sea,—

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,

To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns, 144

To make this shameless callet know herself.

Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd

By that false woman as this king by thee. 149

His father revell'd in the heart of France,

And tam'd the king, and made the Dauphin stoop;

And had he match'd according to his state, 152

He might have kept that glory to this day;

But when he took a beggar to his bed,

And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day,

Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him, 156

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,

And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.

For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek our title still had slept,

And we, in pity of the gentle king, 162

Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase, 164

We set the axe to thy usurping root;

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edw. And in this resolution I defy thee;

Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deny'st the gentle king to speak. 172

Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colours wave!

And either victory, or else a grave.

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay: 176

These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,

I lay me down a little while to breathe;

For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,

Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength, 4

And spite of spite needs must I rest a while.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death!

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good? 8

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair,
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us.

What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings; 12

And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah! Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;

And in the very pangs of death he cried, 17

Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,

'Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!'

So, underneath the belly of their steeds, 20

That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:

I'll kill my horse because I will not fly. 24
 Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
 Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
 And look upon, as if the tragedy
 Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors? 28
 Here on my knee I vow to God above,
 I'll never pause again, never stand still Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of
 mine,
 Or fortune given me measure of revenge. 32
Edw. O Warwick! I do bend my knee with
 thine;
 And in this vow do chain my soul to thine.
 And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold
 face,
 I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
 Thou setter up and plucker down of kings, 37
 Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
 That to my foes this body must be prey,
 Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, 40
 And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!
 Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
 Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle
 Warwick, 44

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:
 I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
 That winter should cut off our spring-time so.
War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,
 farewell. 48

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
 And give them leave to fly that will not stay,
 And call them pillars that will stand to us;
 And if we thrive, promise them such rewards 52
 As victors wear at the Olympian games.
 This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
 For yet is hope of life and victory.
 Forslow no longer; make we hence again. 56

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.
 Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
 And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
 Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall. 4

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.
 This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York,
 And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
 And here's the heart that triumphs in their
 death 8

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and
 brother,
 To execute the like upon thyself;
 And so, have at thee!

[They fight. WARWICK enters; CLIFFORD flies.]

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase; 12
 For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morn-ing's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
 Can neither call it perfect day nor night. 4
 Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
 Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
 Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea 8
 Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind:
 Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;
 Now one the better, then another best;
 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
 Yet neither conqueror nor conquered: 12
 So is the equal poise of this fell war.
 Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
 To whom God will, there be the victory!
 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too, 16
 Have chid me from the battle; swearing both
 They prosper best of all when I am thence.
 Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
 For what is in this world but grief and woe? 20
 O God! methinks it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain;
 To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out dials quaintly, point by point, 24
 Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
 How many make the hour full complete;
 How many hours bring about the day;
 How many days will finish up the year; 28
 How many years a mortal man may live.
 When this is known, then to divide the times:
 So many hours must I tend my flock;
 So many hours must I take my rest; 32
 So many hours must I contemplate;
 So many hours must I sport myself;
 So many days my ewes have been with young;
 So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean; 36
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:
 So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. 40
 Ah! what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
 Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy 44
 To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?
 O, yes! it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.
 And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle, 48

His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
 Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup, 52
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath killed his Father, with the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
 This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight, 56
 May be possessed with some store of crowns;
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 May yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me. 60
 Who's this? O God! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.
 O heavy times, begetting such events!
 From London by the king was I press'd forth; 64
 My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereaved him. 68
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
 Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
 And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war, 77
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father that hath killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold, 80
 For I have bought it with a hundred blows.
 But let me see: is this our foeman's face?
 Ah! no, no, no, it is mine only son.
 Ah! boy, if any life be left in thee, 84
 Throw up thine eye: see, see! what showers arise,
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart.
 O! pity, God, this miserable age. 88
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
 O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon, 92
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O! that my death would stay these ruthful deeds.
 O! pity, pity; gentle heaven, pity. 96
 The red rose and the white are on his face,

The fatal colours of our striving houses:
 The one his purple blood right well resembles;
 The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth:
 With'er one rose, and let the other flourish! 101
 If you contend, a thousand lives must with'er.

Son. How will my mother for a father's death
 Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied! 104

Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my son

Shed seas of tears and ne'er be satisfied!

K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances

Misthink the king and not be satisfied! 108

Son. Was ever son so ru'd a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the body.]

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go:
 My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell; 117
 And so obsequious will thy father be,
 E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valiant sons. 120
 I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
 For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

[Exit with the body.]

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are. 124

Alarum. Excursions. Enter QUEEN MAR-GARET, PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.

Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post again. 128

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds

Having the fearful flying hare in sight,

With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,

And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence again.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with
 them.

Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed,

Or else come after: I'll away before. 136

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
 Exeter:

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go

Whither the queen intends. Forward! away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Same.

A loud alarm. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies,
Which, while it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow
More than my body's parting with my soul. 4
My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee;
And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt,
Impairing Henry, strengthening misproud York:
The common people swarm like summer flies; 8
And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
O Phœbus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phæthon should check thy fiery steeds, 12
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth;
And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,

Or as thy father and his father did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York, 16
They never then had sprung like summer
flies;

I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air? 21
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are complaints, and cureless are my wounds;
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight: 24
The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest;
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

[He faints.]

Alarm and Retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful
looks. 32

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves. 36
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave;
And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead. 41

[CLIFFORD groans and dies.]

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.

Edw. See who it is: and now the battle's ended, 44
If friend or foe let him be gently us'd.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth, 48
But set his murd'ring knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly
spring,

I mean our princely father, Duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head, 52

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;
Instead whereof let this supply the room:
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house, 56

That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening
sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
[Attendants bring the body forward.]

War. I think his understanding is bereft. 60 Speak, Clifford; dost thou know who speaks to
thee?

Dark cloudy death o'er shades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O! would he did; and so perhaps he doth: 64

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager
words. 68

Rich. Clifford! ask mercy and obtain no grace.
Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.
Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults. 72

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitiedst Rutland, I will pity thee.
Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you
now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont. 76

Rich. What! not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.
I know by that he's dead; and, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life, so
That I in all despite might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood

Stifle the villain whose unstaunched thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy. 84

War. Ay, but he's dead: off with the traitor's
head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands.
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king: 88
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to
France,

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen.
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread 92

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears.

First will I see the coronation; 96
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For on thy shoulder do I build my seat, 100
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.

Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester;
And George, of Clarence; Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best. 105

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester,

For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut! that's a foolish observation: 108
Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to London,
To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Chase in the North of England.

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

First Keep. Under this thick-grown brake
we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this laund anon the deer will
come;

And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer. 4

Sec. Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

First Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best: 8
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day

In this self place where now we mean to stand.

Sec. Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past. 12

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,
Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed: 17

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee; 20
For how can I help them, and not myself?

First Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.
K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,
For wise men say it is the wisest course. 25

Sec. Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

First Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid; 28

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost; 32
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving
words.

By this account then Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much: 36

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse, 40
To hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears.

Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
She on his left side craving aid for Henry;
He on his right asking a wife for Edward. 44
She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more:

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the
wrong, 48

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
O Margaret! thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

Sec. Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to: 56

A man at least, for less I should not be;
 And men may talk of kings, and why not I?
Sec. Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.
K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough. 60
Sec. Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?
K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;
 Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
 Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content; 64
 A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.
Sec. Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
 Your crown content and you must be contented
 To go along with us; for, as we think, 68
 You are the king King Edward hath depos'd;
 And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
 Will apprehend you as his enemy.
K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath? 72
Sec. Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.
K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?
Sec. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old; 76
 My father and my grandfather were kings,
 And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
 And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?
First Keep. No; 80
 For we were subjects but while you were king.
K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?
 Ah! simple men, you know not what you swear.
 Look, as I blow this feather from my face, 84
 And as the air blows it to me again,
 Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
 And yielding to another when it blows,
 Commanded always by the greater gust; 88
 Such is the lightness of you common men.
 But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
 My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
 Go where you will, the kings shall be commanded;
 And be you kings: command, and I'll obey. 93
First Keep. We are true subjects to the king, King Edward.
K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
 If he were seated as King Edward is. 96
First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,
 To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:
 And what God will, that let your king perform;
 And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Alban's field

This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slain,
 His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:
 His suit is now, to repossess those lands; 4
 Which we in justice cannot well deny,
 Because in quarrel of the house of York
 The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit; 8
 It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less: but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Yea; is it so?
 I see the lady hath a thing to grant 12
 Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind!

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Silence!

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit, 16
 And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:

May it please your highness to resolve me now,
 And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me. 20

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,
 An if what pleases him shall pleasure you,
 Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. 24

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Nay, whip me, then; he'll rather give her two. 28

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then. 32

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.
 Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave, Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch. [Retiring with CLARENCE.
 K. Edw. Now, tell me, madam, do you love your children? 36
 L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.
 K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?
 L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.
 K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good. 40
 L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.
 K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
 L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.
 K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them? 44
 L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.
 K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
 L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
 K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask. 48
 L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.
 Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.
 Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt.
 L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task? 52
 K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.
 L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
 K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
 L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks. 56
 Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy.
 K. Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the fruits of love I mean.
 L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
 K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. What love think'st thou I sue so much to get?
 L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers:
 That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love. 64
 L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.
 K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
 L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
 Your highness aims at, if I aim aright. 68
 K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
 L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
 K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
 L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower; 72
 For by that loss I will not purchase them.
 K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.
 L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.
 But, mighty lord, this merry inclination 76
 Accords not with the sadness of my suit:
 Please you dismiss me, either with 'ay,' or 'no.'
 K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request;
 No, if thou dost say 'no' to my demand. 80
 L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
 Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.
 Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
 K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty; 84
 Her words do show her wit incomparable;
 All her perfections challenge sovereignty:
 One way or other, she is for a king;
 And she shall be my love, or else my queen. 88
 Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?
 L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:
 I am a subject fit to jest withal,
 But far unfit to be a sovereign. 92
 K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,
 I speak no more than what my soul intends;
 And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.
 L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto. 96
 I know I am too mean to be your queen,
 And yet too good to be your concubine.
 K. Edw. You cavil, widow: I did mean, my queen.
 L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your Grace my sons should call you father. 100

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.
Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing 104
To be the father unto many sons.
Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.
Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The ghostly
father now hath done his shrift.
Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift. 108
K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.
Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.
K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.
Clar. To whom, my lord?
K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.
Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least. 113
Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.
Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.
K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both 116
Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.
Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought as prisoner to your palace gate.
K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower: 120
And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.
Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably. [Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.
Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honour-
ably. 124
Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may
spring,
To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul's desire and me— 128
The lustful Edward's title buried,—
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself: 132
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye; 137
And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way:

So do I wish the crown, being so far off, 140
And so I chide the means that keep me from it,
And so I say I'll cut the causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities.
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erween too much,
Unless my hand and strength could equal
them. 145
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap, 148
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought! and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns. 152
Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb:
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe,
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back, 157
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part, 160
Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I then a man to be belov'd?
O monstrous fault! to harbour such a thought.
Then, since this earth affords no joy to me 165
But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown;
And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head
Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown, 172
For many lives stand between me and home:
And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way and straying from the way; 176
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out,
Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself, 180
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile,
And cry, 'Content,' to that which grieves my
heart,
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears, 184
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor, 188
Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could,
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can add colours to the chameleon,
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages, 192
And set the murd'rous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut! were it further off, I'll pluck it down.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister LADY BONA, attended: his Admiral called BOURBON; the King takes his state. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, and the EARL OF OXFORD. LEWIS sits, and riseth up again.

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,

Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days;
But now mischance hath trod my title down, 8
And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair? 12

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,

And sit thee by our side. [Seats her by him.] Yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief. 20

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,

That Henry, sole possessor of my love, 24 Is of a king become a banish'd man,

And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York

Usurps the regal title and the seat 28 Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause that I, poor Margaret, With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir, Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; 32 And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.

Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help; Our people and our peers are both misled,

Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, 36

And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe. 40

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

Q. Mar. O! but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence? 44

Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state. QUEEN MARGARET rises.]

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;

For this is he that moves both wind and tide. 48

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion, My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,

I come, in kindness and unfeigned love, First, to do greetings to thy royal person; 52

And then to crave a league of amity; And lastly to confirm that amity

With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister, 56

To England's king in lawful marriage. Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. [To BONA.] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour, 60 Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sov'reign's heart; Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,

Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue. Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak, 65

Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love, But from deceit bred by necessity; 68

For how can tyrants safely govern home, Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice, That Henry liveth still; but were he dead, 72

Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.

Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour;

For though usurpers sway the rule awhile, 76
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt, 81

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest; 84
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse, 88

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?
Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest, you tell a pedigree 92
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyedst thirty and six years, 96
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Oxf. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom 101

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death? and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years, 104
When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York. 108

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,

Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.

[They stand aloof.]

Q. Mar. Heaven grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not! 112

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour. 116

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.
K. Lew. Then further, all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120
Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may beseem a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant, 124

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun,

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain. 128

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine:

[To WARWICK.] Yet I confess that often ere this day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire. 133

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make, 136

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd.
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. 140

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit:

Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret: 144

But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,

Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised. 148

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease,
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose. 152

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,

And better 'twere you troubled him than France.

Q. Mar. Peace! impudent and shameless Warwick, peace; 156

Proud setter up and puller down of kings;
I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,

Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love; 160

For both of you are birds of self-same feather.
[A horn windeth within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter a Post.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague:
These from our king unto your majesty; 165
[To MARGARET.] And, madam, these for you;
from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters.]

Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his. 168

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:

I hope all's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys. 172

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? 176
Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. 180

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;
No more my king, for he dishonours me; 184

But most himself, if he could see his shame.
Did I forget that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? 188
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right?

And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself! for my desert is honour: 192

And, to repair my honour, lost for him,
I here renounce him and return to Henry.

My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servitor. 196

I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200
And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers, 204

I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.

'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, 208
He's very likely now to fall from him,

For matching more for wanton lust than honour,
Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd, 212

But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live,

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one. 216

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with yours.

K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd

You shall have aid. 220

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return in post,

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers,

To revel it with him and his new bride. 225
Thou seest what's past; go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. 228

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.
There's thy reward: be gone. [Exit Messenger.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, 233

Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle;

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen 236
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt:
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:
That if our queen and this young prince agree,

I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion. 244

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it; 249
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to WARWICK.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral, 252
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.

I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all except WARWICK.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe: 257

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:

Not that I pity Henry's misery, 264
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET,
MONTAGUE, and Others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas! you know, 'tis far from hence to France; 4

How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think. 8

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended;
LADY GREY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and Others.

K. Edw. Now, brother Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick;

Which are so weak of courage and in judgment
That they'll take no offence at our abuse. 13

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick: I am Edward,

Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will. 16

Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king:

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo. Not I: 20

No, God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and

'twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside, 24

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey
Should not become my wife and England's queen:

And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think. 28

Clar. Then this is mine opinion: that King Lewis

Becomes your enemy for mocking him
About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge, 32

Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

By such invention as I can devise?
Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance 36

Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself

England is safe, if true within itself? 40

Mont. Yes; but the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting France:

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable, 44

And with their helps only defend ourselves:
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford. 48

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law.

Glo. And yet methinks your Grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales 52
Unto the brother of your loving bride:

She better would have fitted me or Clarence:
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir 56

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence, is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment, 61

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker on mine own behalf;

And to that end I shortly mind to leave you. 64 K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be
king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will.
Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen, 68
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent;

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine, 72

So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee, 76
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?

Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands; 80

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. [Aside.] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news 84

From France?
Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words;

But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate. 88

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
them.

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart these were his very
words: 92

'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers,
To revel it with him and his new bride.'

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry. 96

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:

'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.' 100

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;

She had the wrong. But what said Henry's
queen?

For I have heard that she was there in place.
Mess. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning weeds are done, 104

And I am ready to put armour on.'

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.

But what said Warwick to these injuries?
Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty

Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these
words: 109

'Tell him from me that he hath done me
wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.'

K. Edw. Hal durst the traitor breathe out so proud words? 112

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship, 116

That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's
daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;

That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.

You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.
[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

Glo. [Aside.] Not I. 124

My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen,
And haste is needful in this desperate case. 129

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war:

They are already, or quickly will be landed: 132
Myself in person will straight follow you,

[Exeunt PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.

But ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance:
Tell me if you love Warwick more than me? 137

If it be so, then both depart to him;

I rather wish you foes than hollow friends:
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow 141
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause! 144

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence come!
Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends? 4

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick;

And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardice,
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart 8
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;
Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's
brother,

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:
But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine. 12

And now what rests, but in night's coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a simple guard, 16
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede,
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus'
tents, 20

And brought from thence the Thracian fatal
steeds;

So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,
And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him, 24
For I intend but only to surprise him.

You, that will follow me to this attempt,

Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry 'Henry!']

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort. 28
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—EDWARD'S Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen to guard the KING'S tent.

First Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;

The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.

Sec. Watch. What, will he not to bed?

First Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow 4

Never to lie and take his natural rest

Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

Sec. Watch. To-morrow then belike shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report. 8

Third Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that

That with the king here resteth in his tent?

First Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

Third Watch. O! is it so? But why commands the king 12

That his chief followers lodge in towns about
him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field?

Sec. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because the more dangerous.

Third Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness; 16

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

First Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage. 20

Sec. Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMER-SET, and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never! 24
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

First Watch. Who goes there?

Sec. Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[WARWICK and the rest cry all, 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard; who fly, crying, 'Arm! Arm!'
*WARWICK and the rest following
them.*]

Drums beating, and Trumpets sounding, re-enter WARWICK and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair. GLOUCESTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings: let them go; here's the duke. 28

K. Edw. The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted last,

Thou call'dst me king!

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

Then I degraded you from being king, 32

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,

That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife, 36

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the people's welfare,

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too? 40

Nay, then, I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king: 44

Though Fortune's malice overthrow my state,

My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king: [Takes off his crown.]

But Henry now shall wear the English crown, 48

And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow.

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,

See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd

Unto my brother, Archbishop of York. 52

When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer

Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him:

Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York. 56

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit, led out; SOMERSET with him.]

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,

But march to London with our soldiers? 60

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment,

And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick? 4

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard 8

Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares:

And, as I further have to understand,

Is now committed to the Bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe. 12

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:

Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay. 16

And I the rather wean me from despair

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:

This is it that makes me bridle passion,

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear, 21

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown

King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown. 24

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,

To set the crown once more on Henry's head:

Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down. 28

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,—

For trust not him that hath once broken faith,—

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,

To save at least the heir of Edward's right: 32

There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.

Come, therefore; let us fly while we may fly:

If Warwick take us we are sure to die. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others.

Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
 Into this chieftest thicket of the park.
 Thus stands the case. You know, our king, my
 brother, 4
 Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
 He hath good usage and great liberty,
 And often but attended with weak guard,
 Comes hunting this way to disport himself. 8
 I have advertis'd him by secret means,
 That if about this hour he make this way,
 Under the colour of his usual game,
 He shall here find his friends, with horse and men
 To set him free from his captivity. 13

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and
 the rest, 16

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?

Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste.

Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then? 20

Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forward-
 ness.

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk. 24

K. Edw. Huntsman, what sayst thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown, 28

And pray that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

*Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK,
 SOMERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD,
 MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.*

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
 And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
 My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys, 4
 At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if a humble prayer may prevail,
 I then crave pardon of your majesty. 8

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using
 me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,
 For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;

Ay, such a pleasure as encaged birds 12
 Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts

At last by notes of household harmony
 They quite forget their loss of liberty.

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free, 16
 And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.
 Therefore, that I may conquer Fortune's spite

By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me, 20
 And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
 Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee, 24
 For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
 By spying and avoiding Fortune's malice; 28

For few men rightly temper with the stars:
 Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,

For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway, 32

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity
 Adjudg'd an olive branch and laurel crown,

As likely to be blest in peace, and war;
 And therefore I yield thee my free consent. 36

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me
 both your hands:

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts, 40

That no dissension hinder government:
 I make you both protectors of this land,

While I myself will lead a private life,
 And in devotion spend my latter days,

To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise. 44
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

For on thy fortune I repose myself.
War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content: 48

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
 To Henry's body, and supply his place;

I mean, in bearing weight of government, 52
 While he enjoys the honour and his ease.

And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd. 56

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, for I command no more,
That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed:
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sov'reign, with all speed. 64

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is
that

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: [Lays his hand on his head.] If secret powers 68
Suggest but truth to his divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.

His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown, 72
His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend? 77

Mess. That Edward is escaped from your
brother,
And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavoury news! but how made he escape? 80

Mess. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester,

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side,
And from the bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him:
For hunting was his daily exercise. 85

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.
But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide. 88

[*Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE,
Lieutenant, and Attendant.*]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's;

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars before't be long.
As Henry's late presaging prophecy 92
Did glad my heart with hope of this young
Richmond,

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him to his harm and ours:
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst, 96
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown,
'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall
down. 100

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.
Come, therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, HAST-INGS, and Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends,
And says, that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry's regal crown. 4

Well have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of
York, 8
But that we enter, as into our dukedom?

Glo. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not
this;

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within. 12

K. Edw. Tush, man! abodements must not now affright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them. 16

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be
your king, 20

Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord, I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone. 24

Glo. [Aside.] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are King Henry's friends. 28

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd. [Exit, with Aldermen, above.]

Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded.

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 'twere not 'long of him; but being enter'd, 32
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and two Aldermen.

K. Edw. So, Master Mayor: these gates must not be shut

But in the night, or in the time of war. 36
What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; [Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Enter MONTGOMERY and Forces.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. 41

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! but why come you in arms?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do. 44

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again: 48

I came to serve a king and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begun.]

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile; and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd. 52

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,
I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone
To keep them back that come to succour you.

Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title? 57

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger then we'll make our claim;

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning. 60

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right, 65

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sov'reign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion. 68

Hast. Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd;

Come, fellow soldier, make thou proclamation.
[Gives him a paper. Flourish.]

Sold. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c. 73

Mont. And whosoe'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight.

[Throws down his gauntlet.]

All. Long live Edward the Fourth! 76

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery;—and thanks unto you all:

If Fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;
And when the morning sun shall raise his car

Above the border of this horizon, 81
We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Ab, froward Clarence, how evil it besems thee
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother! 85

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day;
And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march amain to London; 4

And many giddy people flock to him.

Oxf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench. 8

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;

Those will I muster up: and thou, son Clarence,
Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent, 12

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:
Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find
Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd
In Oxfordshire, shalt muster up thy friends.
My sov'reign, with the loving citizens,
Like to his island girt in with the ocean, 20
Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,
Shall rest in London till we come to him.
Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.
Farewell, my sovereign. 24

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness'
hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so, I take my leave. 28

Oxf. [Kissing HENRY'S hand.] And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords: let's meet at Coventry. 32

[Exeunt all but KING HENRY and EXETER.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

Methinks the power that Edward hath in field
Should not be able to encounter mine. 36

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my meed hath got me fame:

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays; 40

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,

My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth; 44

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.

Then why should they love Edward more than
me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace: 48
And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.
[Shout within, 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!']

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry!
bear him hence: 52

And once again proclaim us King of England.

You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow:

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them
dry,

And swell so much the higher by their ebb. 56
Hence with him to the Tower! let him not speak. [Exeunt some with KING HENRY.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay, 60

Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.
Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,

And take the great-grown traitor unawares:
Brave warriors, march a main towards Coventry.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter, upon the Walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?
First Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague? 4
Where is the post that came from Montague?

Sec. Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now? 8 Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum heard.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies:
The drum your honour hears marcheth from
Warwick. 13

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly
know.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle. 16

Glo. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward
come?

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,

That we could hear no news of his repair? 20

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,
Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee?—

Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy?
And he shall pardon thee these outrages. 24

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,—

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down?—

Call Warwick patron, and be penitent;
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the king; 29

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?
Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give:

I'll do thee service for so good a gift. 33

War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again; 37
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner;

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this, 40
What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast,
But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was slyly finger'd from the deck. 44

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so: yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down: 48

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other fling it at thy face,
Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee. 52

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend;

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off,
Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood:
'Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.' 57

Enter OXFORD, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!
[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too. 60

K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they no doubt
Will issue out again and bid us battle:
If not, the city being but of small defence, 64
We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

War. O! welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!
[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason 68

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster! 72
[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,
Have sold their lives unto the house of York;
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with Forces, drum, and colours.

War. And lo! where George of Clarence sweeps along, 76

Of force enough to bid his brother battle;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails
More than the nature of a brother's love.

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means? 81

[Taking the red rose out of his hat.]
Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:

I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou, Warwick, 85

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war
Against his brother and his lawful king? 88

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:
To keep that oath were more impiety
Than Jephthah's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made 92

That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;

With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee—
As I will meet thee if thou stir abroad— 96
To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,

And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.
Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends; 100
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate. 104
Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears? 108

War. Alas! I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way. 112

Lords, to the field; Saint George and victory!
[March. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Alarums and Excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK, wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
Now Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. 116

[Exit.]

War. Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe, 5

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart
shows, 8

That I must yield my body to the earth,
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept, 13
Whose top branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.
These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's
black veil, 16

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
To search the secret treasons of the world:
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres; 20
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?

Lol now my glory smear'd in dust and blood;
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had, 24
Even now forsake me; and, of all my lands

Is nothing left me but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must. 28

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah! Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again.
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;

Even now we heard the news. Ah! couldst thou fly. 32

War. Why, then, I would not fly. Ah!
Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile.

Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood
That glues my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah! Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his last; 40

And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick,
And said, 'Commend me to my valiant brother.'
And more he would have said; and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault. 44
That might not be distinguish'd: but at last
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,
'O! farewell, Warwick!'

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves; 48

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven. [Dies.]

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power.

[Exeunt, bearing off WARWICK'S body.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, in triumph: with CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud, 4
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easeful western bed:

I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast, 8
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,

And blow it to the source from whence it came:
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up, 12

For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:

If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd 16
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury.

We, having now the best at Barnet field, 20
Will thither straight, for willingness rids way;

And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.

Strike up the drum! cry 'Courage!' and away.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown over-board,

The cable broke, the holding anchor lost, 4
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?

Yet lives our pilot still: is't meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad

With tearful eyes add water to the sea, 8
And give more strength to that which hath too much;

Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?

Ah! what a shame! ah, what a fault were this.
Say, Warwick was our anchor; what of that? 13

And Montague our top-mast; what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor? 16
And Somerset, another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I

For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge? 20
We will not from the helm, to sit and weep,

But keep our course, though the rough wind
say no,

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wrack.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea? 25

What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All those the enemies to our poor bark. 28
Say you can swim; alas! 'tis but a while:

Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:
Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,

Or else you famish; that's a threefold death. 32
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks. 36

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided
'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these
words, 40

Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.

I speak not this, as doubting any here;
For did I but suspect a fearful man, 44

He should have leave to go away betimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another,

And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here, as God forbid! 48

Let him depart before we need his help.
Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage,

And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.

O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee: long mayst thou live

To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,

Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day, 56
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset: sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at
hand, 60

Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.
Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy

To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.
Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart to see your
forwardness. 65

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

*March. Enter, at a distance, KING EDWARD,
CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces.*

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your strength, 68

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords. 72

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign, 76

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. 80
You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.
[Exeunt both armies.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a retreat. Then enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces; with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hames Castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with
words. 5
Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.]
Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. 8
K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life?
Glo. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant: let us hear him speak. 12

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to? 16

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth:
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee, 20
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah! that thy father had been so resolv'd.

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster. 24

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;
His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men. 28

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful: 33

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjur'd George,
And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all,
I am your better, traitors as ye are; 36

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.]

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.]

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.]

Q. Mar. O, kill me too! 41

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much.

Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with words? 44

K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king, my
brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious matter:
Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what? 49

Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers! 52

They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
If this foul deed were by, to equal it:

He was a man; this, in respect, a child; 56
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name
it?

No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak:
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. 60
Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!
You have no children, butchers! if you had,
The thought of them would have stirr'd up
remorse: 64

But if you ever chance to have a child,
Look in his youth to have him so cut off
As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her! go, bear her hence perforce. 68

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here:

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my
death.

What! wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease. 72

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thy-
self:

'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity. 76

What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher,

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art
thou?

Thou art not here: murder is thy alms-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back. 80

K. Edw. Away, I say! I charge ye, bear her
hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly.]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess, 84

To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London
And see our gentle queen how well she fares; 89
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Good day, my lord. What! at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;

'Tis sin to flatter, 'good' was little better:

'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were alike, 4
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'good
lord.'

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. 9

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?
Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty
mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer. 12

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye 16
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl!

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;

The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward, and thyself the sea, 24

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.
Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words.

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
Than can my ears that tragic history. 28

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my
life?

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art:
If murd'ring innocents be executing, 32

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine. 36

And thus I prophesy: that many a thousand,
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,

And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye, 40
Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',
And orphans for their parents' timeless death,

Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign; 44

The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees!

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discords sung. 48

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,

And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;

To wit an indigest deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. 52

Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world:
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou cam'st— 56

Glo. I'll hear no more: die, prophet, in thy speech: [Stabs him.

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.

Glo. What! will the aspiring blood of Lancaster 61

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's death!

O! may such purple tears be always shed 64
From those that wish the downfall of our house.

If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither, [Stabs him again.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear. 68

Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;

For I have often heard my mother say

I came into the world with my legs forward.

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste, 72

And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd, and the women cried

'O! Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth.'

And so I was; which plainly signified 76

That I should snarl and bite and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.

I have no brother, I am like no brother; 80

And this word 'love,' which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another

And not in me: I am myself alone.

Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light: 84

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee;

For I will buzz abroad such prophecies

That Edward shall be fearful of his life;

And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death. 88

King Henry and the prince his son are gone:

Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest,

Counting myself but bad till I be best.

I'll throw thy body in another room, 92

And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit with the body.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne: QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.

What valiant foemen like to autumn's corn,

Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride! 4

Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd

For hardy and undoubted champions;

Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;

And two Northumberlands: two braver men 8

Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound;

With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and

Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,

And made the forest tremble when they roar'd. 12

Thus have we swept suspicion from our

seat,

And made our footstool of security.

Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.

Young Ned, for thee thine uncles and my- 16

self

Have in our armours watch'd the winter's

night;

Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,

That thou might'st repossess the crown in

peace;

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. 20

Glo. [Aside.] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.

This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;

And heave it shall some weight, or break my

back: 24

Work thou the way, and thou shalt execute.

K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen;

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your majesty, 28

I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit. 32

[Aside.] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his

master,

And cried 'all hail!' when as he meant all

harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your Grace have done with Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem;
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

36

40

K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.

And now what rests but that we spend the time

With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befit the pleasure of the court?

Sound, drums and trumpets! farewell, sour annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE.—England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried. 4
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums changed to merry meetings;
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures. 8
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber 12

To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
majesty 16
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time 20
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace, 24
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover, 28
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,

I am determin'd to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous, 32
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and just 36
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says, that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. 40
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.
Brother, good day: what means this armed guard

That waits upon your Grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed 44
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.
Glo. Alack! my lord, that fault is none of
yours;

He should, for that, commit your godfathers. 48
O! belike his majesty hath some intent
That you should be new-christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest
As yet I do not; but, as I can learn, 53

He hearkens after prophecies and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says a wizard told him that by G 56

His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These, as I learn, and such like toys as these, 60
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:

'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;
My Lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she 64
That tempers him to this extremity.

Was it not she and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower, 68

From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man secure

But the queen's kindred and night-walking heralds 72

That trudge betwixt the king and Mistress
Shore.

Heard you not what a humble suppliant

Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity 76
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what; I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men and wear her livery: 80

The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
women,

Are mighty gossips in our monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your Graces both to pardon
me; 84

His majesty hath straitly given in charge
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glo. Even so; an please your worship,
Brakenbury, 88

You may partake of anything we say:

We speak no treason, man: we say the king
Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen

Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous; 92
We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,

A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing
tongue;

And that the queen's kindred are made gentle-folks.

How say you, sir? can you deny all this? 96

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glo. Naught to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone. 100

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave. Wouldst thou betray me?

Brak. I beseech your Grace to pardon me;
and withal

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey. 105

Glo. We are the queen's abjects, and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in, 108

Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,
I will perform it to enfranchise you.

Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
Touches me deeper than you can imagine. 112

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;

I will deliver you, or else lie for you:

Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce: farewell.

[Exeunt CLARENCE, BRAKENBURY, and Guard.]

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return, 117
Simple, plain Clarence! I do love thee so
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands. 120
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings!

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious
lord!
Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to this open air. 124
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment. 128

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagles should be mew'd, 132

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?
Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at
home;

The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, 136
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now by Saint Paul, this news is bad
indeed.

O! he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his royal person: 140

'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.
What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die 144 Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I fail not in my deep intent, 148
Clarence hath not another day to live:

Which done, God take King Edward to his
mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!

For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter. 152

What though I kill'd her husband and her
father,

The readiest way to make the wench amends
Is to become her husband and her father:

The which will I; not all so much for love 156

As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns: 160
When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—London. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in an open coffin; Gentlemen bearing halberds to guard it; and LADY ANNE, as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I a while obsequiously lament

The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster. 4

Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!

Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!

Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!

Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost, 8

To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,

Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,

Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these
wounds!

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life, 12

I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.

O! cursed be the hand that made these holes;

Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it!

Cursed the blood that let this blood from
hence! 16

More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,

Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,

Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives! 20

If ever he have child, abortive be it,

Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,

Whose ugly and unnatural aspect

May fright the hopeful mother at the view; 24

And that be heir to his unhappiness!

If ever he have wife, let her be made

More miserable by the death of him

Than I am made by my young lord and thee! 28

Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy

load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there;

And still, as you are weary of the weight,

Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse. 32

[The Bearers take up the corpse and advance.]

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,

To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains! set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul, 36

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

First Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.]

Anne. What! do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas! I blame you not; for you are mortal, 44
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avaunt! thou dreadful minister of hell,
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have: therefore, be gone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake hence, and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims. 52

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O gentlemen; see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh.
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity, 57
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells:

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, 60
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God! which this blood mad'st, revenge his death;

O earth! which this blood drink'st, revenge his death;

Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer dead, 64

Or earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity, 68
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man:

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast. 72

Anne. O! wonderful, when devils tell the truth.

Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave, 76

By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. 80

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Foulter than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself. 84

Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.

Anne. And by despairing shouldst thou stand excus'd

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others. 88

Glo. Say that I slew them not.

Anne. Then say they were not slain:
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand. 92

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Queen Margaret saw

Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point. 96

Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

That never dreamt on aught but butcheries. 100
Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo. I grant ye.

Anne. Dost grant me, hedge-hog? Then, God grant me too

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
O! he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. 105

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven, that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me, that help'd to send him thither; 108

For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber. 112

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Anne. I hope so.

Glo. I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits, 116

And fall somewhat into a slower method,
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner? 120

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep
To undertake the death of all the world, 124
So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wrack; 128

You should not blemish it if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life! 132

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. 136

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband. 140

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he could.

Anne. Name him.

Glo. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was he.
Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature. 144

Anne. Where is he?

Glo. Here. [She spitteth at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?

Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes. 149

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!

Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once; 152

For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops;

These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear;
No, when my father York and Edward wept 157
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him;

Nor when thy war-like father like a child, 160
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,
My manly eyes did scorn a humble tear; 165
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.

I never su'd to friend, nor enemy; 168
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words;

But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lip such scorn, for it was made 172
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adoreth thee, 177

I lay it open to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open: she offers at it with his sword.]

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry;
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. 181

Nay, now dispatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward;
[She again offers at his breast.]
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.

[She lets fall the sword.]

Take up the sword again, or take up me. 184

Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,

I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage:

Speak it again, and, even with the word, 189

This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love:

To both their deaths shalt thou be accessory. 192

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false.

Glo. Then never man was true. 196

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope? 200

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take is not to give.

[She puts on the ring.]

Glo. Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger, 204

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand, 208
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby-place; 213
Where, after I have solemnly interr'd
At Chertsey monastery this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears, 216
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too 220

To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you, 224
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt LADY ANNE, TRESSSEL, and BERKELEY.]

Glo. Sirs, take up the corse.

Gent. Toward Chertsey, noble lord?

Glo. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming. [Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.]
Was ever woman in this humour woo'd? 229
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.

What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father, 232

To take her in her heart's extremest hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars 236
against me,

And nothing I to back my suit withal
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, all the world to nothing! 240
Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman, 244
Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet abase her eyes on me, 248

That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,

And made her widow to a woeful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am misshapen thus? 252
My dukedom to a beggarly denier
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man. 256
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself, 260
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave,
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass, 264
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort, 4

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms. 8

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah! he is young; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloucester, 12
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:

But so it must be if the king miscarry. 16

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Grace!

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley, 20

To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd
I hate not you for her proud arrogance. 24

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham
and I,

Are come from visiting his majesty. 32

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment,
lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atone-
ment 36

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your
brothers,

And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! But that will never be. 40

I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:

Who are they that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not? 44
By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
Because I cannot flatter and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, 49
I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd 52
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks
your Grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee
wrong? 56

Or thee? or thee? or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal person,— Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while, 60
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else, 64
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself
Against my children, brothers, and myself, Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather 68

The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell; the world is grown so bad

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch:

Since every Jack became a gentleman 72

There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester;

You envy my advancement and my friends'.
God grant we never may have need of you! 76

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need
of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions 80
Are daily given to ennoble those That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, 84
I never did incense his majesty

Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury, 88
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean
Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for— 92

Glo. She may, Lord Rivers! why, who knows
not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein, 96
And lay those honours on your high deserts.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she! marry with a
king, 100

A bachelor, a handsome stripling too.

I wis your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs;
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty 105

Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.
I had rather be a country servantmaid

Than a great queen, with this condition, 108

To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apart.] And lessen'd be that small,
God, I beseech him!

Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me. 112

Glo. What! threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower. 116

'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. [Apart.] Out, devil! I remember them too well:

Thou kill'st my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. 120

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband
king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs,

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends; 124

To royalize his blood I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his,
or thine.

Glo. In all which time you and your husband
Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster; 128

And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere now, and what you are;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am. 133

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick,

Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!— 136

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.

I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's; 140

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is. 144

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy
days

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,

We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king;

So should we you, if you should be our king. 148

Glo. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar.

Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king,

As little joy you may suppose in me 153

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. As little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless. 156

I can no longer hold me patient. [Advancing.

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from
me!

Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects, 161

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?

Ah! gentle villain, do not turn away.

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight? 164

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment 168

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou ow'st to me;

And thou, a kingdom; all of you, allegiance:

This sorrow that I have by right is yours, 172

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his war-like brows
with paper,

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his
eyes; 176

And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fall'n upon
thee; 180

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. 185

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all before
I came, 188

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
 Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,
 Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
 Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?
 Why then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses! 196

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,
 As ours by murder, to make him a king!
 Edward, thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
 For Edward, my son, which was Prince of Wales,
 Die in his youth by like untimely violence! 201
 Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
 Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
 Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss, 204

And see another, as I see thee now,
 Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
 Long die thy happy days before thy death;
 And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief, 208
 Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
 Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—
 And so wast thou, Lord Hastings,—when my
 son

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
 him, 212

That none of you may live your natural age,
 But by some unlook'd accident cut off.

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me. 216

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
 Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
 O! let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
 And then hurl down their indignation 220

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace.
 The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st
 And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, 225
 Unless it be while some tormenting dream
 Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog! 228
 Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
 The slave of nature and the son of hell!

Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!
 Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins! 232

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—
Glo. Margaret!

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Hal!

Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy then, for I did think

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply. 237

O! let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in 'Margaret.'

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. 240

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
 Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?

Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.
 The day will come that thou shalt wish for me

To help thee curse this pois'nous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,

Lest to thy harm thou move our patience. 248

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty.

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects: 252

O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace! Master marquess, you are malapert:

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current. 256

O! that your young nobility could judge
 What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,

And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

Glo. Good counsel, marry: learn it, learn it, marquess. 261

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high,

Our aery buildeth in the cedar's top, 264

And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; alas!
 alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
 Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy
 wrath 268

Hath in eternal darkness folded up.

Your aery buildeth in our aery's nest:

O God! that seest it, do not suffer it;

As it was won with blood, lost be it so! 272

Buck. Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to
 me:

Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
 And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame; 277

And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham! I'll kiss thy hand, 280

In sign of league and amity with thee:

Now fair befall thee and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse. 284

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.

O Buckingham! take heed of yonder dog: 289

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites

His venom tooth will rankle to the death:

Have not to do with him, beware of him; 292

Sin, death and hell have set their marks on him,

And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord. 296

Q. Mar. What! dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?

O! but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow, 300

And say poor Margaret was a prophetess.

Live each of you the subject to his hate,

And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit.

Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses. 304

Riv. And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her: by God's holy mother,

She hath had too much wrong, and I repent

My part thereof that I have done to her. 308

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.

I was too hot to do somebody good,

That is too cold in thinking of it now. 312

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains:

God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion, 316

To pray for them that have done scath to us.

Glo. So do I ever [Aside], being well-advis'd;
For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you;
And for your Grace; and you, my noble lords. 321

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go with me?

Riv. We wait upon your Grace.

[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad 325

I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,

I do beweepe to many simple gulls; 328

Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;

And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies

That stir the king against the duke my brother.

Now they believe it; and withal whet me 332

To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;

But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,

Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:

And thus I clothe my naked villany 336

With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ,

And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft! here come my executioners.

How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates! 340

Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

First Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon; I have it here about me: [Gives the warrant.

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place. 345

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,

Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps 348

May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

First Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;

Talkers are no good doers: be assur'd

We go to use our hands and not our tongues. 352

Glo. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes fall tears:

I like you, lads; about your business straight;

Go, go, dispatch.

First Murd. We will, my noble lord.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your Grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,

So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man, 4

I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me. 8

Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
And in my company my brother Gloucester,
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk 12
Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster,
That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along 16
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main. 20
Lord, Lord! methought what pain it was to drown:

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wracks; 24
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea. 28

Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep, 32
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of
death

To gaze upon those secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive 36

To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood
Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk, 40
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;

O! then began the tempest to my soul. 44
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cried aloud, 'What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?'
And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by 52
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair

Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,
'Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd
Clarence,

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;— 56
Seize on him! Furies, take him unto tor-
ment.'

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise 60
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
you; 64

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O Brakenbury! I have done these things

That now give evidence against my soul,
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me.
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:

O! spare my guiltless wife and my poor children. 72

I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord. God give your Grace good rest! [CLARENCE sleeps. 76

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours, 76
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations, 80
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles and low names,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. Ho! who's here? 84

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

First Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What! so brief? 88

Sec. Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.—

Let him see our commission, and talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to BRAKENBURY, who reads it.

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands: 92
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys.
I'll to the king; and signify to him 96
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

First Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom: fare you well. [Exit BRAKENBURY.]

Sec. Murd. What! shall we stab him as he sleeps? 101

First Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

Sec. Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake till the judgment-day. 105

First Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabbed him sleeping.

Sec. Murd. The urging of that word 'judgment' hath bred a kind of remorse in me. 110

First Murd. What! art thou afraid?

Sec. Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

First Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute. 116

Sec. Murd. So I am, to let him live.

First Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester, and tell him so.

Sec. Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little: I hope my holy humour will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now? 124

Sec. Murd. Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward when the deed's done. 128

Sec. Murd. 'Zounds! he dies: I had forgot the reward.

First Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

Sec. Murd. In the Duke of Gloucester's purse.

First Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

Sec. Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go: there's few or none will entertain it. 136

First Murd. What if it come to thee again?

Sec. Murd. I'll not meddle with it; it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles; it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found; it beggars any man that keeps it; it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well, endeavours to trust to himself and live without it. 149

First Murd. 'Zounds! it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

Sec. Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

First Murd. Tut, I am strong-framed; he cannot prevail with me. 156

Sec. Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we to this gear?

First Murd. Take him over the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

Sec. Murd. O, excellent device! make a sop of him. 164

First Murd. Soft! he wakes.

Sec. Murd. Strike!

First Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine. 169

First Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou? 172

First Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

First Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble. 176

First Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both Murd. To, to, to— 181

Clar. To murder me?

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, 184

And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

First Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again. 188

Sec. Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men

To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that doth accuse me? 192

What lawful quest have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Before I be convict by course of law, 196

To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope to have redemption

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart and lay no hands on me; 200

The deed you undertake is damnable.

First Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

Sec. Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassall the great King of kings 204

Hath in the table of his law commanded That thou shalt not murder: will you, then, Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand, To hurl upon their heads that break his law. 209

Sec. Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing and for murder too: Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight 212 In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

First Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

Didst break that vow, and, with thy treacherous blade

Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son. 216

Sec. Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

First Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us,

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed? 220

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:

He sends you not to murder me for this;

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed, 224

O! know you yet, he doth it publicly:

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;

He needs no indirect or lawless course

To cut off those that have offended him. 228

First Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet, That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage. 232

First Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well. 236

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,

Who shall reward you better for my life

Than Edward will for tidings of my death. 240

Sec. Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloucester hates you.

Clar. O, no! he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York 244

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm, And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,

He little thought of this divided friendship:

Bid Gloucester think on this, and he will weep.

First Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep. 249

Clar. O! do not slander him, for he is kind.

First Murd. Right;

As snow in harvest. Thou deceiv'st thyself: 252 'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune, And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,

That he would labour my delivery. 256

First Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

Sec. Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul, 260

To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,

That thou wilt war with God by murdering me?

O! sirs, consider, he that set you on 264

To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

Sec. Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent and save your souls.

First Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish. 268

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,

Being pent from liberty, as I am now,

If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life? 272

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;

O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,

As you would beg, were you in my distress: 276

A begging prince what beggar pities not?

Sec. Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

First Murd. [Stabs him.] Take that, and that: if all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. 280

[Exit with the body.]

Sec. Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands Of this most grievous murder.

Re-enter first Murderer.

First Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? 284

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

Sec. Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;
For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.]

First Murd. So do not I: go, coward as thou art. 289

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my meed, I will away; 292
For this will out, and here I must not stay.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others.

K. Edw. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work.

You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassy
From my Redeemer to redeem me hence; 4
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love. 8

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;
And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before
your king; 12

Lest he that is the supreme King of kings
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt
in this,

Nor you, son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you;
You have been factious one against the other. 20
Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine! 24

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [They embrace.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league 29

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,

And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. [To the QUEEN.] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate 32

Upon your Grace, but with all duteous love
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend, 36
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! This do I beg of God,
When I am cold in love to you or yours. 40

[They embrace.]

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here
To make the blessed period of this peace. 44

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen;

And princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent
the day. 48

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign
lord. 52

Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage, 56
Have aught committed that is hardly borne

By any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me to be at enmity; 60

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham, 64

If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;

Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey, of you,

That all without desert have frown'd on me;

Of you, Lord Woodville, and Lord Scales, of you;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all. 69

I do not know that Englishman alive

With whom my soul is any jot at odds

More than the infant that is born to-night: 72

I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:

I would to God all strifes were well compounded.

My sov'reign lord, I do beseech your highness 76

To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?

Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead? 80
[They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corpse.

K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is
this!

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest? 84

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order
died, 88

And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,

That came too lag to see him buried.

God grant that some, less noble and less loyal, 92

Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,

Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,

And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sov'reign, for my service
done! 96

K. Edw. I prithee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's
life; 100

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman

Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?

My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought;

And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who su'd to me for him? who, in my wrath,

Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd? 108

Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?

Who told me how the poor soul did forsake

The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?

Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury, 112

When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,

And said, 'Dear brother, live, and be a king?'

Who told me, when we both lay in the field

Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me 116

Even in his garments; and did give himself,

All thin and naked, to the numb cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you 120
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.

But when your carters or your waiting-vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd

The precious image of our dear Redeemer, 124
You straight are on your knees for pardon,

pardon;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you;

But for my brother not a man would speak,

Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself 128

For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all

Have been beholding to him in his life,

Yet none of you would once beg for his life.

O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold 132

On me and you and mine and yours for this.

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O! poor
Clarence!

[Exeunt KING EDWARD, QUEEN, HASTINGS, RIVERS, DORSET, and GREY.]

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness. Mark'd you not

How that the guilty kindred of the queen 136

Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence'
death?

O! they did urge it still unto the king:

God will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go

To comfort Edward with our company? 140

Buck. We wait upon your Grace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE.

Boy. Goodgrandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you wring your hands, and beat your breast,

And cry—'O Clarence, my unhappy son?' 4

Boy. Why do you look on us, and shake
your head,

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,

If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
much; 8

I do lament the sickness of the king,

As loath to lose him, not your father's death;

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.

Boy. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead. 12

The king mine uncle is to blame for it:

God will revenge it; whom I will importune

With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Daugh. And so will I. 16

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:

Incapable and shallow innocents,

You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

Boy. Gramam, we can; for my good uncle
Gloucester 20

Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek; 24
Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle shape,

And with a virtuous vizard hide deep vice. 28
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Boy. Think you my uncle did dissemble, gramam?

Duch. Ay, boy. 32

Boy. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is
this?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, distractedly; RIVERS and DORSET following her.

Q. Eliz. Oh! who shall hinder me to wail and weep,

To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul, 36
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence:

Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead! 40
Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
If you will live, lament: if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the
king's; 44

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah! so much interest have I in thy sorrow

As I had title in thy noble husband. 48
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his images;
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death, 52

And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms, 57

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs,
Clarence and Edward. O! what cause have I—
Thine being but a moiety of my grief— 60

To overgo thy plaints, and drown thy cries!

Boy. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's
death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd; 64

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept.

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;

I am not barren to bring forth complaints:

All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon, 69
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the
world!

Ah! for my husband, for my dear Lord Edward!

Chil. Ah! for our father, for our dear Lord
Clarence! 72

Duch. Alas! for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and
he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone. 76

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.
Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.

Alas! I am the mother of these griefs: 80

Their woes are parcell'd, mine are general.

She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I; 84
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:

Alas! you three, on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears; I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentation. 88

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness his doing.
In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt 92
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful
mother, 96

Of the young prince your son: send straight for
him;

Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives.
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and Others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing them.
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy; 104
I did not see your Grace: humbly on my knees
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee! and put meekness in thy mind,
Love, charity, obedience, and true duty. 108
Glo. Amen; [Aside.] and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buck You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers, 112

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son. 116

The broken rancour of your high-swoln hearts,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetch'd 121

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out; 125

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd;

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself, 129
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of us; 132

And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put

To no apparent likelihood of breach, 136
Which haply by much company might be urg'd:

Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I. 140

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you my mother, will you go
To give your censures in this business? 144

[Exeunt all except BUCKINGHAM and GLOUCESTER.]

Buck. Mylord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home:

For by the way I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of, 148
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet! My dear cousin,

I, as a child, will go by thy direction. 152
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

First Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: whither away so fast?

Sec. Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

First Cit. Ay; that the king is dead.

Sec. Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better: 4

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter a third Citizen.

Third Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

First Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

Third Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?

Sec. Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help the while! 8

Third Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

First Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

Third Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

Sec. Cit. In him there is a hope of government, 12

That in his nonage council under him,
And in his full and ripen'd years himself,
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well.

First Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth 16

Was crown'd at Paris but at nine months old.

Third Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends, God wot;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel; then the king 20
Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace.

First Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

Third Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,

Or by his father there were none at all; 24
For emulation, who shall now be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
O! full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester!

And the queen's sons and brothers haught and proud; 28

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before.

First Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

Third Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks; 32
When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand;
When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?
Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.
All may be well; but, if God sort it so, 36
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

Sec. Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of
fear:

You cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread. 40

Third Cit. Before the days of change, still is
it so:

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see
The waters swell before a boisterous storm. 44
But leave it all to God. Whither away?

Sec. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

Third Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Northampton;

At Stony-Stratford they do rest to-night:
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the
prince. 4

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say my son of
York

Hath almost overtaken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin, it is good to grow. 9

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More than my brother: 'Ay,' quoth my uncle
Gloucester, 12

'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow
apace:'

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold 16

In him that did object the same to thee:
He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a-growing, and so leisurely,
That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious
madam. 21

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout, 24
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd
mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I prithee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old: 28
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee
this?

York. Grandam, his nurse. 32

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy: go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child. 36

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news? 41

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes, 44
Gloucester and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can I have disclos'd:
Why or for what the nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord. 48

Q. Eliz. Ah me! I see the ruin of my house!
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;

Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne: 52

Welcome, destruction, death, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld! 56

My husband lost his life to get the crown,
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils 60

Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,
Blood to blood, self against self: O! preposterous

And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen; 64
Or let me die, to look on death no more.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the QUEEN.] My gracious lady, go;
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours! 72
Come; I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Street.

*The Trumpets sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, CATES-
BY, CARDINAL BOURCHIER, and Others.*

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts'
sovereign;

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the
way 4

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:

I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit: 8

No more can you distinguish of a man

Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles which you want were dangerous;

Your Grace attended to their sugar'd words, 13

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:

God keep you from them, and from such false
friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none. 16

Glo. My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your Grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all.

I thought my mother and my brother York 20

Would long ere this have met us on the way:
Fie! what a slug is Hastings, that he comes
not

To tell us whether they will come or no.

Enter HASTINGS.

Buck. And in good time here comes the sweating lord. 24

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows,
not I,

The queen your mother, and your brother York,
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince 28

Would fain have come with me to meet your
Grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers! Lord Cardinal, will your Grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him,

And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory 37

Can from his mother win the Duke of York,
Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate

To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid 40

We should infringe the holy privilege

Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land

Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my
lord, 44

Too ceremonious and traditional:

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,

You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted 48

To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place

And those who have the wit to claim the place:

This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd
it;

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:

Then, taking him from thence that is not there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men,

But sanctuary children ne'er till now. 56

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. 60

[Exeunt CARDINAL BOURCHIER and HASTINGS.

Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,

Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two 64
Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place:
Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord? 69

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place,

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported 72
Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd,

Methinks the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, 77

Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. [Aside.] So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle? 80

Glo. Isay, without characters, fame lives long.

[Aside.] Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity,
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man;
With what his valour did enrich his wit, 85
His wit set down to make his valour live:

Death makes no conquest of this conqueror,
For now he lives in fame, though not in life. 88
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,—

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again, 92
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. [Aside.] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and CARDINAL BOURCHIER.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother? 96

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is
yours:

Too late he died that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty. 100

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said that idle weeds are fast in growth:

The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle? 105

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you than I.

Glo. He may command me as my sovereign;
But you have power in me as in a kinsman. 109

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother? 112

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it.

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your Grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier. 121

Glo. What! would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you, as you call me.

Glo. How? 124

York. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with
him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear
with me: 128

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me.

Because that I am little, like an ape,

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp provided wit he reasons! 132

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,

He prettily and aptly taunts himself:

So cunning and so young is wonderful.

Glo. My lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham 137
Will to your mother, to entreat of her

To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.

York. What! will you go unto the Tower,
my lord? 140

Prince. My Lord Protector needs will have
it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, what would you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost:
My grandam told me he was murder'd there. 145

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.

But come, my lord; and, with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[*Sennet. Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER,
BUCKINGHAM, and CATESBY.*]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating
York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother 152
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O! 'tis a parlous boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable:
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe. 156

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby; thou art sworn

As deeply to effect what we intend
As closely to conceal what we impart.

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the
way: 160

What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle? 164

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley?
what will he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby, 169

And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings,

How he doth stand affected to our purpose;

And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, 172
To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,

Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:

If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling, 176

Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,

And give us notice of his inclination;

For we to-morrow hold divided councils,

Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. 180

Glo. Commend me to Lord William: tell him,
Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries

To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle;

And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, 184

Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep? 188

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both. [Exit CATESBY.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head; something we will determine: 193

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me

The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables

Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your Grace's
hand. 197

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards

We may digest our complots in some form. 200

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Before LORD HAST-INGS' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. [Knocking.] My lord! my lord!

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock? 4

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.

First, he commends him to your noble self. 8

Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this
night

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm:

Besides, he says there are two councils held; 12

And that may be determin'd at the one

Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,

If you will presently take horse with him, 16

And with all speed post with him towards the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;

Bid him not fear the separated councils: 20

His honour and myself are at the one,

And at the other is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us

Whereof I shall not have intelligence. 24

Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance:

And for his dreams, I wonder he's so fond

To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers.

To fly the boar before the boar pursues, 28

Were to incense the boar to follow us

And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
 And we will both together to the Tower, ³²
 Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.
Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!
Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring. ³⁶
 What news, what news, in this our tottering
 state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
 And I believe will never stand upright
 Till Richard wear the garland of the realm. ⁴⁰ Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.
Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd. ⁴⁴
 But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof:
 And thereupon he sends you this good news, ⁴⁸
 That this same very day your enemies,
 The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that
 news,

Because they have been still my adversaries; ⁵²
 But that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
 To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
 God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind! ⁵⁶

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence,
 That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.
 Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
 I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious
 lord,

When men are unprepar'd and look not for it.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out ⁶⁴

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill do With some men else, who think themselves as safe

As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
 To princely Richard and to Buckingham. ⁶⁸

Cate. The princes both make high account
 of you;

[Aside.] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, man? ⁷²

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow
 Catesby:

You may jest on, but by the holy rood,
 I do not like these several councils, I. ⁷⁶

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours;

And never, in my days, I do protest,
 Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure, ⁸⁰
 I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,

Were jocund and suppos'd their state was sure,

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust; ⁸⁴
 But yet you see how soon the day o'ercast.

This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;
 Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!

What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent. ⁸⁸

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads,

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats. ⁹²

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exeunt STANLEY and CATESBY.]

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with
 thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask. ⁹⁶

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me
 now

Than when I met thee last where now we meet:

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
 By the suggestion of the queen's allies; ¹⁰⁰

But now, I tell thee,—keep it to thyself,—
 This day those enemies are put to death,

And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it to your honour's good content! ¹⁰⁴

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: there, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse.]

Purs. God save your lordship. [Exit.]

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart. 108

I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest:
Your honour hath no shriving work in hand. 113

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower? 116

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I shall not stay:

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. [Aside.] And supper too, although thou know'st it not. 120

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter RATCLIFF, with halberds, carrying RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to death.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack of you! 4

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison! 8

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the Second here was hack'd to death;
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, 12

We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son. 16

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings: O! remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us;
And for my sister and her princely sons, 20
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan; let us here embrace: 24

And take our leave until we meet in heaven. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. The Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, and Others, sitting at a table. Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. My lords, at once: the cause why we are met

Is to determine of the coronation:

In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time? 4

Stan. It is; and wants but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward with the noble duke? 8

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces; for our hearts,

He knows no more of mine than I of yours;

Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine. 12

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well;

But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd 16

His gracious pleasure any way therein:

But you, my noble lords, may name the time;

And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part. 20

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design, 24
Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,

I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king. 28

Glo. Then my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder:

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.

My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,

I saw good strawberries in your garden there; 32

I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.]

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

[Takes him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business, 36

And finds the testy gentleman so hot,

That he will lose his head ere give consent

His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,

Shall lose the royalty of England's throne. 40

Buck. Withdraw yourself a while; I'll go with you.

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.]

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;

For I myself am not so well provided. 44

As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord, the Duke of Gloucester?

I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning: 48

There's some conceit or other likes him well,

When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom

Can lesser hide his hate or love than he; 52

For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceiv'd you in his face

By any livelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended; 56

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve

That do conspire my death with devilish plots

Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd 60

Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my lord,

Makes me most forward in this princely presence

To doom th' offenders, whosoe'er they be: 64

I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm

Is like a blasted sapling, wither'd up: 68

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch

Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore,

That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this thing, my noble lord,— 72

Glo. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs? Thou art a traitor:

Off with his head! now, by Saint Paul, I swear,

I will not dine until I see the same. 76

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done:

The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exeunt all but HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and LOVEL.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;

For I, too fond, might have prevented this. 80

Stanley did dream the boar did raze his helm;

And I did scorn it, and disdain'd to fly.

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,

And startled when he looked upon the Tower, 84

As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O! now I need the priest that spake to me:

I now repent I told the pursuivant,

As too triumphing, how mine enemies 88

To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd

And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O Margaret, Margaret! now thy heavy curse

Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head. 92

Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shrift, he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal man,

Which we more hunt for than the grace of

God! 96

Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;

Ready with every nod to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep. 100

Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England!

I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee

That ever wretched age hath look'd upon. 104

Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head:

They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—London. The Tower Walls.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror? 4

Buck. Tut! I can counterfeit the deep tragedian,

Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks 8

Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what! is Catesby gone? 12

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord Mayor,—

Glo. Look to the drawbridge there!

Buck. Hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls. 16

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee; here are enemies.

Buck. God and our innocency defend and guard us!

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS' head.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel. 20

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor, The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest harmless creature 24
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue, 28

That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shore's wife,
He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor 32
That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,— Were't not that by great preservation
We live to tell it, that the subtle traitor 36
This day had plotted, in the council-house,

To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester?

May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks or infidels? 40

Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our person's safety, 44
Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;

And your good Graces both have well proceeded,

To warn false traitors from the like attempts. 48
I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should die,

Until your lordship came to see his end; 52
Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
Something against our meaning, hath prevented:

Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confess 56
The manner and the purpose of his treason;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconster us in him, and wail his death. 60

May. But, my good lord, your Grace's word shall serve,

As well as I had seen and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens 64
With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,

To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our intent, 68

Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.]

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post: 72

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:

Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying he would make his son 76

Heir to the crown; meaning indeed his house,
Which by the sign thereof was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury
And bestial appetite in change of lust; 80

Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
wives,

Even where his raging eye or savage heart

Without control lusted to make a prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person: 84

Tell them, when that my mother went with child

Of that insatiate Edward, noble York

My princely father then had wars in France;

And, by true computation of the time, 88

Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,

Being nothing like the noble duke my father.

Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off; 92

Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden fee for which I plead

Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu. 96

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied

With reverend fathers and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock 100

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords. [Exit.]

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw;

[To CATESBY.] Go thou to Friar Penker; bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.

[Exeunt LOVEL and CATESBY.]

Now will I in, to take some privy order, 105

To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;

And to give notice that no manner person

Have any time recourse unto the princes. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings;

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,

That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's:

And mark how well the sequel hangs together. 4

Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,

For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me.

The precedent was full as long a-doing;

And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, 8

Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross

That cannot see this palpable device?

Yet who so bold but says he sees it not? 12

Bad is the world; and all will come to naught,

When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. The Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord, The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children? 4

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France;

The insatiate greediness of his desires,

And his enforcement of the city wives; 8

His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,

As being got, your father then in France,

And his resemblance, being not like the duke:

Withal I did infer your lineaments, 12

Being the right idea of your father,

Both in your form and nobleness of mind;

Laid open all your victories in Scotland,

Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, 16

Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;

Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose

Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse;

And when my oratory drew toward end, 20

I bade them that did love their country's good

Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal king!'

Glo. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word; 24

But, like dumb statuas or breathing stones,

Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.

Which when I saw, I reprehended them;

And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence: 28

His answer was, the people were not wont

To be spoke to but by the recorder.

Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again:

'Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferr'd;' 32

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.

When he had done, some followers of mine own,

At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,

And some ten voices cried, 'God save King

Richard!' 36

And thus I took the vantage of those few,

'Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I;

'This general applause and cheerful shout

Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard:'

And even here brake off, and came away. 41

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they!

would they not speak?

Will not the mayor then and his brethren come?

Buck. The mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear; 44

Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit:
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my
lord:

For on that ground I'll make a holy descendant: 48
And be not easily won to our requests;
Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take
it.

Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them
As I can say nay to thee for myself, 52
No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go, up to the leads! the Lord
Mayor knocks. [Exit GLOUCESTER.]

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.
Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal. 56

Enter, from the Castle, CATESBY.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate. He doth entreat your Grace, my noble
lord,
To visit him to-morrow or next day.

He is within, with two right reverend fathers, 60
Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
duke: 64

Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his
Grace. 68

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.
[Exit.]

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation; 72
Not dallying with a brace of courtézans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul. 76
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof:
But sore, I fear, we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay! 80

Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes again.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his Grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him, 84
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
My lord, he fears you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me that I mean no good to him. 88
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return, and tell his Grace.

[Exit CATESBY.]

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them
thence; 92

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER, in a gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
prince,

To stay him from the fall of vanity; 96
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True ornament to know a holy man.

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests, 100
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, 104
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your Grace's pleasure?
Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, 108

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgracious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord: would it might please your Grace, 113
On our entreaties to amend your fault!

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian
land?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign 116

The supreme seat, the throne majestical,
The sceptred office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house, 120

To the corruption of a blemish'd stock;
Whiles, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,—
Which here we waken to our country's good,—
This noble isle doth want her proper limbs; 124
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. 128
Which to recure we heartily solicit

Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land;
Not as protector, steward, substitute, 132
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens, 136
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just cause come I to move your Grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence 140
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fifteth my degree or your condition:
If not to answer, you might haply think
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded 144
To bear the golden yoke of sov' reigny,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me, 148
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you. 152

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert
Unmeritable shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown, 156
As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea, 161
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of
me; 164

And much I need to help you, were there need;
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty, 168
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars;
Which God defend that I should wring from
him! 172

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your Grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son: 176
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow,
And afterward by substitute betroth'd 180
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 184
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loath'd bigamy: 188
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive, 192
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal, 196
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you. 200

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O! make them joyful: grant their lawful suit:

Glo. Alas! why would you heap those cares
on me?

I am unfit for state and majesty: 204
I do beseech you, take it not amiss,
I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it, as, in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart 209
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And egally, indeed, to all estates, 212
Yet whether you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house: 216
And in this resolution here we leave you.
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and Citizens.]

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince; accept their suit:

If you deny them, all the land will rue it. 220
Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call them again: I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreats,
[Exit CATESBY.]

Albeit against my conscience and my soul. 224

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wh'er I will or no, 228
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,

Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God doth know, and you may partly see, 233
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your Grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title:
Long live King Richard, England's worthy king!
All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be
crown'd? 240

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have
it so.

Buck. To-morrow then we will attend your
Grace:

And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Glo. [To the Bishops.] Come, let us to our holy work again. 244

Farewell, my cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUESS OF DORSET; on the other, ANNE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender princes.
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your Graces both 5
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister!
whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess, 8

Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together:—

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes. 12
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them: 16
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean the Lord Protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see
them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their
mother:

Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame, 24

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so:
I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.
[Exit.]

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour
hence, 28

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother,
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.

[To the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,
There to be crowned Richard's royal queen. 32

Q. Eliz. Ah! cut my lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O! unpleasing
news! 36

Dor. Be of good cheer: mother, how fares
your Grace?

Q. Eliz. O, Dorset! speak not to me, get thee
gone;

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels:
Thy mother's name is ominous to children. 40

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell:

Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou increase the number of the dead, 44

And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel,
madam.

[To DORSET.] Take all the swift advantage of the hours; 48

You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:

Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery! 52
O! my accursed womb, the bed of death,

A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavoided eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent. 56

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.
O! would to God that the inclusive verge

Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel to sear me to the brain. 60

Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say 'God save the queen!'

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. 64

Anne. No! why? When he, that is my husband now

Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,

Which issu'd from my other angel husband, 68
And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd;

O! when I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish, 'Be thou,' quoth I, 'accurs'd,
For making me so young, so old a widow! 72
And, when thou wedd'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed;

And be thy wife—if any be so mad—
More miserable by the life of thee
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death! 76

Lo! ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse:
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest;
For never yet one hour in his bed

Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick, 85
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours. 88

Q. Eliz. Farewell! thou woeful welcomer of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. [To DORSET.] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!

[To ANNE.] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee! 92

[To Q. ELIZABETH.] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wrack'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet, look back with me unto the Tower. 97

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls,
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! 100
Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
For tender princes, use my babies well.

So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Sennet. RICHARD, in pomp, crowned: BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and Others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham.

Buck. My gracious sovereign!

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. [He ascends the throne.] Thus high, by thy advice,

And thy assistance, is King Richard seated: 4
But shall we wear these glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah! Buckingham, now do I play the touch, 8

To try if thou be current gold indeed:
Young Edward lives: think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king. 12

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live! 'True, noble prince!' 16

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:
Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead;
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What sayst thou now? speak suddenly, be brief. 20

Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes:

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord, 24

Before I positively speak in this:

I will resolve you herein presently. [Exit. Cate.]

[Aside to another.] The king is angry: see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. [Descends from his throne.] I will converse with iron-witted fools 28

And unrespective boys: none are for me
That look into me with considerate eyes.

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.
Boy! 32

Page. My lord!

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman, 36

Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit:

Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrell.

K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither. [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsel.
Hath he so long held out with me untir'd, 44
And stops he now for breath? well, be it so.

Enter STANLEY.

How now, Lord Stanley! what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The Marquess Dorset, as I hear, is fled 48
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,

That Anne my wife is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close. 52
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence' daughter:

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give out 56

That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me. [Exit CATESBY.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter, 60
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin: 64
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRRELL.

Is thy name Tyrrell?

Tyr. James Tyrrell, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord. 68

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it: two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon. 73
Tyrrell, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them. 76

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrell:

Go, by this token: rise, and lend thine ear.

[Whispers.]

There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it. 80

Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond. 84

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; 88

The earldom of Hereford and the moveables

Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. 92

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me, Henry the Sixth

Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy. 96

A king! perhaps—

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him? 100

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rougemont: at which name I started, 104

Because a bard of Ireland told me once

I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock? 108

Buck. I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what is't o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike? 112

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whe'r you will,
or no. 116

K. Rich. Thou troublest me: I am not in the vein. [Exeunt KING RICHARD and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service

With such contempt? made I him king for
this?

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone 120
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter TYRRELL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;

The most arch deed of piteous massacre

That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn 4

To do this piece of ruthless butchery,

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,

Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,

Wept like to children in their death's sad story.

'Oh! thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay the gentle
babes:' 9

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms:

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, 12

Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay;

Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost chang'd
my mind;

But, O, the devil'—there the villain stopp'd; 16

When Dighton thus told on: 'We smothered

The most replenished sweet work of nature,

That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.'

Hence both are gone with conscience and
remorse; 20

They could not speak; and so I left them both,

To bear this tidings to the bloody king:

And here he comes.

Enter KING RICHARD.

All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrell, am I happy in thy
news? 24

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then,

For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrell?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried
them; 29

But how or in what place I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrell, soon at after-
supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their
death. 32

Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close; 36

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,

And Anne my wife hath bid the world good
night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims 40

At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,

And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,

To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My lord! 44

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Cate. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Richmond;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy
Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth. 48

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.

Come; I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay: 52

Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary:

Then fiery expedition be my wing,

Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!

Go, muster men: my counsel is my shield; 56

We must be brief when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow

And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines slily have I lurk'd

To watch the waning of mine enemies. 4

A dire induction am I witness to,

And will to France, hoping the consequence

Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.

Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes
here? 8

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah! my poor princes! ah, my tender babes,

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets,
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, 12
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation.

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night. 16
Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet;
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. 21

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle lambs,
And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done? 24

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,
Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,
Brief abstract and record of tedious days, 28
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]
Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!

Q. Eliz. Ah! that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat; 32
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.

Ah! who hath any cause to mourn but I?

[Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverend,
Give mine the benefit of seniory, 36
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand,
If sorrow can admit society.

[Sitting down with them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; 40
I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him; 44

I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death: 48

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood,
That foul defacer of God's handiwork,
That excellent grand-tyrant of the earth, 52
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.
O! upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee that this carnal cur 56
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan.

Duch. O! Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes:

God witness with me, I have wept for thine. 60

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;
Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward; 64
Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss:

Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this tragic play, 68
The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,

Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves.
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,
Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls 72
And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence. 76
Cancel his bond of life, dear God! I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead.

Q. Eliz. O! thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse 80
That bottled spider, that foul bunchback'd toad.

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was; 84
The flattering index of a direful pageant;
One heav'd a-high to be hurl'd down below;
A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble,
A sign of dignity, a garish flag, 89

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? 92

Where are thy children? wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues and kneels and cries God save the queen?

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?

Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee? 96

Decline all this, and see what now thou art:
For happy wife, a most distressed widow;
For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues; 100
For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care;
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;
For one commanding all, obey'd of none. 104
Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time;
Having no more but thought of what thou wert,

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? 110
Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;
From which even here, I slip my wearied head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee. 113
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance:

These English woes shall make me smile in France.

Q. Eliz. O thou, well skill'd in curses, stay awhile, 116

And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,
And he that slew them fouler than he is: 121
Bettering thy loss makes the bad causer worse:
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O! quicken them with thine! 124

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit.]

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,
Airy succeders of intestate joys, 128

Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what they do impart

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me, 132

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd. [A trumpet heard.]

The trumpet sounds: be copious in exclams.

Enter KING RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? 136

Duch. O! she that might have intercepted thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done!

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown, 140

Where should be branded, if that right were right,

Theslaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children? 144

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings? 148

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!

[Flourish. Alarums.]

Either be patient, and entreat me fair, 152

Or with the clamorous report of war

Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself. 156

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak!

K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear. 160

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony. 164

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well,

Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me; 168

Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;

Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild and furious;

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous;

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, 172

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred:
What comfortable hour canst thou name
That ever grac'd me in thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your Grace 176

To breakfast once forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your eye,
Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.
Strike up the drum!

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak. 180

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word;

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So!

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance, 184

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish
And never look upon thy face again.

Therefore take with thee my most grievous curse,
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more 189
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies 193
And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend.
[Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse 197

Abides in me: I say amen to her. [Going.]

K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must talk a word
with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal
blood 200

For thee to slaughter: for my daughters,
Richard,

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping
queens;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, 204

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O! let her live,

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself as false to Edward's bed; 208
Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is of royal blood. 212

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo! at their births good stars were opposite! 216

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death, 220
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life. 224
Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart, 228
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death, 233

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise 236

And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd.

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven, 240

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of
fortune, 244

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:

Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine? 248

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and
all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs 252

Which thou supposest I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. 256

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul:
 So from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers; 260
 And from my heart's love I do thank thee for it.
K. Rich. Be not too hasty to confound my meaning:
 I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter, And do intend to make her Queen of England.
Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king? 265
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who else should be?
Q. Eliz. What! thou?
K. Rich. Even so: what think you of it? 268
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That I would learn of you, As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers, 272
 A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave Edward and York; then haply will she weep: Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood, 276
 A handkerchief, which, say to her, did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body, And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal. If this inducement move her not to love, 280
 Send her a letter of thy noble deeds; Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence, Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake, Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne. 284
K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not the way
 To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way Unless thou couldst put on some other shape, And not be Richard that hath done all this. 288
K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her?
Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but hate thee,
 Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.
K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended: 292
 Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, Which after-hours give leisure to repent. If I did take the kingdom from your sons, To make amends I'll give it to your daughter. If I have kill'd the issue of your womb, 297

To quicken your increase, I will beget Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter: A grandam's name is little less in love 300
 Than is the doting title of a mother; They are as children but one step below, Even of your mettle, of your very blood; Of all one pain, save for a night of groans 304
 Endur'd of her for whom you bid like sorrow.
 Your children were vexation to your youth, But mine shall be a comfort to your age. The loss you have is but a son being king, 308
 And by that loss your daughter is made queen.
 I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindness as I can. Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul 312
 Leads discontented steps in foreign soil, This fair alliance quickly shall call home To high promotions and great dignity: The king that calls your beauteous daughter wife, 316
 Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother; Again shall you be mother to a king, And all the ruins of distressful times Repair'd with double riches of content. 320
 What! we have many goodly days to see: The liquid drops of tears that you have shed Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl, Advantaging their loan with interest 324
 Of ten times double gain of happiness. Go then, my mother; to thy daughter go: Make hold her bashful years with your experience;
 Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale; 328
 Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys: And when this arm of mine hath chastised 332
 The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come, And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed; To whom I will retail my conquest won, 336
 And she shall be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar.
Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother
 Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle? Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles? Under what title shall I woo for thee, 341
 That God, the law, my honour, and her love Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?
K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance. 344
Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.
K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the king's King forbids.
K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen. 348
Q. Eliz. To wail the title, as her mother doth.
K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.
Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title 'ever' last?
K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end. 352
Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?
K. Rich. As long as heaven and nature lengthens it.
Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.
K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low. 356
Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.
K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.
Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.
K. Rich. Then plainly to her tell my loving tale. 360
Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style.
K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.
Q. Eliz. O, no! my reasons are too deep and dead;
 Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.
K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past. 365
Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heart-strings break.
K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—
Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd. 368
K. Rich. I swear,—
Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath.
 Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour;
 Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue; 371
 Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.
 If something thou wouldst swear to be believ'd,
 Swear, then, by something that thou hast not wrong'd. 374
K. Rich. Now, by the world,—
Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.
K. Rich. My father's death,—
Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.
K. Rich. Then, by myself,—
Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misus'd.
K. Rich. Why, then, by God,—
Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.

If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The unity the king my husband made 380
 Had not been broken, nor my brothers died:
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
 Had grac'd the tender temples of my child, 384
 And both the princes had been breathing here,
 Which now, too tender bed-fellows for dust,
 Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
 What canst thou swear by now?
K. Rich. The time to come. 388
Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast;
 For I myself have many tears to wash
 Hereafter time for time past wrong'd by thee.
 The children live, whose parents thou hast slaughter'd, 392
 Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age:
 The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd,
 Old barren plants, to wail it with their age.
 Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast. 397
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent,
 So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
 Of hostile arms! myself myself confound! 400
 Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
 Day, yield me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest!
 Be opposite all planets of good luck
 To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love, 404
 Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
 I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
 In her consists my happiness and thine;
 Without her, follows to myself, and thee, 408
 Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
 Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
 It cannot be avoided but by this;
 It will not be avoided but by this. 412
 Therefore, dear mother,—I must call you so,—
 Be the attorney of my love to her:
 Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
 Not my deserts, but what I will deserve: 416
 Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish-fond in great designs.
Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?
K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good. 420
Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself?
K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.
Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.
K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them: 424
 Where, in that nest of spicery, they shall breed
 Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly, 429
 And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss; and so farewell.
[Kissing her. Exit QUEEN ELIZABETH.]
 Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman!
Enter RATCLIFF; CATESBY following.
 How now! what news? 433
Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
 Rideth a puissant navy; to the shores
 Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
 Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back. 437
 'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
 And there they hull, expecting but the aid
 Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore. 440
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk:
 Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby; where is he?
Cate. Here, my good lord.
K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.
Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste. 444
K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury:
 When thou com'st thither,—[To CATESBY.]
 Dull, unmindful villain,
 Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure, 448
 What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.
K. Rich. O! true, good Catesby: bid him levy straight
 The greatest strength and power he can make,
 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury. 452
Cate. I go. [Exit.]
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?
K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?
Rat. Your highness told me I should post before. 456
Enter STANLEY.
K. Rich. My mind is chang'd. Stanley, what news with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;
 Nor none so bad but well may be reported.
K. Rich. Hoyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad! 460
 What need'st thou run so many miles about,

When thou mayst tell thy tale the nearest way?
 Once more, what news?
Stan. Richmond is on the seas.
K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him! 464
 White-liver'd runagate! what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.
K. Rich. Well, as you guess?
Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton, 468
 He makes for England, here to claim the crown.
K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?
 Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?
 What heir of York is there alive but we? 472
 And who is England's king but great York's heir?
 Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?
Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.
K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege, 476
 You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.
 Thou wilt revolt and fly to him I fear.
Stan. No, my good lord; therefore mistrust me not.
K. Rich. Where is thy power then to beat him back? 480
 Where be thy tenants and thy followers?
 Are they not now upon the western shore,
 Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?
Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north. 484
K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north
 When they should serve their sovereign in the west?
Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king:
 Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave, 488
 I'll muster up my friends, and meet your Grace,
 Where and what time your majesty shall please.
K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:
 But I'll not trust thee.
Stan. Most mighty sovereign, 492
 You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful.
 I never was nor never will be false.
K. Rich. Go then and muster men: but leave behind
 Your son, George Stanley: look your heart be firm, 496
 Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you. [Exit.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,

As I by friends am well advertised, 500
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,
With many moe confederates are in arms.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms; 504

And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.]

There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.

Third Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty

Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone, 513
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy:

There is my purse, to cure that blow of thine.

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd 516
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Third Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

Fourth Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and Lord Marquess Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms: 520
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,

The Breton navy is dispers'd by tempest.
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore to ask those on the banks 524
If they were his assistants, yea or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham

Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,
Hois'd sail, and made away for Brittany. 528

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms;

If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken, 532

That is the best news: that the Earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford

Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here, 536

A royal battle might be won and lost.

Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. A Room in LORD STANLEY'S House.

Enter STANLEY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:

That in the sty of this most bloody boar
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold:

If I revolt, off goes young George's head; 4
The fear of that holds off my present aid.

So, get thee gone: commend me to thy lord.

Withal, say that the queen hath heartily consented

He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter. 8
But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Ha'rford-west, in Wales.

Stan. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier, 12

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew;

And many other of great name and worth: 16
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withal.

Stan. Well, hie thee to thy lord; I kiss his hand:

My letter will resolve him of my mind. 20
Farewell. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey and Rivers,

Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward, 4

Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice,
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction! 9
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday. 12

This is the day that, in King Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall 16
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.

That high All-Seer which I dallied with 20
Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.

Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters'
bosoms: 24

Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck:
'When he,' quoth she, 'shall split thy heart
with sorrow,

Remember Margaret was a prophetess.'

Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame:
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Plain near Tamworth.

Enter with drum and colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD, SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and Others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,

Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment: 4
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines, 8

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
Is now even in the centre of this isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn: 12
From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war. 16

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand
men,

To fight against this guilty homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear, 20

Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage: then, in God's name, march:

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's
wings;

Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD and Forces; the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, and Others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege. 4

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha!
must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving
lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie to-
night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the KING's tent.

But where to-morrow? Well, all's one for
that. 8

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account;

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want. 13

Up with the tent! Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground;

Call for some men of sound direction: 16

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter on the other side of the field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Officers. Some of the Soldiers pitch RICHMOND's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And, by the bright track of his fiery car, 20

Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standdard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent:

I'll draw the form and model of our battle, 24
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.
My Lord of Oxford, you, Sir William Brandon,
And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me. 28
The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to
him,

And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent. 32
Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me:
Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours
much,—

Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,— 36
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to
him, 40

And give him from me this most needful note.
Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake
it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!
Richm. Good-night, good Captain Blunt.
Come, gentlemen, 44

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;
In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is 't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night. 48
Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver easier than it was,
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness. 52

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;
Use careful watch; choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle
Norfolk. 56

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall 61
Into the blind cave of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. 64
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord
Northumberland? 68

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,
Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine: 72

I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord. 76

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent
And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.

[KING RICHARD retires into his tent.
Exeunt RATCLIFF and CATESBY.]

RICHMOND'S tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!
Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford 81

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy
mother, 84

Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that. The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be, 88
Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war.
I, as I may,—that which I would I cannot,— 92

With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:

But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George, 96

Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell: the leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love
And ample interchange of sweet discourse, 100

Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon:

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu: be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment. 104

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap.

Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,
When I should mount with wings of victory.

Once more, good-night, kind lords and gentlemen.
[Exeunt all but RICHMOND.]

O! thou, whose captain I account myself, 109
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall 112
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory!
To thee I do commend my watchful soul, 116
Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:
Sleeping and waking, O! defend me still!
[Sleeps.]

The Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, Son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy
on thy soul to-morrow!
Think how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth 120
At Tewksbury: despair, therefore, and die!
Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of KING HENRY THE SIXTH rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] When I was mortal, my anointed body 125
By thee was punched full of deadly holes:
Think on the Tower and me; despair and die!
Henry the Sixth bids thee despair and die. 128
[To RICHMOND.] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!
Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be the
king,
Doth comfort thee in thy sleep: live thou and flourish!

The Ghost of CLARENCE rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy
on thy soul to-morrow! 132
I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
[To RICHMOND.] Thou offspring of the house
of Lancaster, 137
The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee:
Good angels guard thy battle! live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN rise.

Ghost of RIVERS. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! 140
Rivers, that died at Pomfret! despair, and die!
Ghost of GREY. [To KING RICHARD.] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair.

Ghost of VAUGHAN. [To KING RICHARD.]

Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear
Let fall thy pointless lance: despair, and die!—
All Three. [To RICHMOND.] Awake! and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom 145
Will conquer him: awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of HASTINGS rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake;
And in a bloody battle end thy days! 148
Think on Lord Hastings, so despair, and die!—
[To RICHMOND.] Quiet, untroubled soul,
awake, awake!
Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young PRINCES rise.

Ghosts. [To KING RICHARD.] Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower: 152
Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die!
[To RICHMOND.] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy; 156
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of LADY ANNE rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife, 160
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
[To RICHMOND.] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep; 165
Dream of success and happy victory!
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown; 168
The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O! in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!
[To RICHMOND.] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid: 174

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. KING RICHARD starts out of his dream.

K. Rich. Give me another horse! bind up my
wounds! 178

Have mercy, Jesu! Soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What! do I fear myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I. 184
Is there a murderer here? No. Yes, I am:
Then fly: what! from myself? Great reason why:

Lest I revenge. What! myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore? for any good
That I myself have done unto myself? 189
O! no: alas! I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain. Yet I lie; I am not. 192
Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain. 196
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree:
Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all, 'Guilty! guilty!'
I shall despair. There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul will pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself? 204
Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent; and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord! 208

K. Rich. 'Zounds! who's there?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn;

Your friends are up, and buckle on their
armour. 212

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I have dream'd a fearful dream.

What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear,—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. 216

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-
night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers

Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; 221
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt.

RICHMOND wakes. Enter OXFORD and Others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond! 224

Richm. Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentle-
men,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, the fairest-boding dreams 228

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,

Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Came to my tent and cried on victory: 232

I promise you, my heart is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four. 236

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his Soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,

The leisure and enforcement of the time

Forbids to dwell on: yet remember this, 240

God and our good cause fight upon our side;

The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard except, those whom we fight against 244

Had rather have us win than him they follow.

For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,

A bloody tyrant and a homicide;

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;

One that made means to come by what he hath, 249

And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set; 252

One that hath ever been God's enemy.

Then, if you fight against God's enemy,

God will in justice, ward you as his soldiers;

If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, 256

You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;

If you do fight against your country's foes,

Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives, 260

Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword,

Your children's children quit it in your age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights,

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords. 265

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt

Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt 268

The least of you shall share his part thereof.

Sound drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!
[Exeunt.]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond? 272

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said
Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd, and said, 'The better for our purpose.'

K. Rich. He was i' the right; and so, indeed, it is. [Clock strikes.

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar. 277
Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago: 280
A black day will it be to somebody.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lower upon our army.
I would these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him. 288

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse.

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain, 292

And thus my battle shall be ordered:

My forward shall be drawn out all in length

Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst: 296

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we will follow

In the main battle, whose puissance on either side 300

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.

This, and Saint George to boot! What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, war-like sovereign.

This found I on my tent this morning. 304

[Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,
For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen; every man to his charge: 308

Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls;

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,

Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe:

Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our
law. 312

March on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his Army.

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?

Remember whom you are to cope withal: 316

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,

A scum of Bretons and base lackey peasants,

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth

To desperate adventures and assur'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest; 321

You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous
wives,

They would restrain the one, distain the other.

And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow, 324

Long kept in Britaine at our mother's cost?

A milksop, one that never in his life

Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the sea again;

Lash hence these overweening rags of France,

These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;

Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,

For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves: 332

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,

And not these bastard Bretons; whom our fathers

Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,

And, on record, left them the heirs of shame. 336

Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?

Ravish our daughters? [Drum afar off.

Hark! I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeo-
men!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;

Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come. 344

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh:
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom: 348

Advance our standards! set upon our foes!

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits upon our helms. 352
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter NORFOLK and Forces; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger:
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights, 4
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse. 8

K. Rich. Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him.— 12
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter from opposite sides KING RICHARD and RICHMOND, and exeunt fighting. Retreat and flourish. Then re-enter RICHMOND, STANLEY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee! 16

Lol here, this long-usurped royalty
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal:
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it. 20

Richm. Great God of heaven, say amen to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town;

Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us. 24
Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births: 28

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled
That in submission will return to us;

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red: 32

Smile, heaven, upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!

What traitor hears me, and says not amen?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd her- self; 36

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,

The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:
All this divided York and Lancaster, 40

Divided in their dire division,
O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true succeeders of each royal house,
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together; 44

And let their heirs—God, if thy will be so,— Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd

peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, 48
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of

blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land's peace! 52

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again:
That she may long live here, God say amen!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE.—Chiefly in London and Westminster; once, at Kimbolton.

PROLOGUE.

*I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow, 4
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject well deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe, 8
May here find truth too. Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling 12
Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow, 16
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, besides forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend, 21*

*Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town, 24
Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat 28
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding day. 32*

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the Palace.

*Enter at one door the DUKE OF NORFOLK; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.
Buck Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,*

Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague 4
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horse-
back; 8

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time 12
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time, pomp was single, but now married
To one above itself. Each following day 16
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders its. To-day the French
All clinkant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain India: every man that stood 21
Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt: the madams, too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear 24
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting. Now this masque
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings, 28
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
Still him in praise; and, being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one; and no discernor Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns— 33

For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd

The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story, 36

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O! you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of every thing 40
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did 44
Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs

Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One certes, that promises no element 48
In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed 52

From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
That such a keech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun, 56
And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these
ends;

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace
Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon 60
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way; 64
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some graver eye

Pierce into that; but I can see his pride 68
Peep through each part of him: whence has he
that?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil, 72
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privy o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry; for the most part such 76
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,—
The honourable board of council out,—
Must fetch him in he papers.

Aber. I do know 80
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O! many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em 84
For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values 88

The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy: That this tempest, 92
Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore 96
The ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor. Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd

At a superfluous rate!

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace, 100
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,—
And take it from a heart that wishes towards
you

Honour and plement safety,—that you read 104
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know his sword 109
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't may be said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, 112 You'll find it wholesome. Lo where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY,—the Purse borne before him,—certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor,
ha?

Where's his examination?

First Secr. Here, so please you. 116

Wol. Is he in person ready?

First Secr. Ay, please your Grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt WOLSEY, and Train.

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd,
and I 120

Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What! are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only 124

Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the
king; 128

I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like 132
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king; 136
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot 140
That it do singe yourself. We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by overrunning. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till it run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench, 148
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow.
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but 152
From sincere motions,—by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel,—I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, 'treasonous.' 156
Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief 160
As able to perform 't, his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview, 165
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.
Buck. Pray give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal 168

The articles o' the combination drew
 As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified
 As he cried, 'Thus let be,' to as much end
 As give a crutch to the dead. But our count-cardinal 172

Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
 Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
 Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
 To the old dam, treason, Charles the emperor,
 Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,—177
 For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
 To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation:
 His fears were, that the interview betwixt 180
 England and France might, through their amity,
 Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
 Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily
 Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow, 184
 Which I do well; for, I am sure the emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd; but when the way was made,
 And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd:
 That he would please to alter the king's course,
 And break the foresaid peace. Let the king
 know—

As soon he shall by me—that thus the cardinal
 Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, 192
 And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
 To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
 I do pronounce him in that very shape 196
 He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant-at-Arms before him.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.
Serg. Sir,
 My Lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl
 Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I 200
 Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
 Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord,
 The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
 Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry 204
 To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
 The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure
 You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
 To plead mine innocence, for that dye is on me

Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heaven 209

Be done in this and all things! I obey.

O! my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. [To

ABERGAVERNENNY.] The king 212
 Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
 How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
 The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure

By me obey'd!

Bran. Here is a warrant from 216
 The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies

Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,

One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so;
 These are the limbs o' the plot: no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O! Nicholas Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal

Hath show'd him gold. My life is spann'd already:

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, 224
 Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
 By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord, farewell.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Council Chamber.

*Enter the KING, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder, the Lords of the Council, SIR
 THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants.
 The CARDINAL places himself under the KING'S feet on the right side.*

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the level

Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
 To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before us 4
 That gentleman of Buckingham's; in person
 I'll hear him his confessions justify;
 And point by point the treasons of his master
 He shall again relate. 8

*A noise within, crying, 'Room for the Queen!'
 Enter QUEEN KATHARINE, ushered by the DUKES of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.*

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: half your suit

Never name to us; you have half our power:
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given; 12
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point 16
Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions 20

Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the
heart

Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on 24
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,— Whose honour heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not

Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears 28
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off 32
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, 36

And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,

You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, 40
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome 45

To those which would not know them, and yet
must

Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sov'reign would have note, they are 48

Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction! 52

The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects'
grief 56

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths: 60

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze

Allegiance in them; their curses now Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,

This tractable obedience is a slave 64
To each incensed will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life,

This is against our pleasure.
Wol. And for me, 68

I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice, and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither
know 72

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint 76

Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As rav'nous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further 80
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up 84
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well, 88
And with a care, exempt themselves from
fear;

Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any. 92
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber; 96

And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,

The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied 100
The force of this commission. Pray, look to 't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. [To the Secretary.] A word with you.
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons 104

Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham 109
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker,

To nature none more bound; his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet
see,

When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt, 116

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,

Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady, 121
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if he besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear— 124

This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much. 128

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king 133
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, 136
Lord Abergavenny, to whom by oath he menac'd

Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.

Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches 141
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd Lord Cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How ground'd he his title to the crown 144
Upon our fail? to this point hast thou heard
him

At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute 149
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to
France,

The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand 153
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke 157
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,' says he, 160
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal 164
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd: neither the king nor's heirs— 168

Tell you the duke—shall prosper: bid him
strive

To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke
Shall govern England.'

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office 172

On the complaint o' the tenants: take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on. 176
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions

The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do. He answer'd, 'Tush!
It can do me no damage;' adding further,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd, 184
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Hal what, so rank? Ah, hal
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
About your highness had reprov'd the duke 189
About Sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time: being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his. But on; what hence? 192

Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed,

As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence; which if granted, 197

As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.'

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom, 200
And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee? what sayst?

Surv. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,'

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger, 204

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance 208
Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period;
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none, 212
Let him not seek 't of us: by day and night!
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and LORD SANDS.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands.

New customs,

Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd. 4

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English

Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear
directly 8

Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones: one would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin 12
Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now!

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov.

Faith, my lord,

I hear of none, but the new proclamation 17
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham.

What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors. 20

Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov.

They must either—

For so run the conditions—leave those remnants 24

Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto,—as fights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be, 28
Out of a foreign wisdom;—renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings, Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men; 32
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away

The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.
Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases 36

Are grown so catching.
Cham.

What a loss our ladies

Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov.

Ay, marry,

There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies; 40
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going:

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten 44
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord; 48
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's:
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O! 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be 53
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us; 56
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord; he has wherewithal: in him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine: 60

Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir

Thomas, 64
We shall be late else; which I would not be,

For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Presence-chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for CAR-DINAL WOLSEY, a longer table for the guests.
Enter, at one door, ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests; at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILD-FORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her 4
One care abroad; he would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome

Can make good people.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O, my lord! you're tardy:
The very thought of this fair company 8
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em: by my life, 13
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O! that your lordship were but now confessor

To one or two of these!

Sands. I would I were; 16
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy?
Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,

Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this;
His Grace is ent'ring. Nay you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking;

Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith, 24
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies: [*Sits himself between ANNE BUL-
LEN and another Lady.*]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O! very mad, exceeding mad; in love

too: 28
But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]
Cham. Well said, my lord.

So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies 32
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,

Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, 36
Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]

Sands. Your Grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sands, 40
I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then, we shall have 'em 44
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing.—

Anne. You cannot show me. 48
Sands. I told your Grace they would talk anon. [Drum and trumpets within;
chambers discharged.]

Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.
[Exit a Servant.]

Wol. What war-like voice,
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear
not;
By all the laws of war you're privileg'd. 52

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now, what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they've left their barge and landed;

And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good Lord Chamberlain, 56
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.

[Exit the Lord Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.]

You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it. 61

A good digestion to you all; and once more
I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the KING, and Others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute
him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures? 64

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your Grace: that, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly

This night to meet here, they could do no less,
Out of the great respect they bear to beauty, 69
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,

Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which
I pay 'em 73

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.

[They choose Ladies for the dance. The KING chooses ANNE BULLEN.]

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty,

Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.]

Wol. My lord.

Cham. Your Grace?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, with my love and duty 80
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[Whispers the Masquers.]

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is, indeed; which they would have your
Grace

Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see then. 84
[Comes from his state.]

By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll make

My royal choice.

K. Hen. [Unmasking.] You have found him,
cardinal.

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord:
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad

Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My Lord Chamberlain,
Prithee, come hither. What fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas
Bullen's daughter, 92
The Viscount Rochford, one of her highness'
women.

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.

Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen! 96
Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready
I' the privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your Grace,
I fear, with danc'ing is a little heated. 100

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one.
Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry: 104
Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favour. Let the music knock it.
[Exeunt with trumpets.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gent. Whither away so fast?

Sec. Gent. O! God save ye.
E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

First Gent. I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony 4

Of bringing back the prisoner.

Sec. Gent. Were you there?

First Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

Sec. Gent. Pray speak what has happen'd.

First Gent. You may guess quickly what.

Sec. Gent. Is he found guilty?

First Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't. 8

Sec. Gent. I am sorry for't.

First Gent. So are a number more.

Sec. Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

First Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke

Came to the bar; where, to his accusations 12

He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd

Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The king's attorney on the contrary

Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions

Of divers witnesses, which the duke desir'd 17

To have brought, vivâ voce, to his face:

At which appear'd against him his surveyor;

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,

Confessor to him; with that devil-monk, 21

Hopkins, that made this mischief.

Sec. Gent. That was he

That fed him with his prophecies?

First Gent. The same.

All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain

Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not: 25

And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all 28
Was either pitied in him or forgotten.

Sec. Gent. After all this how did he bear himself?

First Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely, 33

And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:

But he fell to himself again, and sweetly

In all the rest show'd a most noble patience. 36

Sec. Gent. I do not think he fears death.

First Gent. Sure, he does not;
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.

Sec. Gent. Certainly

The cardinal is the end of this.

First Gent. 'Tis likely 40

By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,

Then deputy of Ireland; who, remov'd,

Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,

Lest he should help his father.

Sec. Gent. That trick of state 44

Was a deep envious one.

First Gent. At his return,

No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,

And generally, whoever the king favours,

The cardinal instantly will find employment, 48

And far enough from court too.

Sec. Gent. All the commons

Hate him perniciously, and o' my conscience,

Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much

They love and dote on; call him bounteous

Buckingham, 52

The mirror of all courtesy;—

First Gent. Stay there, sir,

And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment;

Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: with him

SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX,

SIR WILLIAM SANDS, and common people.

Sec. Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.

Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me, 56

Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.

I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,

And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear

witness,

And if I have a conscience, let it sink me, 60

Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithfull

The law I bear no malice for my death,

'T has done upon the premises but justice;
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians: 64

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em.
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against
'em. 68

For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham, 72
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me, 76
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart 80
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive
you

As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences 84
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with: no
black envy

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his
Grace;

And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers 88

Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be! 92
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your
Grace;

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there! 97
The duke is coming: see the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable,

And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:

Yet I am richer than my base accusers, 104
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it;

And with that blood will make them one day
groan for 't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister, 109
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying 112
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all 116
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes
me

A little happier than my wretched father: 120
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes; both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain: 125
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels Be sure you be not loose; for those you make
friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive 128

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye: the last hour 132

Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:

And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell. I have done; and God forgive me! [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Train.]

First Gent. O! this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.

Sec. Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inkling 140
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

First Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith,
sir?

Sec. Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require 144
A strong faith to conceal it.

First Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.

Sec. Gent. I am confident:
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation 148
Between the king and Katharine?

First Gent. Yes, but it held not;
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues 152
That durst disperse it.

Sec. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice 157
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her: to confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately; 160
As all think, for this business.

First Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

Sec. Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but is't not cruel 165
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall.

First Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this; 168
Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord, The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me;
with this reason: His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think. 12

Enter the DUKES of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your Graces.

Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife 17

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No; his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so:
This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:

That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune, Turns what helist. The king will know him one
day. 22

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league 25

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, 28
Fears, and despairs; and all these for his marriage:

And out of all these, to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years 32
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her, that loves him with that excellence

That angels love good men with; even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsell!

'Tis most true

These news are every where; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for't. All that dare
Look into these affairs, see this main end, 41
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, 45
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages. All men's honours 48
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.
As I am made without him, so I'll stand, 52
If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king 57
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me elsewhere: besides, 60
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The KING is discovered sitting and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who is there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves 65

Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences 68

Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way

Is business of estate; in which we come

To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold.

Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good Lord Cardinal? O! my

Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience;

Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To CAMPEIUS.]

You're welcome, 76

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:

Use us, and it. [To WOLSEY.] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would your Grace would give us but an hour Of private conference.

K. Hen. [To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.] We are busy: go. 81

Nor. [Aside to SUFFOLK.] This priest has no pride in him!

Suf. [Aside to NORFOLK.] Not to speak of; I would not be so sick though for his place:

But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to SUFFOLK.] If it do, 84 I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to NORFOLK.] I another.

[Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.]

Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely Your scruple to the voice of Christendom. 88

Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerks, 92

I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms

Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgment,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent

One general tongue unto us, this good man, 96

This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius;

Whom once more I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And once more in my arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their loves:

They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for. 101

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your highness' hand

I tender my commission, by whose virtue, — 104

The court of Rome commanding,—you, my Lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant,

In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted 108

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her

So dear in heart, not to deny her that

A woman of less place might ask by law, 112

Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my favour

To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal,

Prithee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary:

I find him a fit fellow. [Exit WOLSEY.]

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to GARDINER.] Give me your hand; much joy and favour to you;

You are the king's now.

Gard. [Aside to WOLSEY.] But to be commanded

For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me. 120

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They converse apart.]

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Paoe

In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely. 124

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him,

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Keep him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him 129

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living mur-murers
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool, 132
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment:
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons. 136
K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen. [Exit GARDINER.]
The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning, is Black-Friars;
There ye shall meet about this weighty business.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my lord! 141
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!
O! 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. 144
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—An Antechamber in the QUEEN'S Apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an Old Lady.
Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang that pinches:
His highness having liv'd so long with her, and
she
So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life, 4
She never knew harm-doing; O! now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than 8
'Tis sweet at first to acquire, after this process
To give her the avaunt! it is a pity
Would move a monster.
Old Lady. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.
Anne. O! God's will; much better 12
She ne'er had known pomp: though 't be temporal,
Yet, if that quarrel, Fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging
As soul and body's severing.
Old Lady. Alas! poor lady, 16
She's a stranger now again.
Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content, 20
Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief
And wear a golden sorrow.
Old Lady. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead
I would not be a queen.
Old Lady. Beshrew me, I would, 24
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would
you,
For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet 28
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts—
Saving your mincing—the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.
Anne. Nay, good troth. 33 Old Lady. Yes, troth, and troth; you would not be a queen?
Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.
Old Lady. 'Tis strange: a three-pence bow'd would hire me, 36
Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?
Anne. No, in truth.
Old Lady. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a little: 40
I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to: if your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.
Anne. How you do talk! 44
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.
Old Lady. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes
here? 49

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know
The secret of your conference?
Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking: 52
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.
Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.
Anne. Now, I pray God, amen! 56
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty

Commends his good opinion of you, and 61
Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support, 64
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know
What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing, nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes 68
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness,
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady, 73
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you. [Aside.] I have perus'd her well;

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled 76
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle? [To her.] I'll to the
king,

And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord. 80
[Exit LORD CHAMBERLAIN.]

Old Lady. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late; 84
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here,—fie, fie, upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd
up

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me. 88

Old Lady. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.

There was a lady once,—'tis an old story,—
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt: have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old Lady. With your theme I could O'er mount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life 96
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess: say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, 100
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,

If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows. 104
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.

Old Lady. What do you think me?
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Ver-gers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY, alone; after him, the BISHOPS of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, at some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the KING and QUEEN, and their Trains. The KING takes place under the cloth of state; the two CARDINALS sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place at some distance from the KING. The BISHOPS place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the BISHOPS. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd; 4
You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so. Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry King of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

[The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;

And to bestow your pity on me; for 12
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause 17
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off
And take your good grace from me? Heaven
witness, 20

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour 25
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew 28
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind 32

That I have been your wife, in this obedience
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: if, in the course
And process of this time, you can report, 36
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt 40
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent 44
And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before: it is not to be question'd 48
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may 52
Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel

I will implore: if not, i' the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,—
And of your choice,—these reverend fathers;
men 56

Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled

To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court, as well 60
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His Grace
Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed, 64
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?
Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that 68
We are a queen,—or long have dream'd so,— certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay,
before, 72

Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge; for it is you 76
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,
Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say
again,

I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge, whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not 81
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom 85
O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me
wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you or any: how far I have proceeded, 88
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge
me

That I have blown this coal: I do deny it. 92
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know 96
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which before 100

His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,

And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak 104
To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,

With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted

Where powers are your retainers, and your
words,

Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please 112 Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
you,

You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here, 116
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the KING, and offers to depart.]

Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and 120
Disdainful to be tried by't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come
into the court. 124

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you,
keep your way:

When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord
help!

They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass
on: 128

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt QUEEN, and her Attendants.]

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted, 133
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,—
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts 137
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,—
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble born;
And, like her true nobility, she has 140
Carried herself towards me.

Vol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing

Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound 144

There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied,—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might 148
Induce you to the question on't? or ever

Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word that might

Be to the prejudice of her present state, 152
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not 156
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You're excus'd:

But will you be more justified? you ever 160
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd,
oft,

The passages made toward it. On my honour,
I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't, 165

I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then mark the inducement. Thus it came; give heed to't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, 168
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,

Who had been hither sent on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and 172
Our daughter Mary. I' the progress of this business,

Ere a determinate resolution, he—
I mean, the bishop—did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise 176
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, 180
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast; which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd considerings did throng,
And press'd in with this caution. First, me-
thought 184

I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should
Do no more offices of life to't than 188
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after

This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought

This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should
not 193

Be gladdened in't by me. Then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me 196
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say, 200
I meant to rectify my conscience, which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
By all the rev'rend fathers of the land
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek, 206
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd yourself to say 208
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread, that I committed 212
The daring'st counsel that I had to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. Then I mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave 216
To make this present summons. Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
For no dislike i' the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points

Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life 224
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness, 228
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal 232
She intends unto his holiness.

[They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. [Aside.] I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant Cranmer,
Prithee, return: with thy approach, I know, 237

My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on.

[Exeunt, in manner as they entered.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the QUEEN'S Apartment.

The QUEEN and her Women at work.

Q. Kath. Take thylute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze, 4
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring. 8
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art, 12
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!

Gent. An't please your Grace, the two great cardinals 16

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their Graces

To come near. [Exit Gentleman.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on't. 21
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife, 24

I would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you 28
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,

Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do! 32
My lords, I care not—so much I am happy

Above a number—if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em, 36
I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,— 40

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious; 44
Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank
you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake:
Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord
Cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed 48
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,—
And service to his majesty and you,—
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant. 52
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,
You have too much, good lady; but to know 56
How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam, 60
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him,—which was too far,— Offers, as I do, in sign of peace, 65
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside.] To betray me.
My lords, I thank you both for your good will;
Ye speak like honest men,—pray God, ye prove
so!— 68

But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,—
More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning, 72
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business.

For her sake that I have been,—for I feel 76
The last fit of my greatness,—good your Graces
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears: 80
Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,— 84

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,—
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions, 87
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your Grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection; 92

He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour better and your cause;

For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly. 96

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both;
my ruin.

Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us. 100

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort? 104

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye: 108 Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy. 112

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye;

And all such false professors! Would ye have
me,—

If ye have any justice, any pity;

If ye be anything but churchmen's habits,— 116
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates
me?

Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already,
His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him 120
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak myself, 124
 Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?
 A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
 Never yet branded with suspicion?
 Have I with all my full affections 128
 Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven?
 obey'd him?
 Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
 Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
 And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords. 132
 Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
 One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his
 pleasure,
 And to that woman, when she has done most,
 Yet will I add an honour, a great patience. 136 Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
 To give up willingly that noble title
 Your master wed me to: nothing but death 140
 Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. Pray hear me.
Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English
 earth,
 Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
 Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts. 144
 What will become of me now, wretched lady?
 I am the most unhappy woman living.
 [To her women.] Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
 Shipwrack'd upon a kingdom, where no pity, 148
 No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
 Almost no grave allow'd me. Like the lily,
 That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
 I'll hang my head and perish.
Wol. If your Grace 152
 Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
 You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,
 Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
 The way of our profession is against it: 156
 We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them.
 For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
 How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage. 160
 The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
 So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
 They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
 I know you have a gentle, noble temper, 164
 A soul as even as a calm: pray think us
 Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
 With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
 As yours was put into you, ever casts 169
 Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;
 Beware you lose it not: for us, if you please
 To trust us in your business, we are ready 172
 To use our utmost studies in your service.
Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and,
 pray, forgive me
 If I have us'd myself unmannerly.
 You know I am a woman, lacking wit 176
 To make a seemly answer to such persons.
 Pray do my service to his majesty:
 He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers, 180
 Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs
 That little thought, when she set footing here,
 She should have bought her dignities so dear.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Antechamber to the KING'S Apartment.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
 And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
 Cannot stand under them: if you omit
 The offer of this time, I cannot promise 4
 But that you shall sustain more new disgraces
 With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
 To meet the least occasion that may give me
 Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, 8
 To be reveng'd on him.

Sur. Which of the peers
 Have uncontentn'd gone by him, or at least
 Strangely neglected? when did he regard
 The stamp of nobleness in any person, 12
 Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
 What he deserves of you and me, I know;
 What we can do to him,—though now the
 time

Gives way to us,—I much fear. If you cannot 16
 Bar his access to the king, never attempt
 Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
 Over the king in 's tongue.

Nor. O! fear him not;
 His spell in that is out: the king hath found 20
 Matter against him that for ever mars
 The honey of his language. No, he's settled,

Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Suf. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this 24
Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true:
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

Suf. How came 28
His practices to light ?

Suf. Most strangely.

Suf. O! how? how?

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,

And came to the eye o' the king; wherein was
read,

That the cardinal did entreat his holiness 32
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive

My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.' 36

Suf. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Suf. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts

And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already 41
Hath married the fair lady.

Suf. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my
lord!

For I profess, you have it.

Suf. Now all my joy 44

Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords, 48
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.

Suf. But will the king 52

Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;

There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal
Campeius 56

Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you 60

The king cried Ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry Ha! louder.

Nor. But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which 64
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges

Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and 68
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,
And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain 72
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal!

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, 76
Gave't you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently

He did unseal them; and the first he view'd, 80

He did it with a serious mind; a heed

Was in his countenance. You he bade

Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is. 84

Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit CROMWELL.

[Aside.] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,

The French King's sister; he shall marry her.

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:

There's more in't than fair visage. Bullen! 89

No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish

To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.

Suf. Sharp enough, 93
Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!

This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;

Then, out it goes. What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving? yet I know her for

A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to 100

Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up
A heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king, 104
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on's heart!

Enter the KING, reading a schedule; and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king!

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated 108

To his own portion! and what expense by the hour

Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrif,

Does he rake this together? Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have 112
Stood here observing him; some strange commotion

Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight 116
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures

We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be: 120
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly? 124
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing;
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure,
Rich stuffs and ornaments of household,
which

I find at such a proud rate that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will: 129
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth, 132
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

*[He takes his seat, and whispers
LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY.]*

Wol. Heaven forgive me! 136
Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good my lord,

You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind, the which
You were now running o'er: you have scarce
time 140

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir, 144

For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce 148
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well 152
With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd
you:

He said he did; and with his deed did crown 156
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come
home,

But par'd my present havings, to bestow 160
My bounties upon you.

Wol. [Aside.] What should this mean?

Sur. [Aside.] The Lord increase this business!

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell
me

If what I now pronounce you have found true;
And if you may confess it, say withal, 165
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could 168

My studied purposes requite; which went
Beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet fill'd with my abilities. Mine own ends 172
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I 176
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd; 180

A loyal and obedient subject is

Therein illustrated; the honour of it
Does pay the act of it, as, i' the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume 184
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
more

On you than any; so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess, 191
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; that am, have, and will be.
Though all the world should crack their duty to
you,

And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid, yet my duty, 197
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken. 200
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open 't. Read o'er this;
[Giving him papers.]
And after, this: and then to breakfast with What appetite you have.

[Exit KING, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY; the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.]

Wol. What should this mean? 204
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him;
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper; 209

I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so;
This paper has undone me! 'Tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet 216
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune 220
Will bring me off again. What's this?—'To the Popel'

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness; 224
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall

Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more. 228

Re-enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's, 232
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay,
Where's your commission, lord? words cannot carry

Authority so weighty.

Suf. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it, 237

I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy: 240
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin
Follow your envious courses, men of malice; 244
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no
doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king—
Mine and your master—with his own hand gave
me; 248

Bade me enjoy it with the place and honours
During my life; and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents: now who'll take it?

Suf. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then. 252

Suf. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Suf. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land 256
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals—
With thee and all thy best parts bound together—

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy! 260

You sent me deputy for Ireland,
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him; 263

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This and all else

This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law
Found his deserts: how innocent I was 268
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour, 272
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul, 276
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel

My sword i' the life-blood of thee else. My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, 281
Farewell nobility; let his Grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness 284
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You writ to the pope against the king; your goodness, 288

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues, 292
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life; I'll startle you Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench 296

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.
Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it!
Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's
hand; 300

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember 304
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry 'guilty,' cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections; if I blush, 308
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head.
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,

You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops. 313
Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought
the king

To be your servant.

Suf. Then, that without the knowledge 317
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal. 320

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara. 324

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,—

By what means got I leave to your own conscience,— 328

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious, 332
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
him 336

So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,

Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legatine, within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire, 341
That therefore such a writ be su'd against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be 344
Out of the king's protection. This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us, 348
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.

[Exeunt all except WOLSEY.]
Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear
me. 351

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth

The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost; 356
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory, 361
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy 364
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, 372
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Vol. What! amaz'd

At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fall'n indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace?

Vol. Why, well; 377

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities, 380

A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd
me,

I humbly thank his Grace; and from these shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity taken
Aload would sink a navy, too much honour: 384

O! 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it.

Vol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,—
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,— 389

To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Vol. God bless him! 393

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen

Lord Chancellor in your place.

Vol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue 396
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice

For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more? 401

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Vol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen, 405
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Vol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell! 408

The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited 412
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Crom-
well;

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: seek the king;—
That sun, I pray, may never set!—I have told
him 416

What, and how true thou art: he will advance
thee;

Some little memory of me will stir him—
I know his noble nature—not to let Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord!

Must I then, leave you? must I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master? 424
Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his
lord.

The king shall have my service; but my prayers

For ever and for ever, shall be yours. 428

Vol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear

In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.

Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me,
Cromwell; 432

And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught
thee,

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of
honour, 437

Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in;

A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
 Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. 440
 Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
 By that sin fell the angels; how can man then,
 The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?
 Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee; 444
 Corruption wins not more than honesty.
 Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
 To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not.
 Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
 Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O
 Cromwell! 449
 Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king;
 And,—prithce, lead me in:
 There take an inventory of all I have, 452
 To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
 And my integrity to heaven is all
 I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Crom-
 well!
 Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal 456
 I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
 Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell
 The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gen. You're well met once again.

Sec. Gen. So are you.

First Gen. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?

Sec. Gen. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter 4

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

First Gen. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd
 sorrow;

This, general joy.

Sec. Gen. 'Tis well: the citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds,
 As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever
 forward, 9

In celebration of this day with shows,
 Pageants, and sights of honour.

First Gen. Never greater;

Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir. 12

Sec. Gen. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

First Gen. Yes; 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day
 By custom of the coronation. 16
 The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
 To be high-steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,
 He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.

Sec. Gen. I thank you, sir: had I not known those customs, 20

I should have been beholding to your paper.
 But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,
 The princess dowager? how goes her business?

First Gen. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop 24

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
 Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
 Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
 From Amptill, where the princess lay; to which 28

She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
 And, to be short, for not appearance and
 The king's late scruple, by the main assent
 Of all these learned men she was divorc'd, 32
 And the late marriage made of none effect:
 Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
 Where she remains now sick.

Sec. Gen. Alas! good lady!
 [Trumpets.]

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming. [Hantboys.]

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

A lively flourish of trumpets.

1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers, singing. [Music.]
4. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.
5. MARQUESS DORSET, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the EARL OF SURREY, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.
6. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with the rod of marshal-ship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports;
 under it, the QUEEN in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned.
 On each side of her, the BISHOPS OF LONDON and WINCHESTER.
8. The old DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the QUEEN'S train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

They pass over the stage in order and state.

Sec. Gen. A royal train, believe me. These I know; 37

Who's that that bears the sceptre?

First Gen. Marquess Dorset;

And that the Earl of Surrey with the rod.

Sec. Gen. A bold brave gentleman. That should be 40

The Duke of Suffolk?

First Gen. 'Tis the same; high-steward.

Sec. Gen. And that my Lord of Norfolk?

First Gen. Yes.

Sec. Gen. [Looking on the QUEEN.] Heaven bless thee!

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel; 44

Our king has all the Indies in his arms,

And more and richer, when he strains that lady:

I cannot blame his conscience.

First Gen. They that bear

The cloth of honour over her, are four barons 48
Of the Cinque-ports.

Sec. Gen. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk. 52

First Gen. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

Sec. Gen. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;

And sometimes falling ones.

First Gen. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.]

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling? 56

Third Gen. Among the crowd i' the Abbey; where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled With the mere rankness of their joy.

Sec. Gen. You saw The ceremony?

Third Gen. That I did.

First Gen. How was it? 60

Third Gen. Well worth the seeing.

Sec. Gen. Good sir, speak it to us.

Third Gen. As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off 64

A distance from her; while her Grace sat down

To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely The beauty of her person to the people. 68

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man: which when the people Had the full view of, such a noise arose

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest, 72

As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,—

Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-bellied women, 76

That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press,

And make 'em reel before them. No man living

Could say, 'This is my wife,' there; all were woven 80

So strangely in one piece.

Sec. Gen. But, what follow'd?

Third Gen. At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces

Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and, saint-like,

Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly. 84

Then rose again and bow'd her to the people:

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen;

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown, 88

The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,

With all the choicest music of the kingdom,

Together sung Te Deum. So she parted, 92

And with the same full state pac'd back again

To York-place, where the feast is held.

First Gen. Sir,

You must no more call it York-place, that's past;

For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost: 96

'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.

Third Gen. I know it;

But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name

Is fresh about me.

Sec. Gen. What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the queen? 100

Third Gen. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,—

Newly prefer'd from the king's secretary,—

The other, London.

Sec. Gen. He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,

The virtuous Cranmer.

Third Gen. All the land knows that:

However, yet there's no great breach; when it comes, 106
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

Sec. Gen. Who may that be, I pray you?

Third Gen. Thomas Cromwell:
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend. The king
Has made him master o' the jewel house,
And one, already, of the privy-council. 112

Sec. Gen. He will deserve more.

Third Gen. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:
Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. 117
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick: led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grij. How does your Grace?

Kath. O Griffith! sick to death!
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair:
So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease. 4
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd'st
me,

That the great child of honour, Cardinal
Wolsey,
Was dead?

Grij. Yes, madam; but I think your Grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't. 8

Kath. Prithce, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.

Grij. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland 12
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas! poor man. 16

Grij. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester;

Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him:
To whom he gave these words: 'O! father abbot, 20

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity.'

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness 24

Pursu'd him still; and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight,—which he himself
Foretold should be his last,—full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, 28
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on
him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
him, 32

And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdom; simony was fair-play; 36
His own opinion was his law; i' the presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful; 40
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grij. Noble madam, 44
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else.

Grij. This cardinal, 48
Though from a humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading; 52
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,—
Which was a sin,—yet in bestowing, madam, 56
He was most princely. Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; 60
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him; 64
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. 72
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!

Patience, be near me still; and set me lower: 76
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to. 80

[Sad and solemn music.]

Grif. She is asleep: good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend curtsies: then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order, at which,—as it were by inspiration,—she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for: 85
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces 88
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness,
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams 93

Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave,

They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.]

Pat. Do you note

How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks, 97

And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes!

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her! 100

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your Grace,—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow:

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted great-
ness,

To use so rude behaviour; go to, kneel. 104

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness'
pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow 108

Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger.]

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,

You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.

Kath. O my lord! 112

The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me since first you knew me. But, I pray
you,

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your Grace; the
next, 116

The king's request that I would visit you;

Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,

And heartily entreats you take good comfort. 120

Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late;

'Tis like a pardon after execution:

That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd
me;

But now I am past all comforts here but prayers.

How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health. 125

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor
name

Banish'd the kingdom. Patience, is that letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam. 129

[Giving it to KATHARINE.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness 132

The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:
 The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!
 Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding,—
 She is young, and of a noble modest nature, 136
 I hope she will deserve well,—and a little
 To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him,
 Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
 Is, that his noble Grace would have some pity
 Upon my wretched women, that so long 141
 Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
 Of which there is not one, I dare avow,—
 And now I should not lie,—but will deserve, 144
 For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
 For honesty and decent carriage,
 A right good husband, let him be a noble;
 And, sure, those men are happy that shall have 'em. 148
 The last is, for my men: they are the poorest,
 But poverty could never draw 'em from me;
 That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
 And something over to remember me by: 152
 If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
 And able means, we had not parted thus.
 These are the whole contents: and, good my lord,
 By that you love the dearest in this world, 156
 As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,
 Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
 To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
 Or let me lose the fashion of a man! 160
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
 In all humility unto his highness:
 Say his long trouble now is passing
 Out of this world; tell him, in death I bless'd him, 164
 For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
 My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,
 You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
 Call in more women. When I am dead, good wench, 168
 Let me be us'd with honour: strew me over
 With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
 I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
 Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet like 172
 A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
 I can no more. [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
 Not for delights; times to repair our nature
 With comforting repose, and not for us 4
 To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero
 With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too, 8
 Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems you are in haste: an if there be
 No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
 Some touch of your late business: affairs, that walk— 13

As they say spirits do—at midnight, have
 In them a wilder nature than the business
 That seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you, 16
 And durst commend a secret to your ear
 Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,

They say, in great extremity; and fear'd
 She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with 20
 I pray for heartily, that it may find
 Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir Thomas,
 I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could
 Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says 24
 She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,
 Hear me, Sir Thomas: you're a gentleman
 Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
 And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well, 29
 'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me,
 Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
 Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two 32
 The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,
 Beside that of the jewel-house, is made master
 O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; further,
 sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of moe preferments,
With which the time will load him. The archbishop 37
Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare
speak

One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,
Sir,—I may tell it you,—I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council that he is—
For so I know he is, they know he is— 44
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they mov'd

Have broken with the king; who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint,—of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him,—hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board 51
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good-night, Sir Thomas!

Lov. Many good-nights, my lord. I rest your servant. [Exeunt GARDINER and Page.]

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-
night; 56

My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play. 60
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the
news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks 64
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What sayst thou, ha?
To pray for her? what! is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made 68

Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas! good lady.

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles; 72
Prithee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness 76
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen.

Charles, good-night.
[Exit SUFFOLK.]

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, Sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop, 80

As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.
[Exit DENNY.]

Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the bishop spake: 84

I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

[LOVELL seems to stay.]

Ha! I have said. Begone.

What!— [Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY.]

Cran. I am fearful. Wherefore frowns he
thus? 88

'Tis his aspect of terror: all's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to know

Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. 93
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: come, come, give me
your hand.

Ah! my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, 96
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.

I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you; which, being con-sider'd, 100

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges 104
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: you a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness 108
Would come against you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] I humbly thank your high-
ness;

And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff

And corn shall fly asunder; for I know 112
There's none stands under more calumnious
tongues

Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury:
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted

In us, thy friend: give me thy hand, stand up:
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holidame, 117
What manner of man are you? Mylord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together 120

Yoursell and your accusers; and to have heard
you,

Without indurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege,

The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:

If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, 124

Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh
not,

Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing

What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not

How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world? 128

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever

The justice and the truth o' the question carries

The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease 132

Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice

Of as great size. Ween you of better luck, 136

I mean in perjur'd witness, than your master,

Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd

Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;

You take a precipice for no leap of danger, 140

And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and your majesty

Protect mine innocence! or I fall into

The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;

They shall no more prevail than we give way
to. 144

Keep comfort to you; and this morning see

You do appear before them. If they shall chance,

In charging you with matters, to commit you,

The best persuasions to the contrary 148

Fail not to use, and with what vehemency

The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties

Will render you no remedy, this ring

Deliver them, and your appeal to us 152

There make before them. Look! the good man weeps;

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest
mother!

I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul

None better in my kingdom. Get you gone, 156

And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRANMER.] He has strangled

His language in his tears.

Enter an Old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back: what mean you?

Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring 160

Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels 11

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person

Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks

I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?

Say, ay; and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege; 165

And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven

Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,

Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen 168

Desires your visitation, and to be

Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you

As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen.

Lovell!

Re-enter LOVELL.

Lov.

Sir!

K. Hen. Give her a hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit.]

Old L. A hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more. 173

An ordinary groom is for such payment:

I will have more, or scold it out of him.

Said I for this the girl was like to him? 176

I will have more, or else unsay't; and now,

While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Pursuivants, Pages, &c., attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,

That was sent to me from the council, pray'd
me

To make great haste. All fast? what means this?
Ho!

Who waits there?

Enter KEEPER.

Sure, you know me?

Keep.

Yes, my lord; 4

But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?
Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS.

Cran. So.
Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad
 I came this way so happily: the king 8
 Shall understand it presently.
Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,
 The king's physician. As he past along,
 How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
 Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace! For certain, 12
 This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,— God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,—
 To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
 Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor, 16
 'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
 Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter, at a window above, the KING and BUTTS.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest sight,—
K. Hen. What's that, Butts?
Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day. 20
K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?
Butts. There, my lord,
 The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury;
 Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,
 Pages, and footboys.
K. Hen. Hal 'Tis he, indeed: 24
 Is this the honour they do one another?
 'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought
 They had parted so much honesty among 'em,—
 At least, good manners,—as not thus to suffer 28
 A man of his place, and so near our favour,
 To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,
 And at the door too, like a post with packets.
 By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: 32
 Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
 We shall hear more anon. [Exeunt above.]

SCENE III.—The Council-Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK,
the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY,
Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROM-

WELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the ARCH-BISHOP OF CANTERBURY. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at the lower end as secretary. Keeper at the door.

Chan. Speak to the business, Master secretary:

Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours,
 The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there? 4

Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

Keep. My lord archbishop:
 And has done half-an-hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

Keep. Your Grace may enter now.

[CRANMER enters and approaches the council-table.]

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I'm very sorry 8

To sit here at this present and behold
 That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
 In our own natures frail, and capable
 Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty
 And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, 13

Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little,
 Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
 The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,— 16

For so we are inform'd,—with new opinions,
 Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
 And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
 My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
 Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,
 But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer— 24
 Out of our easiness and childish pity
 To one man's honour—this contagious sickness,
 Farewell all physic: and what follows then?
 Commotions, uproars, with a general taint 28
 Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
 Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the progress 32

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
 And with no little study, that my teaching

And the strong course of my authority
Might go one way, and safely; and the end 36
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living,—
I speak it with a single heart, my lords,—
A man that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience and his place, 40
Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
Pray heaven the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment 44
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord, 48
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' 52
pleasure,

And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for. 57

Cran. Ah! my good Lord of Winchester, I
thank you;

You are always my good friend: if your will pass,
I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so merciful. I see your end; 61
'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again, 64
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more, 68
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,
To men that understand you, words and weakness. 72

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty 76
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good Master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord? 80
Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound? 84
Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.
Crom. Do. 84

Remember your bold life too.
Chan. This is too much;
Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.
Crom. And I.
Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands
agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith 88
You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;
There to remain till the king's further pleasure
Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?
All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other 93
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me? 96
Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him, 96
And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords;
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
By virtue of that ring I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it 100
To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.
Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords, 105
The king will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certain:
How much more is his life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me, 109
In seeking tales and informations
Against this man—whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at— 112
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye!

Enter the KING, frowning on them: he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;
Not only good and wise, but most religious: 116

One that in all obedience makes the Church
The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen
That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgment comes to hear 120
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence;
They are too thin and bare to hide offences. 125
To me you cannot reach; you play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;

But, whatso'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure 128
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

[To CRANMER.] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest

He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:
By all that's holy, he had better starve 132
Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your Grace,—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me.
I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council; but I find none. 136
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man,—few of you deserve that title,—
This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy
At chamber-door? and one as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission 141

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see, 144
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chan. Thus far,
My most dread sov'reign, may it like your
Grace 148
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather—
If there be faith in men—meant for his trial
And fair purgation to the world, than malice, 152
I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a prince
May be beholding to a subject, I 156
Am, for his love and service, so to him.

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me; 160
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour: how may I deserve it, 164
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons: you shall have two noble partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess Dorset: will these please you? 169
Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge
you,

Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart
And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven 172
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man! those joyful tears show thy true heart:

The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, 'Do my Lord of Canterbury 176

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.'
Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; 180
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Palace-Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals.
Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within.] Good Master porter, I belong to the larder. 5

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones:
these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings! Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? 12

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons—

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be. 16
We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot— 20
You see the poor remainder—could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any That had a head to hit, either young or old, 25
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,
Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again;
And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

[Within.] Do you hear, Master porter? 29

Port. I shall be with you presently, good Master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do? 32
Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together. 40

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in's nose: all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff to me; I defied 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely. 64

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come. 72

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!

They grow still too, from all parts they are coming,

As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,

These lazy knaves? Ye have made a fine hand, fellows: 76

There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies, When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour, 80
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a-pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all 84
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads

Clap round fines for neglect: ye're lazy knaves; And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound; 88

They're come already from the christening. Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. 92

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the camlet, get up o' the rail: I'll pick you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Palace.

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts; then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child, richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS OF DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth! 4

Flourish. Enter KING and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal Grace, and the good queen,

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy, 8

May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop:
What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord.

[The KING kisses the Child.]

With this kiss take my blessing; God protect thee!

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran. Amen. 12

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:

I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady

When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter 16

Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.

This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness: she shall be—

But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never 24
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good, 28
Shall still be doubled on her; truth shall nurse her;

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her;
She shall be lov'd and fear'd; her own shall bless her;

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, 32
And hang their heads with sorrow; good grows with her.

In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants; and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.
God shall be truly known; and those about her

From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
And by those claim their greatness, not by blood.

Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, 41
Her ashes new-create another heir
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one,— 44
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,—

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,

Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror, 48

That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name 52
Shall be, and make new nations; he shall flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him; our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, 57

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her, yet a virgin;
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop! 64

Thou hast made me now a man: never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
That when I am in heaven, I shall desire 68
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholding;
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords: 73

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye;

She will be sick else. This day, no man think
He has business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We've frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear
They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry, 'Thad's witty!' 8
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while 12
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

*The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments 4
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crowns regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made*

To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures 8

*The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.*

*To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their war-like fraughtage: now on Dardan plains 13*

*The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples 17
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.*

*Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits, 20
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come*

*A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited 24
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play. 29
Like or find fault; do as your pleasures are:
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.*

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

*Tro. Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart, 4
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! has none.*

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant; 8

*But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractis'd infancy. 12*

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding. 16

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried? 20

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips. 28

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,

Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, traitor! 'when she comes'!—When is she thence? 33

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee: when my heart, As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, 37
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me, I have—as when the sun doth light a storm—
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile; 40
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,

Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's,—well, go to,—there were no more comparison between the women: but, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her; but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but— 49

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep 52
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee I am mad
In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand, 57
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman: this thou tell'st me, 61

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;

But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,

Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me 64

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus! 72

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between, and between, but small thanks for my labour. 76

Tro. What! art thou angry, Pandarus? what! with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I she is not fair? 83

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father: let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' the matter. 88

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me! I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. 93

[Exit PANDARUS. An alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument; 97

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus,—O gods! how do you plague me.

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar; 100

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo

As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we? 104

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:

Between our Ilium and where she resides

Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;

Ourselves the merchant, and this sailing Pandar

Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark. 109

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer sorts,

For womanish it is to be from thence. 112

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.]

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day! 118

Tro. Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may.'

But to the sport abroad: are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience 4

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd:

He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, 8

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks 12

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se 16

And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain't but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair; he hath the joints of every thing, but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use;

or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight. 31

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking. 37

Cres. Who comes here?

Enter PANDARUS.

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man. 40

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander.

How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle. 47

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early. 52

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too:

he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that:

and there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too. 60

Cres. What! is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison. 64

Pan. What! not between Troilus and Hector?

Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him. 68

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees. 73

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus, I would he were. 76

Cres. So he is.

Pan. Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself. Would a' were himself: well, the gods are above; time must friend or end: well, Troilus, well, I would my heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus. 84

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale when the other's come to't.

Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own.
Pan. Nor his qualities. 92

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him; his own's better. 96

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour,—for so 'tis I must confess,—not brown neither,— 100

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true. 104

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose. 113

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed. 116

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compassed window, and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,— 120

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector. 125

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,— 130

Cres. Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O! he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not? 136

Cres. O! yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to, then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so. 141

Pan. Troilus! why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell. 146

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin: indeed, she has a marvell's white hand, I must needs confess,—

Cres. Without the rack. 150

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas! poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing: Queen Hecuba laughed that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With millstones. 156

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed. 160

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too. 165

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer? 168

Pan. Quoth she, 'Here's but one-and-fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'One-and-fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he; 'pluck't out, and give it him.' But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed. 180

Cres. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't. 184

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true: he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [A retreat sounded.]

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece, Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure. 193

Pan. Here, here; here's an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest. 197

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes over the stage.

Pan. That's Æneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon. 201

ANTENOR passes over.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o' the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me. 208

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! Is't not a brave man? 216

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is a' not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there: there's no jesting; there's laying on, take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks! 222

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris. 227

PARIS crosses over.

Look ye yonder, niece: is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon. 233

Cres. Who's that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus. 237

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no, yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry, 'Troilus?' Helenus is a priest. 242

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROIILUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece! Hem! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry! 246

Cres. Peace! for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him: O brave Troilus! look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helmet more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three-and-twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cres. Here come more. 259

Soldiers pass over.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die i' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone: crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece. 265

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel. 269

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and salt that season a man? 276

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie. 281

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches. 288

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching. 293

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROIILUS' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you. 296

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.] I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle?

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus. 304

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice
He offers in another's enterprise;

But more in Troilus thousand-fold I see 308

Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.

Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:

Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the
doing:

That she belov'd knows nought that knows not
this: 312

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:

That she was never yet, that ever knew

Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach: 316

Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:

Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before

AGAMEMNON'S Tent.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENE LAUS, and Others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?

The ample proposition that hope makes

In all designs begun on earth below 4

Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;

As knots, by the confux of meeting sap,

Infect the sound pine and divert his grain 8

Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us

That we come short of our suppose so far

That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand; 12

Sith every action that hath gone before,

Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,

And that unbodied figure of the thought 16

That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works,
And call them shames? which are indeed

nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove, 20

To find persistive constancy in men:

The fineness of which metal is not found

In Fortune's love; for then, the bold and coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unread, 24

The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin:

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,

Puffing at all, winnows the light away; 28

And what hath mass or matter, by itself

Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy god-like
seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply 32

Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance

Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail

Upon her patient breast, making their way 36

With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage

The gentle Thetis, and anon behold

The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, 40

Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy boat

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rivall'd greatness? either to harbour fled, 44

Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so

Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide

In storms of fortune; for in her ray and brightness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze 48

Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind

Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,

And flies fled under shade, why then the thing
of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,

And with an accent tun'd in self-same key, 53

Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of

Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit, 56

In whom the tempers and the minds of all

Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.

Besides the applause and approbation

The which, [To AGAMEMNON.] most mighty for thy place and sway, 60

[To NESTOR.] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,

I give to both your speeches, which were such

As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece

Should hold up high in brass; and such again 64

As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,

Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-
tree

On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish
ears

To his experienc'd tongue, yet let it pleas-thou, both, 68

Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect
 That matter needless, of importless burden,
 Divide thy lips, than we are confident, 72
 When rank Thersites opens his mastick jaws,
 We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.
Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been
 down,
 And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master, 76
 But for these instances.
 The specialty of rule hath been neglected:
 And look, how many Grecian tents do stand Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions. 80
 When that the general is not like the hive
 To whom the foragers shall all repair,
 What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
 The unworthing shows as fairly in the mask. 84
 The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre
 Observe degree, priority, and place,
 Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
 Office, and custom, in all line of order: 88
 And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
 In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
 Amidst the other; whose med'cinable eye
 Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil, 92
 And posts, like the commandment of a king, Sans check, to good and bad: but when the planets
 In evil mixture to disorder wander,
 What plagues, and what portents, what mutiny,
 What raging of the sea, shaking of earth, 97
 Commotion in the winds, frights, changes,
 horrors,
 Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
 The unity and married calm of states 100 Quite from their fixure! O! when degree is shak'd,
 Which is the ladder to all high designs,
 The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
 Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
 Peaceful commerce from dividable shores, 105
 The primogenitive and due of birth,
 Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree, stand in authentic place? 108
 Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark! what discord follows; each thing meets
 In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe: 113
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead:
 Force should be right; or rather, right and
 wrong— 116

Between whose endless jar justice resides—
 Should lose their names, and so should justice
 too.
 Then every thing includes itself in power,
 Power into will, will into appetite; 120
 And appetite, a universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make perforce a universal prey,
 And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
 This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125
 Follows the choking.
 And this neglection of degree it is
 That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
 It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd 129
 By him one step below, he by the next,
 That next by him beneath; so every step,
 Exemplified by the first pace that is sick 132
 Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
 Of pale and bloodless emulation:
 And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
 Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
 Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.
Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-
 cover'd
 The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
 Ulysses, 140
 What is the remedy?
Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
 The sinew and the forehead of our host,
 Having his ear full of his airy fame, 144
 Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
 Lies mocking our designs. With him Patroclus
 Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
 Breaks scurril jests, 148
 And with ridiculous and awkward action—
 Which, slanderer, he imitation calls—
 He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
 Thy toposse deputation he puts on 152
 And, like a strutting player, whose conceit
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffold-
 age,— 156
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
 He acts thy greatness in:—and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms un-squar'd,
 Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
 dropp'd, 160
 Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff
 The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
 Cries, 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just. 164
 Now playme Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard,
 As he being drest to some oration.'

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, like as Vulcan and his wife:— 168
Yet good Achilles still cries, 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus, Arming to answer in a night alarm.'

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age 172
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet: and at this sport
Sir Valour dies; cries, 'O! enough, Patroclus;
Or give me ribs of steel; I shall split all 177
In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact, 180
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes. 184

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain—
Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice—many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head 188
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him;
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites— 192
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint—
To match us in comparison with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger. 196

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it
cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Foretell prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts, 200
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on, and know by measure
Of their observant toil the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity: 204
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war;
So that the ram that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls 209
By reason guides his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. [A tucket.]
Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus. 213
Men. From Troy.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you fore our tent?

Æne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you? 216

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,

Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles'
arm 220

'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave and large security. How may

A stranger to those most imperial looks 224
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How!

Æne. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush 228

Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus:

Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon? 232

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:

But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, 237

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
Jove's accord,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas!
Peace, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips! 240

The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth;

But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends. 244

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
Æneas?

Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy. 249

Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
him:

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
To set his sense on the attentive bent, 252
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind:

It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour;

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Æne. Trumpet, blow aloud, 256
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy
tents;

And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy. 260

A prince called Hector,—Priam is his father,—
Who in this dull and long-continu'd truce
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak: kings, princes, lords!
If there be one among the fair'st of Greece 265
That holds his honour higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour, and knows not his fear,
That loves his mistress more than in confession, 269

With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, 273
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms; 276
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:
If any come, Hector shall honour him; 280
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sunburnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord
Æneas; 284

If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home: but we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love! 288
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But if there be not in our Grecian host 293
One noble man that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me,
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, 296
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn;
And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world: his youth in flood, 300
I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood.

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand; 304

To our pavilion shall I lead you first.
Achilles shall have word of this intent;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to
tent:

Yourself shall feast with us before you go, 308

And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.

Ulyss. Nestor!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain; 312

Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis:

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up 317

In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,

Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how? 320

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,

Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance 324

Whose grossness little characters sum up:

And, in the publication, make no strain,

But that Achilles, were his brain as barren

As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows, 328

'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose

Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you? 332

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring those honours off,

If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,

Yet in the trial much opinion dwells; 336

For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute

With their fin'st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd

In this wild action; for the success, 340

Although particular, shall give a scantling

Of good or bad unto the general;

And in such indexes, although small pricks

To their subsequent volumes, there is seen 344

The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd

He that meets Hector issues from our choice;

And choice, being mutualact of all our souls, 348

Makes merit her election, and doth boil,

As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd

Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,

What heart receives from hence the conquering
part, 352

To steel a strong opinion to themselves?

Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,

In no less working than are swords and bows

Directive by the limbs. 356

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us like merchants show our foulest wares,
And think perchance they'll sell; if not, 360
The lustre of the better yet to show
Shall show the better. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame in this 364
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should share with
him: 368
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes, Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he were foil'd, 372

Why then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No; make a lottery;
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance as the worthier man, 377
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall

His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends. 380
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss, 384
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes:
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice; 388
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had boils? full,
all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites! 4

Ther. And those boils did run? Say so, did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog! 8

Ther. Then would come some matter from him: I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear?

Feel, then.

[Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vinewedst leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness. 16

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but I think thy horse will sooner can an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks! 21

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus? 24

Ajax. The proclamation!

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not: my fingers itch. 28

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsome scab of Greece.
When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another. 33

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!

Ther. Thou grumbllest and raillest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. 40

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur. [Beating him.

Ther. Do, do. 45

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord!
thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinego may tutor thee: thou scurvyvaliant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord! 56

Ajax. You cur!

[Beating him.

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this? 60

How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?
Ther. Nay, look upon him. 64
Achil. So I do: what's the matter?
Ther. Nay, but regard him well.
Achil. 'Well!' why, so I do.
Ther. But yet you look not well upon him;
 for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax. 69
Achil. I know that, fool.
Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.
Ajax. Therefore I beat thee. 72 Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him. 80
Achil. What?
Ther. I say, this Ajax,— [AJAX offers to strike him.]
Achil. Nay, good Ajax.
Ther. Has not so much wit— 84
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace, fool! 88
Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you
 there.
Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall— 92
Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?
Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.
Patr. Good words, Thersites. 96
Achil. What's the quarrel?
Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon
 me. 100
Ther. I serve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I serve here voluntary.
Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary:
 Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress. 107
Ther. Even so; a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains: a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel. 112
Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?
Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen, and make you plough up the wars. 117
Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to,
 Ajax! tol 120
Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.
Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.
Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace! 124
Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?
Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.
Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools. [Exit.]
Patr. A good riddance. 132
Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:
 That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
 Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy
 To morrow morning call some knight to arms
 That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare 137
 Maintain—I know not what: 'tis trash. Fare-
 well.
Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?
Achil. I know not: it is put to lottery; otherwise, 140
 He knew his man.
Ajax. O, meaning you. I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches
 spent,
 Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:
 'Deliver Helen, and all damage else,
 As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, 4 Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd
 In hot digestion of this cormorant war,
 Shall be struck off.' Hector, what say you to't?
Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, 8
 As far as toucheth my particular,
 Yet, dread Priam,
 There is no lady of more softer bowels,
 More spongy to suck in the sense of fear, 12
 More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'
 Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
 Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
 The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches 16
 To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
 Since the first sword was drawn about this
 question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes,
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours, 21
To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies 24
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie! my brother,
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king
So great as our dread father in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past proportion of his infinite? 29
And buckle in a waist most fathomless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame! 32

Hel. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him
so? 36

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous, 40
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels, 44
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep: manhood and
honour

Should have hare-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts 48

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale, and lustihood deject.

Hec. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught but as 'tis valu'd?
Hec. But value dwells not in particular will;

It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry 56
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes that is inclinable
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit. 60

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores 64

Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench from this and to stand firm by
honour. 68

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have soil'd them, nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sink
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds—old wranglers—took a truce
And did him service: he touch'd the ports
desir'd, 76

And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.

Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl, 81
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.

If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,— 84
As you must needs, for you all cried 'Go, go,'—
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,—
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your
hands,

And cry'd 'Inestimable!'—why do you now 88
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O! theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep! 93
But thieves unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace

We fear to warrant in our native place. 96

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hec. It is Cassandra. 100

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand
eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hec. Peace, sister, peace!

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled
eld, 104

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.

Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand; 109
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe!
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.]

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains 113

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason, 116
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it, 120
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd 124
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst
us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain. 129

Par. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings as your counsels;
And I attest the gods, your full consent 132

Gave wings to my propension and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project:
For what, alas! can these my single arms?

What propugnation is in one man's valour, 136
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will, 140
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall; 144
So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasure such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape 148
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.

What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up, 152
On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?

There's not the meanest spirit on our party 156
Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
When Helen is defended, nor none so noble
Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd

Where Helen is the subject: then, I say, 160
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said
well;

And on the cause and question now in hand 164
Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.

The reasons you allege do more conduce 168
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves 173
All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity

Than wife is to the husband? if this law 176
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;

There is a law in each well-order'd nation 180
To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws 184
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud

To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion 188

Is this, in way of truth; yet, ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;

For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities. 193

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:

Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood 197

Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200 Whose present courage may beat down our foes,

And fame in time to come canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory 204

As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst 208
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.

I was advertis'd their great general slept
 Whilst emulation in the army crept: 212
 This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—*The Grecian Camp. Before
 ACHILLES' Tent.*

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O! thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods, and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have; which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil Envy say Amen. What, ho! my Lord Achilles! 24

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles? 37

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me! 40

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals?

Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles? 48

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou? 52

Patr. Thou mayst tell that knowest.

Achil. O! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done. 60

Achil. He is a privileged man. Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool. 65

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool? 72

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpigo on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Agam. Where is Achilles? 84

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by Our appertainments, visiting of him: 88
 Let him be told so; lest perchance he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent: 92

He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why? let him show us a cause. A word, my lord.

[Takes AGAMEMNON aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction: but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry If any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness and this noble state To call upon him; he hopes it is no other But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus: We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath, and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues, Not virtuously on his own part beheld, Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss, Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin

If you do say we think him over-proud And under-honest, in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind His humorous predominance; yea, watch His pettish luns, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add, That if he overhold his price so much, We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine Not portable, lie under this report: 'Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:

A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant: tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;

We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you.

[Exit ULYSSES.]

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. [Aside.] Yet he loves himself: is't not strange?

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none, But carries on the stream of his dispose Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not upon our fair request

Untent his person and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,

He makes important: possess'd he is with greatness,

And speaks not to himself but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse,

That 'twixt his mental and his active parts Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages And batters down himself: what should I say? He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it

Cry 'No recovery.'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear lord, go you and meet him in his tent:
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led 192
At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon! let it not be so.
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: shall the proud
lord 196

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam,
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself, shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he? 201

No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit, 204
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:

That were to enlarge his fat-already pride,
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion. 209
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder, 'Achilles go to him.'

Nest. [Aside.] O! this is well; he rubs the vein of him. 213

Dio. [Aside.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist 216
I'll pash him o'er the face.

Ulyss. O, no! you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride.

Let me go to him. 220

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. [Aside.] How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be sociable? 224

Ulyss. [Aside.] The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. [Aside.] He will be the physician that should be the patient. 228

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. [Aside.] Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. A' should not bear it so, a' should eat swords first: shall pride carry it? 232

Nest. [Aside.] An't would, you'd carry half.

Ulyss. [Aside.] A' would have ten shares.

Ajax. I will knead him; I will make him supple.

Nest. [Aside.] He's not yet through warm: force him with praises: pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. 238

Ulyss. [To AGAMEMNON.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so. 240

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so? 244

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us! Would he were a Trojan! 248

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now,—

Ulyss. If he were proud,—

Dio. Or covetous of praise,—

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne,— 252

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected!

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;

Praise him that got thee, her that gave thee
suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature 256

Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition:

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half: and, for thy vigour, 260

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor

Instructed by the antiquary times, 265

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him, 269

But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Ulyss. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart

Achilles 272

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general

To call together all his state of war;

Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west, 277

And call their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks

draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean? 4
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.
Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman;
I must needs praise him.
Serv. The Lord be praised! 8
Pan. You know me, do you not?
Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know me better. I am the Lord Pandarus. 12
Serv. I hope I shall know your honour
better.
Pan. I do desire it.
Serv. You are in the state of grace. 16
Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles. [Music within.] What music is this?
Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts. 21
Pan. Know you the musicians?
Serv. Wholly, sir.
Pan. Who play they to? 24
Serv. To the hearers, sir.
Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Pan. Command, I mean, friend. 28
Serv. Who shall I command, sir?
Pan. Friend, we understand not one another:
I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play? 32
Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul. 36
Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?
Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes. 44
Serv. Sudden business: there's a stewed phrase, indeed.

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measures, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen!
fair thoughts be your fair pillow! 50
Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.
Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.
Nell, he is full of harmony. 57
Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir!
Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude. 61
Par. Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits.
Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.
My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word? 65
Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out:
we'll hear you sing, certainly.
Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord. My dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother
Troilus—
Helen. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet
lord,— 73
Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to: commends himself most affectionately to you.
Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a sweet queen, i' faith. 80 Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words: no, no. And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My Lord Pandarus,— 88
Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?
Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night? 92
Helen. Nay, but my lord,— Pan. What says my sweet queen! My cousin will fall out with you. You must know where he sups. 96
Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer
Cressida.
Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide.
Come, your disposer is sick. 100
Par. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
Par. I spy. 104
Pan. You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet queen.
Helen. Why, this is kindly done.
Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen. 109 Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.
Pan. Hel! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain. 113
Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this.
I'll sing you a song now. 117

Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may. 120

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Lovel ay, that it shall, i' faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but
love. 125

Pan. In good troth, it begins so:
[Sings.]

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

For, oh! love's bow 128

Shoots buck and doe:

The shaft confounds,

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore. 132

These lovers cry O! O! they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill,

Doth turn O! O! to ha! ha! he! 136

So dying love lives still:

O! O! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

O! O! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose. 141

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love. 145

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood? hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers?
Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day? 149

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so.
How chance my brother Troilus went not? 153

Helen. He hangs the lip at something: you know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen. 160

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

[Exit. A retreat sounded.]

Par. They're come from field: let us to Priam's hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you 164

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers
touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do
more 168

Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have, 172
Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and TROILUS' Boy, meeting.

Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him
thither. 4

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O! here he comes. How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.]

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks 9
Staying for waftage. O! be thou my Charon,
And give me swift transportance to those fields
Where I may wallow in the lily-beds 12
Propos'd for the deserv'd! O gentle Pandarus!
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted
wings,

And fly with me to Cressid.

Pan. Walk here i' the orchard. I'll bring her straight. [Exit.]

Tro. I am giddy, expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense. What will it be
When that the watery palate tastes indeed 20
Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me,
Swounding destruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweet-
ness

For the capacity of my ruder powers: 24
I fear it much; and I do fear besides
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying. 28

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready: she'll come straight: you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom;

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse; 36

And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encountering
The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush?
shame's a baby. Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me.
What! are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills. Why do you not speak to her? Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend day-light! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress.
How now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; but she'll bereave you of the deeds too if she call your activity in question. What! billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire. [Exit.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressid! how often have I wished me thus! 64

Cres. Wished, my lord! The gods grant,—O
my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly. 73

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worse. 77

Tro. O! let my lady apprehend no fear: in all
Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither? 80

Tro. Nothing but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit. 88

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters? 95

Tro. Are there such? such are not we.
Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove;
our head shall go bare, till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. 105

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What! blushing still? have you not done talking yet? 108

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he flinch, chide me for it. 113

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too.
Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won: they are burrs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown. 120

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win? 124

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my
lord,

With the first glance that ever—pardon me—
If I confess much you will play the tyrant.

I love you now; but, till now, not so much 128
But I might master it: in faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!

Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us 132
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,

Or that we women had men's privilege 136
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see! your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth. 141

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, i' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss: 145
I am ashamed: O heavens! what have I done?
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid? 148

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady? 152

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave, 156
To be another's fool. I would be gone:
Where is my wit? I speak I know not what.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love; 160

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise,
Or else you love not, for to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above. 164

Tro. O! that I thought it could be in a woman—

As if it can I will presume in you—
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth, 168
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays:
Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,
That my integrity and truth to you 172
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas!
I am as true as truth's simplicity, 176
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight!
When right with right wars who shall be most right.

True swains in love shall in the world to come
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rimes, 181

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, 184
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited, 188
'As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself, 192
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing, yet let memory, 196
From false to false, among false maids in love
Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said 'as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, 200
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

'As false as Cressid.'

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal it:
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name; call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, Amen. 212

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away!

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! 220
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That through the sight I bear in things to come,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, 5
Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, have become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste, 13
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf. 16
Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?
make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore— 20

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied; but this Antenor
I know is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negociations all must slack, 24
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence 28

Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have What he requests of us. Good Diomed, 32
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden 36
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands in the entrance of his tent:

Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all, 40
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unplausible eyes are bent on him:
If so, I have derision med'cinable 44
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride, for supple knees 48
Feed arrogance and are the poor man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along:
So do each lord, and either greet him not, 52
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What! comes the general to speak with me?

You know my mind; I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy. 56

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord. 60

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit.]

Achil. What! does the cuckold scorn me? 64

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow. 68

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles; 72

To come as humbly as they us'd to creep

To holy altars.

Achil. What! am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,

Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd is
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others 77

As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings but to the summer,

And not a man, for being simply man, 80

Hath any honour, but honour for those honours

That are without him, as places, riches, and favour,

Prizes of accident as oft as merit:

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers, 84

The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,

Do one pluck down another, and together

Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:

Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy 88

At ample point all that I did possess,

Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out

Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses: 92

I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me,

That man, how dearly ever parted,

How much in having, or without or in, 97

Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,

Nor feels not what he owes but by reflection;

As when his virtues shining upon others 100

Heat them, and they retort that heat again

To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses!

The beauty that is borne here in the face

The bearer knows not, but commends itself 104

To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself—
That most pure spirit of sense—behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form; 108
For speculation turns not to itself
Till it hath travell'd and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, 112
It is familiar, but at the author's drift;
Who in his circumstance expressly proves
That no man is the lord of any thing—Though in and of him there be much consisting— 116

Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberates 120

The voice again, or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
this;

And apprehended here immediately 124
The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse,
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use! 128
What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow,

An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens! what some men
do; 132

While some men leave to do.

How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!

How one man eats into another's pride, 136
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords! why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast, 140
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me
Good word or look: what! are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his
back, 145

Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd 148

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail 152

In monumental mockery. Take the instant
way;

For honour travels in a strait so narrow Where one but goes abreast: keep, then, the path;

For emulation hath a thousand sons 156

That one by one pursue: if you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by
And leave you hindmost; 160

Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'errun and trampled on: then what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
yours; 164

For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer: welcome ever smiles, 168
And farewell goes out sighing. O! let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was;

For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service, 172
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born gawds, 176

Though they are made and moulded of things past,

And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object: 180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on
thee, 184

And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And ease thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods
themselves, 189

And drove great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic. 192
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known!

Ulyss. Is that a wonder? 196
The providence that's in a watchful state

Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps, Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods, 200

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery—with whom relation
Durst never meddle—in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine 204
Than breath or pen can give expressure to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;

And better would it fit Achilles much 208
To throw down Hector than Polyxena;
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump,

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win, 213
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.'
Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break. [Exit.]

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd
you. 217

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this:
They think my little stomach to the war 221
And your great love to me restrains you thus.
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane, 225
Be shock to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and perhaps receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake; 228
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O! then, beware;
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves:

Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger; 232
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-clus:

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him 236
T' invite the Trojan lords after the combat
To see us here unarmed. I have a woman's longing,

An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace; 240
To talk with him and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What? 244

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be? 252

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride and a stand; ruminates like a hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out;' and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break 't himself in vainglory. He knows not me: I said, 'Good morrow, Ajax;' and he replies, 'Thanks, Agamemnon.'
What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. 269

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him,
Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars;
he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. 276

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him, I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cætera. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax! 284

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,— 289

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon. 292

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't? 296

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me. 301

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. 309

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse, for that's the more capable creature. 313

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, on one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant with a torch; on the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTE-NOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long

As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business 4

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow, Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand: Witness the process of your speech, wherein 8
You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce;
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance 12
As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm, and, so long,
health!

But when contention and occasion meet, 16
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life
With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
With his face backward. In humane gentleness,
Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, 21
Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love in such a sort

The thing he means to kill more excellently. 24

Dio. We sympathize. Jove, let Æneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die, 28
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!
Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despitiful gentle greeting, 32

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.

What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring this Greek 36

To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid.
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us. I constantly do think— 40
Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge—

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear 44
We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time 48
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit.]
Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, 52
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best—Myself or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:
He merits well to have her that doth seek her—
Not making any scruple of her soileure— 56
With such a hell of pain and world of charge,
And you as well to keep her that defend her—
Not palating the taste of her dishonour—
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends: 60
He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
You, like a lecher, out of her whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors: 64
Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;

But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris: 68

For every false drop in her bawdy veins
 A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
 Of her contaminated carrion weight
 A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak, 72
 She hath not given so many good words breath
 As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.
Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
 Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy; 76
 But we in silence hold this virtue well,
 We'll not commend what we intend to sell.
 Here lies our way. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Court before PANDARUS' House.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.
Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down:
 He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not;
 To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes, 4
 And give as soft attachment to thy senses
 As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow then.
Tro. I prithee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aweary of me?
Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day, 8
 Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
 I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.
Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays 12

As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love
 With wings more momentary-swift than
 thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cres. Prithee, tarry:

You men will never tarry. 16
 O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off,
 And then you would have tarried. Hark!
 there's one up.

Pan. [Within.] What! are all the doors open
 here?

Tro. It is your uncle. 20
Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking: I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. How now, how now! how go maiden-
 heads?

Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid? 24

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do—and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what: what have I brought you to do? 28

Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart!
 you'll ne'er be good,

Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchial! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take
 him!

Cres. Did not I tell you? 'would he were knock'd o' the head! [Knocking within.]

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see. 36
 My lord, come you again into my chamber:

You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. [Knocking within.]

How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in:
 I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.]
Pan. [Going to the door.] Who's there?
 what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now! what's the matter? 45

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my Lord Æneas! By my troth,

I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here? 49

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord: do not deny him: it doth import him much to speak
 with me. 53

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn: for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? 56

Æne. Whol nay, then: come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you're 'ware. You'll be so true to him, to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go. 60

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash: there is at hand
 Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, 64

The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
 Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,

Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
 We must give up to Diomedes' hand 68

The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?
Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy:
 They are at hand and ready to effect it.
Tro. How my achievements mock me! 72
 I will go meet them: and, my Lord Æneas,
 We met by chance; you did not find me here.
Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
 Have not more gift in taciturnity. 76
[Exeunt TROILUS and ÆNEAS.]
Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost?
 The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad: a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck! 80

Enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! What is the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah! ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above! 88

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan. Prithce, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death. O poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor! 93

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor. Thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it. 100

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity; 104
 No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me
 As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine!
 Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood
 If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,
 Do to this body what extremes you can; 109
 But the strong base and building of my love
 Is as the very centre of the earth,
 Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep,—

Pan. Do, do. 113

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks, Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
 With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Before PANDARUS' House.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,
 Tell you the lady what she is to do, 4
 And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house;
 I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:

And to his hand when I deliver her,
 Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus 8
 A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.]

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
 And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
 Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in PANDARUS' House.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
 The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
 And violenteth in a sense as strong 4
 As that which causeth it: how can I moderate it?

If I could temporize with my affection,
 Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
 The like allayment could I give my grief: 8
 My love admits no qualifying dross;
 No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah! sweet ducks.

Cres. [Embracing him.] O Troilus! Troilus!

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,—

O heart, heavy heart, 16
 Why sigh'st thou without breaking?
 when he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart
 By friendship nor by speaking. 20
 There was never a truer rime. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it. How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity, 24
 That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
 More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from
 me.

Cres. Have the gods envy? 28

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What! and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible? 32

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance

Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by

All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips

Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents 36

Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.

We two, that with so many thousand sighs

Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves

With the rude brevity and discharge of one. 41

Injurious time now with a robber's haste

Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how:

As many farewells as be stars in heaven, 44

With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them,

He fumbles up into a loose adieu,

And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,

Distasted with the salt of broken tears. 48

Æne. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: some say the Genius so

Cries 'Come!' to him that instantly must die.

Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root!

[Exit.]

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks! 56

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,

For it is parting from us: 61

I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing thee,

For I will throw my glove to Death himself,

That there's no maculation in thy heart; 64

But, 'be thou true,' say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation; be thou true,

And I will see thee.

Cres. O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers 68

As infinite as imminent; but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, 72
To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens! 'be true' again!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:

The Grecian youths are full of quality; 76

They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature,

Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise:

How novelty may move, and parts with person,

Alas! a kind of godly jealousy,— 80

Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,—

Makes me afear'd.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question 84

So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,

Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,

Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant: 88

But I can tell that in each grace of these

There lurks a still and dumb-discursive devil

That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will? 92

Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will not:

And sometimes we are devils to ourselves

When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,

Presuming on their changeful potency. 97

Æne. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;

And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you. 100

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:

While others fish with craft for great opinion,

I with great truth catch mere simplicity; 104

Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit

Is plain, and true; there's all the reach of it.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTEOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady 109

Which for Antenor we deliver you:

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,

And by the way possess thee what she is. 112

Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,

If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,

Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe

As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, 116
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously, 121

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises 124
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O! be not mov'd, Prince Troilus:
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust; and know you, lord, 132
I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say 'be't so,'
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'no.'

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Diomed, This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
head. 137

Lady, give me your hand, and, as you walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt TROILUS; CRESSIDA, and DIOMEDES. Trumpet sounded.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Ene. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss, 141
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field
with him.

Dei. Let us make ready straight. 144

Ene. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeant.]

SCENE V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

*Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR,
and Others.*

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air 4
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:

Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek 8
Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood;

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days. 12
Agam. Is not yond Diomed with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth. 16

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.
Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; 20
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady: 24

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing
now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment, 28
And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O, deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this,
mine: 32

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O! this is trim.

Patr. Paris and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive? 36
Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;
Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one. 40

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady! every man is odd.
Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know 'tis
true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you. 44
Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg, then. 48

Ulyss. Why, then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor; claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you. 52

Dio. Lady, a word: I'll bring you to your father. [DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA.

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out 56

At every joint and motive of her body. O! these encounterers, so glib of tongue, That give a coasting welcome ere it comes, And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts To every tickling reader, set them down 61 For sluttish spoils of opportunity

And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop. 64

Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done

To him that victory commands? or do you purpose

A victor shall be known? will you the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity 68

Pursue each other, or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions. 72

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,

A little proudly, and great deal misprising

The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir.

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing. 76

Æne. Therefore Achilles; but, whate'er, know this:

In the extremity of great and little, Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector; The one almost as infinite as all, 80 The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:

In love whereof half Hector stays at home; 84 Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle, then? O! I perceive you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight, 88

Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, So be it; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath: the combatants being kin 92 Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight: 96

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word, Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue; Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon calm'd:

His heart and hand both open and both free; 100 For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows; Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impure thought with breath.

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous; 104 For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes To tender objects; but he in heat of action

Is more vindicative than jealous love.

They call him Troilus, and on him erect 108 A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth Even to his inches, and with private soul

Did in great Ilium thus translate him to me. 112

[Alarum. HECTOR and AJAX fight.

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st; awake thee!

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd: there, Ajax!

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you. 116

Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I no more:

Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son, A cousin-german to great Priam's seed; 120

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.

Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so

That thou couldst say, 'This hand is Grecian all,

And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg 123

All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds in my father's, by Jove multipotent, 128
Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member

Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword 133
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax;
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
Thou art too gentle and too free a man:
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death. 140

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st
eyes

Cries, 'This is he!' could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides, 145
What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,—
As sold I have the chance,—I would desire 149
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great
Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me,
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part; Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin; 156

I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us
here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name
by name;

But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes 160
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy;
But that's no welcome; understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks 165

And formless ruin of oblivion;
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, 168
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Aga-memnon.

Agam. [To TROILUS.] My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you. 172

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:

You brace of war-like brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer?

Æne. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O! you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks! 176

Mock not that I affect the untraded oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade menot commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme. 180

Hec. O! pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee
oft,

Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth; and I have seen thee, 184

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanc'd sword i' th'
air,

Not letting it decline on the declin'd; 188

That I have said to some my standers-by,
'Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!'

And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee
in, 192

Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier
good; 196

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Æne. 'Tis the old Nestor. 200

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with
time:

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention, 204

As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Hal

By this white beard, I'd fight with thee tomorrow. 208

Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time.—

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well.
 Ah! sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
 Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
 In Ilium, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue: 216

My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
 For yonder walls, that pertly front your town, Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
 Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you: 220
 There they stand yet, and modestly I think,
 The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
 A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,
 And that old common arbitrator, Time, 224
 Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
 Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome.
 After the general, I beseech you next
 To feast with me and see me at my tent. 228

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou!

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
 I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
 And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles? 232

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on
 thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second
 time, 236

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O! like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
 Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body 241

Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or there?

That I may give the local wound a name,
 And make distinct the very breach whereout 244
 Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,

To answer such a question. Stand again:
 Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly 248
 As to prenominate in nice conjecture
 Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
 I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well,
 For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
 But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,

I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.
 You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag; 256
 His insolence draws folly from my lips;
 But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
 Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:
 And you, Achilles, let these threats alone, 260
 Till accident or purpose bring you to't:

You may have every day enough of Hector,
 If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
 Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him. 264

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field;
 We have had pelting wars since you refus'd
 The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
 To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death; 268
 To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive we afterwards,
 As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall 272
 Concur together, severally entreat him.

Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
 That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt all except TROILUS and ULYSSES.]

Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
 In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely
 Troilus:

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
 Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth,
 But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view 281
 On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to thee so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent, 284
 To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
 As gentle tell me, of what honour was
 This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
 That waits her absence? 288

Tro. O, sir! to such as boasting show their scars

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
 She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
 But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp. Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine
 to-night,
 Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.

Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy! 4
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee. 8

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound. 13

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prithee, be silent, boy: I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet. 18

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries! 28

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt, you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no. 33

Ther. No! why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, diminutives of nature.

Patr. Out, gall! 40

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle. Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba, 44

A token from her daughter, my fair love,

Both taxing me and gaging me to keep

An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:

Fall Greeks; fail fame; honour or go or stay;

My major vow lies here, this I'll obey. 49

Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;

This night in banqueting must all be spent.

Away, Patroclus! 52

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg, to what form but that he is should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox; to an ox, were nothing: he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites, for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! spirits and fires! 74

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect.

I trouble you. 76

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good-night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you. 80

Hect. Thanks and good-night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good-night, my lord.

Hect. Good-night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet,' quoth a! sweet sink, sweet sewer. 85

Achil. Good-night and welcome both at once, to those

That go or tarry.

Agam. Good-night. 88

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business, The tide whereof is now. Good-night, great Hector. 92

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to TROILUS.] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent.

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good-night. 96

[Exit DIOMEDES; ULYSSES and

TROILUS following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabblers the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change: the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho! speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you. 4

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance;
after them THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my chargin!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar! 8

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember? 12

Cres. Remember! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do, then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember? 16

Ulyss. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what,— 20

Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin: you are forsworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow
on me? 24

Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath;

Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good-night.

Tro. Hold, patience! 28

Ulyss. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,—

Dio. No, no, good-night; I'll be your fool no
more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear. 32

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart,
I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous; 36
The time right deadly. I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off:

You flow to great distraction; come, my lord.

Tro. I pray thee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come. 40

Tro. I pray you, stay. By hell, and all hell's torments,

I will not speak a word!

Dio. And so, good-night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord!

Tro. By Jove, 44

I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dio. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once
again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something:
will you go? 48

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak
a word:

There is between my will and all offences

A guard of patience: stay a little while. 52

Ther. How the devil Luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together!
Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you, then? 56

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.
Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord; 60
 I will not be myself, nor have cognition
 Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge! now, now, now!
Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. 64
Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?
Ulyss. My lord,—
Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.
Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it
 well.
 He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give't to me
 again. 68

Dio. Whose was't?
Cres. It is no matter, now I have't again.
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
 I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens: well said, whetstone! 72

Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. Ay, that.
Cres. O! all you gods. O pretty, pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
 Of thee and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, 77
 As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me;
 He that takes that doth take my heart withal.

Dio. I had your heart before; this follows it.
Tro. I did swear patience. 81
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith you shall not;

I'll give you something else.
Dio. I will have this. Whose was it?
Cres. 'Tis no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was. 85
Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.

But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond, 88
 And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge
 it.

Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn, 92
 It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past: and yet it is not:

I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then, farewell;

Thou never shalt mock Diomed again. 96
Cres. You shall not go: one cannot speak a
 word,
 But it straight starts you.

Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not me

Pleases me best. 100

Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?
Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—

Do come:—I shall be plagu'd.

Dio. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good-night: I prithee, come.—

[Exit DIOMEDES.

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee, 104
 But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah! poor our sex; this fault in us I find,
 The error of our eye directs our mind.

What error leads must err. O! then conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude. 109

[Exit.

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,

Unless she said, 'My mind is now turn'd whore.'

Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

Tro. It is.

Ulyss. Why stay we, then?

Tro. To make a recordation to my soul 113

Of every syllable that here was spoke.

But if I tell how these two did co-act,

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? 116

Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

An esperance so obstinately strong,

That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears,

As if those organs had deceptive functions,

Created only to calumniate. 121

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness. 124

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!

Think we had mothers; do not give advantage

To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme, 128

For depravation, to square the general sex

By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own
 eyes? 133

Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she;

If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony, 136

If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
 If there be rule in unity itself,
 This is not she. O madness of discourse,
 That cause sets up with and against itself; 140
 Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
 Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
 Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.
 Within my soul there doth conduce a fight 144
 Of this strange nature that a thing inseparate
 Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
 And yet the spacious breadth of this division
 Admits no orifice for a point as subtle 148
 As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.
 Instance, O instancel strong as Pluto's gates;
 Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
 Instance, O instancel strong as heaven itself;
 The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd; 153
 And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
 The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
 The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy
 reliques 156
 Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.
 Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
 With that which here his passion doth express?
 Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged
 well 160

In characters as red as Mars his heart
 Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
 With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
 Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love, 164
 So much by weight hate I her Diomed;
 That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm;
 Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
 My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout
 Which shipmen do the hurricano call, 169
 Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
 Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
 In his descent than shall my prompted sword
 Falling on Diomed. 173

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.
 Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
 Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, 176
 And they'll seem glorious.
 Ulyss. O! contain yourself;
 Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my
 lord.
 Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy: 180
 Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.
 Tro. Have with you, prince. My courteous lcrd, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair! and Diomed,
 Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head! 184
 Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt TROIUS, ÆNEAS, and ULYSSES.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Dio-med! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus would give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery: nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,
 To stop his ears against admonishment?
 Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
 Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in: 4
 By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.
 And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
 Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?
 And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent. 8
 Consort with me in loud and dear petition;
 Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
 Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter. 12
 Cas. O! 'tis true.
 Hect. Hol bid my trumpet sound.
 Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet
 brother.
 Hect. Be gone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
 Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish
 vows: 16

They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd
 Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
 And. O! be persuaded: do not count it holy

To hurt by being just: it is as lawful, 20
 For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
 And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the
 vow;
 But vows to every purpose must not hold. 24
 Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day? 29

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit CASSANDRA.]

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry: 32

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy. 36

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in
you,

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecian falls, 40

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O! 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods, 44

Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers,
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth. 48

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars 52
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword
drawn, 56

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay, 60
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come; go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself 64
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Æneas is a-field;

And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks, 68
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir, 72
Let me not shame respect, but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam! yield not to him.

And. Do not, dear father. 76

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit ANDROMACHE.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell! dear Hector. 80
Look! how thou diest; look! how thy eye turns pale;

Look! how thy wounds do bleed at many vents:
Hark! how Troy roars: how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth!
Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement, 85
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away! Away! 88

Cas. Farewell. Yet, soft! Hector, I take my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.
[Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in and cheer the town: we'll forth and fight;
Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at
night. 93

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR.
Alarums.]

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve. 96

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read. 100

Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cures, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there? 108

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

The effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.]

Go, wind to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds, But edifies another with her deeds. 113

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy dotting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry: they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t' other. 20

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx,

I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:

I do not fly; but advantageous care

Withdrew me from the odds of multitude. 24 Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian! now for thy whore, Trojan! now the sleeve, now the sleeve! [Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match? 28

Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No, no, I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee: live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle; yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;

Present the fair steed to my Lady Cressid: Fellow, commend my service to her beauty: Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, 4 And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon Hath Doreus prisoner, 8 And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pashed corpses of the kings Epistrophus and Cediis; Polixenes is slain; Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt; 12 Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised; the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers: haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all. 16

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now here he fights on Galathea his horse, 20 And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot, And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath: Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes, Dexterity so obeying appetite That what he will he does; and does so much That proof is called impossibility. 29

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O! courage, courage, princes; great Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangled Myrmidons, 33

That noseless, handleless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,
 Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
 And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, 36
 Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day
 Mad and fantastic execution,
 Engaging and redeeming of himself
 With such a careless force and forceless care 40
 As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
 Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.
Dio. Ay, there, there.
Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
 Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face; 45
 Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:
 Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?
Ajax. What wouldst thou?
Dio. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office 4
 Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! what,
 Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! Turn thy false face, thou traitor!
 And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!
Dio. Hal art thou there? 8
Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.
Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon.
Tro. Come, both you cogging Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother! 12

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now I do see thee. Hal have at thee,
 Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.

Be happy that my arms are out of use: 16
 My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
 But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
 Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well:—
 I would have been much more a fresher man, 20
 Had I expected thee. How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be?
 No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
 He shall not carry him: I'll be ta'en too, 24
 Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say!
 I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

Enter One in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark.
 No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well; 28
 I'll frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
 But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?
 Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myr-midons;
 Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel:
 Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath:
 And when I have the bloody Hector found, 4
 Empale him with your weapons round about;
 In fellest manner execute your aims.
 Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:
 It is decreed, Hector the great must die. 8
 [Exeunt.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull now, dog! 'Loo, Paris,
 'lool now, my double-henned sparrow! 'loo,
 Paris, 'lool The bull has the game: 'ware horns, ho! [Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS.

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. 16

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard

in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment. Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exit.]

SCENE VIII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without, Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life. Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath:

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death. [Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set; 5

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels: Even with the veil and darning of the sun, To close the day up, Hector's life is done. 8

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man I seek. [HECTOR falls.]

So, Ilium, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down!

Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone. 12 On! Myrmidons, and cry you all amain, 'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.'—

[A retreat sounded.]

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord. 16

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,

And, stickler-like, the armies separates.

My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,

Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.— [Sheathes his sword.]

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; 21 Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and Others marching. Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums!

[Within.] Achilles!

Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; 4 Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along. Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent. If in his death the gods have us befriended, 8 Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt marching.]

SCENE X.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ÆNEAS and Trojans.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.

Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hektor! the gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail, 4

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field.

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!

I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy, 8 And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not that tell me so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death; 12 But dare all imminence that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone:

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd 16

Go in to Troy, and say there Hector's dead:

There is a word will Priam turn to stone,

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word, 20

Scare Troy out of itself. But march away:

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare, 25

I'll through and through you! And, thou great-siz'd coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still, 28

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy! with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt ÆNEAS and Trojan Forces.]

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!
Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised. O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me see!—

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdu'd in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail. 44

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.
Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases; 56
And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

SCENE.—Rome and the Neighbourhood; Corioli and the Neighbourhood; Antium.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish? 5

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people. 8

All. We know't, we know't.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict? 13

All. No more talking on't; let it be done. Away, away!

Sec. Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularise their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge. 26

Sec. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

First Cit. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

Sec. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country? 32

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously. 36

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue. 42

Sec. Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous. 45

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

First Cit. Soft! who comes here? 52

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

Sec. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

First Cit. He's one honest enough: would all the rest were so! 56

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you
 With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths: they shall know we have strong arms too. 64

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit. We cannot, sir; we are undone already. 68

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care

Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them 72

Against the Roman state, whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder than can ever Appear in your impediment. For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it, and 77 Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack!

You are transported by calamity

Thither where more attends you; and you slander 80

The helms o' the state, who care for you like fathers,

When you curse them as enemies.

First Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet: suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must 92
Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale't a little more. 97

First Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale; but, an't please you, deliver. 100

Men. There was a time when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:
That only like a gulf it did remain
I' the midst o' the body, idle and unactive, 104
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest, where the other instruments

Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister 108
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answer'd,—

First Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly? 112

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus—

For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak—it tauntingly replied 116
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts

That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

First Cit. Your belly's answer? What!
The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye, 121
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps 124
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks! what then? what then?

First Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,

Who is the sink o' the body,—

Men. Well, what then? 128

First Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,

What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;
If you'll bestow a small, of what you have little,
Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

First Cit. You're long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend; 133
Your most grave belly was deliberate,

Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
'That I receive the general food at first, 137
Which you do live upon; and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood, 141
Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain;

And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency 145
Whereby they live. And though that all at once,

You, my good friends,—this says the belly,
mark me,—

First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. 'Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each, 149
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't?

First Cit. It was an answer: how apply you this? 153

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,

And you the mutinous members; for, examine Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly 156

Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find

No public benefit which you receive But it proceeds or comes from them to you, And no way from yourselves. What do you think, 160

You, the great toe of this assembly?
First Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost: 164

Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage. But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs: Rome and her rats are at the point of battle; The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcius!

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues, That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs?

First Cit. We have ever your good word.
Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter 173

Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs,

That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you,

The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, 176

Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,

Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is, 180

To make him worthy whose offence subdues him,

And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness

Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that 184 Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?

With every minute you do change a mind, 188

And call him noble that was now your hate, Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter,

That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, 192 Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another? What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof they say

The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say! 196 They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise, Who thrives, and who declines; side factions, and give out

Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, And feeling such as stand not in their liking, Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough! 202

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth, And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high 205

As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;

For though abundantly they lack discretion, 208 Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,

What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolv'd; hang 'em! They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs:

That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat; 212

That meat was made for mouths; that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich men only. With these shreds They vented their complainings; which being answer'd,

And a petition granted them, a strange one,— To break the heart of generosity, 217 And make bold power look pale,—they threw their caps

As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,

Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms, 221

Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—'Sdeath! The rabble should have first unroof'd the city, Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time 225 Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes

For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go; get you home, you fragments! 228

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here: what's the matter?

Mess. The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on 't; then we shall ha' means to vent

Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders. 232

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators; JUNIUS BRUTUS and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

First Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us;

The Volsces are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader,

Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't.

I sin in envying his nobility, 236

And were I anything but what I am,

I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make 240

Only my wars with him: he is a lion

That I am proud to hunt.

First Sen. Then, worthy Marcius, Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is; 244

And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou

Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.

What! art thou stiff? stand'st out?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius;

I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t'other, 248

Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O! true-bred.

First Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where I know

Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. [To COMINIUS.] Lead you on:

[To MARCIUS.] Follow Cominius; we must follow you; 252

Right worthy you priority.

Com. Noble Marcius!

First Sen. [To the Citizens.] Hencel to your homes! be gone.

Mar. Nay, let them follow:

The Volsces have much corn; take these rats thither

To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutiners,

Your valour puts well forth; pray, follow. 257

[Exeunt Senators, COMINIUS, MARCIUS, TITUS, and MENENIUS. Citizens steal away.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,— 260

Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Bemoek the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him; he is grown 264

Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature, Ticked with good success, disdains the shadow Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder His insolence can brook to be commanded 268 Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims, In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot Better be held nor more attain'd than by A place below the first; for what miscarries 272 Shall be the general's fault, though he perform To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure Will then cry out of Marcius 'O! if he Had borne the business.'

Sic. Besides, if things go well, 276 Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come:

Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius, Though Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults 280

To Marcius shall be honours, though indeed In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence and hear

How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion, More than his singularity, he goes 284 Upon this present action.

Bru. Let's along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Corioli. The Senate-house.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS and Senators.

First Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?

What ever have been thought on in this state, 4 That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone Since I heard thence; these are the words: I think

I have the letter here; yes, here it is. 8

*They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west: the dearth is great;
The people mutinous; and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius, your old enemy,— 12
Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,—
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you: 16
Consider of it.*

First Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when 20
They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

*It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery
We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was
To take in many towns ere almost Rome 24
Should know we were afoot.*

Sec. Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands;
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before's, for the remove 28
Bring up your army; but, I think you'll find They've not prepared for us.

Auf. O! doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more;
Some parcels of their power are forth already, 32
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you! 36
Auf. And keep your honours safe!

First Sen. Farewell.

Sec. Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—*Rome. A Room in MARCIUS'S
House.*

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA: they set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I would freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man. 19

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam;
how then?

Vol. Then, his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action. 28

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gen. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not. 32
Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum,
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair,
As children from a bear, the Volscies shunning
him:

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus:
'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome.' His bloody
brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvestman that's task'd to mow 40
Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter! no blood.

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba, 44
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords, contemning. Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. 48

[Exit Gentlewoman.]

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you. 52

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son? 58

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good
madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster. 61

Val. O' my word, the father's son; I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O! I warrant, how he mammocked it!

Vol. One on 's father's moods. 72

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. 77

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall. 80

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Vol. Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in. 86

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love. 91

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us. 97

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 101

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night. 104

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: The Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us. 113

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now she will but disease our better mirth. 117

Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us. 121

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: a wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet. 4

Lart. So the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him; lend you him I will

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half. 8

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence, To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast. 12

A Parley sounded. Enter, on the Walls, two Senators, and Others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he,

That's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums [Drums afar off.]

Are bringing forth our youth: we'll break our walls, 16

Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off! [Alarum afar off.]

There is Aufidius: list, what work he makes zo Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O! they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter, and pass over the stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight 24

With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on, my fellows:

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce, 28
And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beaten back to their trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,

You shames of Romel you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd 32
Further than seen, and one infect another
Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run
From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell! 36

All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale
With flight and ague'd fear! Mend and charge home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe
And make my wars on you; look to't: come on;
If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives, 41

As they us to our trenches follow'd.

Another alarum. The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volsces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are ope: now prove good seconds:

'Tis for the followers Fortune widens them, 44
Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like.

[He enters the gates.]

First Sol. Foolhardiness! not I.

Sec. Sol. Nor I.

[MARCIUS is shut in.]

Third Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.
[Alarum continues.]

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless. 48

First Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,

With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,
Clapp'd to their gates; he is himself alone,

To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow! 52

Who, sensibly, outdares his senseless sword,
And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left,
Marcius:

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible 57
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the
world 60

Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

First Sol. Look, sir!

Lart. O! 'tis Marcius!
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the city.]

SCENE V.—Corioli. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

Sec. Rom. And I this.

Third Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS, with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours 4

At a crack'd drachme! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with
them! 8

And hark, what noise the general makes! To
him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city, 12
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste

To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent

For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not; 16
My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you
well:

The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, 20

Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she places highest! So, farewell. 24

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!—

[Exit COMINIUS.]

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place; Call thither all the officers of the town,

Where they shall know our mind. Away! 28
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought; we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, 4

By interims and conveying gusts we have heard The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods! Lead their successes as we wish our own, That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering, 8

May give you thankful sacrifice.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issu'd, And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle: I saw our party to their trenches driven, 12 And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth, Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums: 16

How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour, And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volsces Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, 20 Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder, That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods! He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within.] Come I too late? 24

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor, More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue From every meaner man.

Enter MARCIUS.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others, 28

But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip ye In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart As merry as when our nuptial day was done, And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors. 32 How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees: Condemning some to death, and some to exile; Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the other; 36

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome, Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash, To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? 40

Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone; He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen, The common file—a plague! tribunes for them!—

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge 44

From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' the field? If not, why cease you till you are so? 48

Com. Marcius, we have at disadvantage fought,

And did retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius, 52 Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates, Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius, Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you, By all the battles wherein we have fought, 56 By the blood we have shed together, by the vows We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates; And that you not delay the present, but, 60 Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts, We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish You were conducted to a gentle bath, And balms applied to you, yet dare I never 64 Deny your asking: take your choice of those

That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear 69
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself; 72
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

*[They all shout, and wave their sworas;
take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.]*

O! me alone? Make you a sword of me? 76
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscies? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, 80
Though thanks to all, must I select from all:
the rest

Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows: 85
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon CORIOLI, going with drum and trumpet towards COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So; let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field, 4
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter from opposite sides MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:

Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot. 4 Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Hailoo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus, 8
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd; 'tis not my
blood

Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector 12
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not 'scape me here.—

[They fight, and certain Volscies come to the aid of AUFIDIUS.]

Officious, and not valiant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. 16

[Exeunt fighting, all driven in by MARCIUS.]

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter from one side, COMINIUS and Romans; from the other side, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,

Thou'lt not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend and shrug, 4
I' the end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,

And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull
Tribunes,

That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine
honours,

Shall say, against their hearts, 8
'We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!'

Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison: 12
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me. I have done

As you have done; that's what I can; induc'd
As you have been; that's for my country: 17
He that has but effected his good will

Hath overtaken mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know

The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech
you,— 25

In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,—before our army hear
me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart 28

To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,

Whereof we have taken good, and good store, of
all 32

The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth; to be taken forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general; 36
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing. 40

[A long flourish. They all cry 'Marcius!
Marcius!' cast up their caps and lances: COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare.]

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall

I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-faced soothing! 44
When steel grows soft as is the parasite's silk,
Let him be made a coverture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch, Which, without note, here's many else have
done, 49

You shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolic;
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted 52
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly. By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you,
Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles, 57

Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius Wears this war's garland; in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear 65
The addition nobly ever!

All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.]

Cor. I will go wash; 68

And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition 72
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;

Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome 76
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg 80
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it; 'tis yours. What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner; 84
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O! well begg'd!

Were he the butcher of my son, he should 88
Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter! forgot.

I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent: 92

The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is taken!

First Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot, 4
Being a Volsc, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find

I' the part that is at mercy? Five times,
 Marcius,
 I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me, 8
 And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
 As often as we eat. By the elements,
 If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
 He is mine, or I am his: mine emulation 12
 Hath not that honour in 't it had; for where
 I thought to crush him in an equal force—
 True sword to sword—I'll potch at him some way
 Or wrath or craft may get him.

First Sol. He's the devil. 16

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd

With only suffering stain by him; for him
 Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanctuary,
 Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol, 20
 The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
 Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
 Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
 My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it
 At home, upon my brother's guard, even there
 Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in 's heart. Go you to the city;

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must 28

Be hostages for Rome.

First Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you—

'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
 How the world goes, that to the pace of it 32
 I may spur on my journey.

First Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love? 8

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear. 13

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you. 16

Sic. } Well, sir.
Bru. }

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all. 21

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you? 26

Both. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both. Well, well, sir; well. 30

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir. 37

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O! that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves. O! that you could. 45

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates—alias fools—as any in Rome. 49

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough
 too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such weals-men as you are,—I cannot call you Lycurguses,
 —if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worship has delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too? 73

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejoin the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves.
You are a pair of strange ones. 90

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. 93

Men. Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying Marcus is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herds-men of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you. [BRUTUS and SICINIUS go aside.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast? 111

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcus approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcus coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation. 116

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Marcus coming home!

Vol. } Nay, 'tis true.

Vir. }

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel tonight. A letter for me! 124

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you;
I saw it.

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricuteic, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded. 133

Vir. O! no, no, no.

Vol. O! he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much.
Brings a' victory in his pocket? The wounds become him.

Vol. On 's brows, Menenius; he comes the third time home with the oaken garland. 140

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off. 143

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stayed by him I would not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this? 148

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes; the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war. He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly. 153

Val. In troth there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing. 157

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.
Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes.] God save your good worships! Marcus is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. [To VOLUMNIA.] Where is he wounded? 164

Vol. I' the shoulder, and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquinius seven hurts i' the body. 168

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh, there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him. 172

Men. Now, it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.]
Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcus: before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves
tears: 178

Death, that dark spirit, in 's nerry arm doth lie;
Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follows Coriolanus. 184
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

[Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O!

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods 189
For my prosperity. [Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,— 192
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?

But O! thy wife!

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd
home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, 197
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet? [To VALERIA.] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn: O! welcome
home; 200

And welcome, general; and ye're welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,

And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy.
Welcome.

A curse begnaw at very root on's heart 204
That is not glad to see thee! You are three

That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of
men,

We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet, welcome, warriors! 208

We call a nettle but a nettle, and

The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on!

Cor. [To VOLUMNIA and VALERIA.] Your hand, and yours: 212

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;

From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have liv'd 216

To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but

Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother, 220

I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol!

[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights 224

Are spectacl'd to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him: the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck, 228

Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows,

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd
With variable complexions, all agreeing 231

In earnestness to see him: seld-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff

To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in

Their nicely-gawded cheeks to the wanton spoil
Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a pother 237

As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were sliely crept into his human powers,

And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden 240

I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,

During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours

From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort. 245

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they upon their ancient malice will Forget with the least cause these his new honours, 248

Which that he'll give them, make I as little question

As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,

Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put 252

The napless vesture of humility;

Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds

To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word. O! he would miss it rather Than carry it but by the suit o' the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles. 256

Sic. I wish no better
Than have him hold that purpose and to put it
In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will. 260

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills,

A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred 264
He still hath held them; that to his power he would

Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders,
and

Disproportioned their freedoms; holding them,
In human action and capacity, 268
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in the war; who have their provand
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested 272
At some time when his soaring insolence Shall teach the people—which time shall not want,

If he be put upon 't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire 276
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis
thought

That Marcius shall be consul. 280
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him, and The blind to hear him speak: matrons flung gloves,

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers
Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended, 284
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts:

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time, 288
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers to lay cushions.

First Off. Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?

Sec. Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it. 4

First Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common
people. 7

Sec. Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't. 17

First Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waded indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love. 26

Sec. Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report; but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of in-grateful injury; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard
it.

First Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man: make way, they are coming. 41

A Sennel. Enter, with Lictors before them,
COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIO-LANUS, many other Senators, SICINIUS and BRUTUS. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volscies, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting, 44
To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country: therefore,
please you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general 48
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus, whom
We meet here both to thank and to remember

With honours like himself.

First Sen. Speak, good Cominius: 53
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes.]

Masters o' the people, 56
We do request your kindest ears, and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sc. We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts 60
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than 64
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly;
But yet my caution was more pertinent 68
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak.

[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away.]

Nay, keep your place.

First Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear 72
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft, 76
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words.

You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your
people,

I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i' the sun 80

When the alarum were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd. [Exit.]

Men. Masters of the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,— That's thousand to one good one,—when you now see 84

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than one on's ears to hear it. Proceed,

Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus

Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held 88

That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years, 92
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others; our then dictator, Whom with all praise I point at, saw him
fight,

When with his Amazonian chin he drove 96
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats, 100

When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea, 104
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,

Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fliers,
And by his rare example made the coward 109
Turn terror into sport: as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword, death's stamp, 112

Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; aidless came off, 117

And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Corioli like a planet. Now all's his:

When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce 120
His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quick'n'd what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 124
'Twere a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

First Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours 128
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards 132
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:

Let him be call'd for.

First Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear. 136

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat
them,

For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you,

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. [Aside to SICINIUS.] Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,

As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!
[Flourish. Exeunt all but SICINIUS and BRUTUS.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will require them,

As if he did condemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come; we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Sec. Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

First Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

Third Cit. We have been called so of many;
not that our heads are some brown, some black,
some abram, some bald, but that our wits are so diversly coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

Sec. Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

Sec. Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

Sec. Cit. You are never without your tricks:
you may, you may.

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS, in a gown of humility, and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in a gown of humility:
mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Men. O, sir, you are not right: have you not known

The worthiest men have done't?

Cor. What must I say?
'I pray, sir,'—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, my wounds!

I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd and ran

From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me! the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire
them 60

To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em!
I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all:
I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray
you, 64

In wholesome manner.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean. [Exit MENENIUS.]

So, here comes a brace.

Re-enter two Citizens.

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here?

First Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to 't. 69

Cor. Mine own desert.

Sec. Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire. 72

First Cit. How! not your own desire?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

First Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you. 77

Cor. Well, then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

First Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly. 80

Cor. Kindly! sir, I pray, let me ha 't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir; what say you?

Sec. Cit. You shall ha 't, worthy sir. 84

Cor. A match, sir. There is in all two worthy voices begged. I have your alms: adieu.

First Cit. But this is something odd.

Sec. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt the two Citizens.]

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown. 92

Third Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma? 95

Third Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends;
you have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more vir-tuous that I have not been common in my love.
I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul. 110

Fourth Cit. We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily.

Third Cit. You have received many wounds for your country. 114

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further. 117

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily!
[Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!

Better it is to die, better to starve, 120
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this woolvish toge should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,

Their needless vouchers? Custom calls me to 't:
What custom wills, in all things should we do 't,

The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd

For truth to o'er-peer. Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go 129

To one that would do thus. I am half through;
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Here come more voices. 132

Re-enter three other Citizens.

Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear

Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more; your voices: 137

Indeed, I would be consul.

Fifth Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice. 140

Sixth Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen. 144
God save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt Citizens.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in the official marks invested, you 148

Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have dis-charg'd:

The people do admit you, and are summon'd

To meet anon, upon your approbation. 152

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again, 156

Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and MENIENUS.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks, 160 'Tis warm at 's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

First Cit. He has our voices, sir. 164

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your love.

Sec. Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

Third Cit. Certainly, 168

He flouted us downright.

First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech; he did not mock us.

Sec. Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says

He used us scornfully: he should have show'd us His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for 's country. 172

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

Third Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn, 'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom, 176

But by your voices, will not so permit me;

Your voices therefore: 'when we granted that, Here was, 'I thank you for your voices, thank you,

Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices 180

I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see 't, Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness

To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him As you were lesson'd, when he had no power, 185

But was a petty servant to the state,

He was your enemy, ever spake against Your liberties and the charters that you bear I' the body of the weal; and now, arriving 189 A place of potency and sway o' the state, If he should still malignantly remain Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might 192 Be curses to yourselves? You should have said That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature Would think upon you for your voices and 196 Translate his malice towards you into love, Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said, As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit

And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd 200 Either his gracious promise, which you might, As cause had call'd you up, have held him to; Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature, Which easily endures not article 204 Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage, You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,

And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive He did solicit you in free contempt 208 When he did need your loves, and do you think

That his contempt shall not be bruising to you When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies

No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry

Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you 213 Ere now denied the asker? and now again Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow Your su'd-for tongues? 216

Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

Sec. Cit. And will deny him:

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

First Cit. Ay, twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em. 220

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,

They have chose a consul that will from them take

Their liberties; make them of no more voice Than dogs that are as often beat for barking 224 As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble; And, on a safer judgment, all revoke Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride, And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not 228

With what contempt he wore the humble weed;

How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,

Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance, ²³²
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd,—
No impediment between,—but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him ²³⁷
More after our commandment than as guided By your own true affections; and that, your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do ²⁴⁰
Than what you should, made you against the grain

To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures
to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country, ²⁴⁴
How long continu'd, and what stock he springs of,

The noble house o' the Marcians, from whence came

That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king; ²⁴⁸
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, that was so surnam'd,—
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,— ²⁵²
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath, beside, well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past, ²⁵⁷
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say you ne'er had done 't—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on; ²⁶⁰
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so; almost all
Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard ²⁶⁴
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol, come: ²⁶⁸
We will be there before the stream o' the
people;

And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at first,
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road 5

Upon 's again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius? 8

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse

Against the Volsces, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what? 12

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword;

That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most, that he would pawn his fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might 16
Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home. 20

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth: I do despise
them;

For they do prank them in authority
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further. 24

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no further.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common? 28

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

First Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop,

Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd? 32
Must these have voices, that can yield them now,
And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?
You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm. 36

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule
Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot: 40

The people cry you mock'd them, and of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
Scandall'd the suppliants for the people, call'd
them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness. 44

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence?

Bru. How! I inform them!

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Bru. Not unlike,

Each way, to better yours. 48

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yond clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir; if you will pass 52
To where you are bound, you must inquire your
way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm. 56

Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This paltering

Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I't the plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn! 60

This was my speech, and I will speak't again,—

Men. Not now, not now.

First Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.

Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons: 64

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,

In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, 69

Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd
number;

Who lack'd not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more. 73

First Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs 76
Coin words till they decay against those measles,
Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o' the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not 80
A man of their infirmity.

Sic. 'Twere well

We let the people know't.

Men. What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, 84
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!

Sic. It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark
you 88

His absolute 'shall'?

Com. 'Twas from the canon.

Cor. 'Shall'!

O good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you
thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer, 92
That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but
The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not spirit

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake 97
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians 100

If they be senators; and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste

Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,

And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,' 104

His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench

Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself!

It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches

To know, when two authorities are up, 108

Neither supreme, how soon confusion

May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well, on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth

The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,—

Men. Well, well; no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed 116
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn 119
Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd They ne'er did service for 't. Being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of
service 123

Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation

Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive 128
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words: 'We did request
it; 132

We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands.' Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears; which will in time break ope 136
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal! This double worship, 141 Where one part does disdain with cause, the other

Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom,

Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no 144
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows

Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
you,— 148

You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on 't, that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish 152

To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dis-
honour 156

Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it,
Not having the power to do the good it
would,

For the ill which doth control 't.

Bru. He has said enough. 160

Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer

As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!
What should the people do with these bald
tribunes? 164

On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench. In a rebellion, When what's not meet, but what must be, was
law,

Then were they chosen: in a better hour, 168
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This a consul? no.

Bru. The ædiles, ho! Let him be apprehended. 172

Enter an Ædile.

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Ædile] in whose name, myself
Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat! 176

Sen. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones

Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter Ædiles, with Others, and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect. 180

Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, ædiles!

Citizens. Down with him!—down with him!—

Sen. Weapons!—weapons!—weapons!— 184

[*They all bustle about CORIOLANUS, crying
Tribunes!—patricians!—citizens!—What ho!—
Sicinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!
Peace!—Peace!—Peace!—Stay!—Hold!—Peace!*

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of
breath; 188

Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tribunes

To the people! Coriolanus, patience!

Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people; peace!

Citizens. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace!—

Speak, speak, speak. 192

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties: Marcus would have all from you; Marcus, Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie! This is the way to kindle, not to quench. 196

First Sen. To unbuild the city and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city but the people?

Citizens. True,

The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd The people's magistrates.

Citizens. You so remain. 201

Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat; To bring the roof to the foundation, 204 And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges, In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority, Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce, 208 Upon the part o' the people, in whose power We were elected theirs, Marcus is worthy Of present death.

Sic. Therefore lay hold of him; Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ædiles, seize him! 213

Citizens. Yield, Marcus, yield!

Men. Hear me one word;

Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Æd. Peace, peace! 216

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friends,

And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways, That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon him, 221

And bear him to the rock.

Cor. No, I'll die here.

[Drawing his sword.]

There's some among you have beheld me fighting:

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me. 224

Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Marcus, help,

You that be noble; help him, young and old!

Citizens. Down with him!—down with him!

[In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.]

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away! 229

All will be naught else.

Sec. Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast;

We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that?

First Sen. The gods forbid!

I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house; 233 Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us, You cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us. 236

Cor. I would they were barbarians,—as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd,—not Romans,—as they are not,

Though calv'd i' the porch o' the Capitol,—

Men. Be gone;

Put not your worthy rage into your tongue; 240 One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself Take up a brace o' the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic; And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands 245 Against a falling fabric. Will you hence, Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend Like interrupted waters and o'erbear 248 What they are us'd to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone. I'll try whether my old wit be in request

With those that have but little: this must be patch'd

With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away. 252 [Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and Others.]

First Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world; He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth: 256

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent; And, being angry, does forget that ever He heard the name of death. [A noise within. Here's goodly work!

Sec. Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance! 261

Could he not speak 'em fair?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and
Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian
rock 265

With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial

Than the severity of the public power, 268
Which he so sets at nought.

First Cit. He shall well know
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Citizens. He shall, sure on't.

Men. Sir, sir,—

Sic. Peace! 272

Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you
Have help to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak:
As I know the consul's worthiness, 276
So can I name his faults.

Sic. Consul! what consul?

Men. The Consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He consul!

Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people, 280

I may be heard, I would crave a word or two,
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then;
For we are peremptory to dispatch 284

This viperous traitor. To eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death; therefore it is decreed
He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid 288
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own! 292

Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.

Men. O! he's a limb that has but a disease;
Mortal to cut it off; to cure it easy.

What has he done to Rome that's worthy
death? 296

Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost,—
Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath By many an ounce,—he dropp'd it for his country;

And what is left, to lose it by his country, 300

Were to us all, that do't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end o' the world.

Sic. This is clean kam.

Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country

It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot 304

Being once gangren'd, is not then respected

For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more.

Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection, being of catching nature, 308
Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word.

This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by process; 312

Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If 'twere so,—

Sic. What do ye talk?

Have we not had a taste of his obedience? 316
Our ædiles smote? ourselves resisted? Come!

Men. Consider this: he has been bred i' the wars

Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In bolted language; meal and bran together 320
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer by a lawful form,—
In peace,—to his utmost peril.

First Sen. Noble tribunes, 324

It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer. 328
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend
you there:

Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way. 332

Men. I'll bring him to you.

[To the Senators.] Let me desire your company.

He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

First Sen. Pray you, let's to him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in CORIO-LANUS'S House.

Enter CORIOLANUS and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me

Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch 4
Below the beam of sight; yet will I still Be thus to them.

First Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse my mother

Does not approve me further, who was wont 8
To call them woollen vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up 12
To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you:

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have
me

False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.

Vol. O! sir, sir, sir, 16

I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man
you are

With striving less to be so; lesser had been 20
The thwarting of your dispositions if You had not show'd them how you were dis-
pos'd,

Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too. 24

Enter MENENIUS and Senators.

Men. Come, come; you have been too rough,
something too rough;
You must return and mend it.

First Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsell'd. 28
I have a heart of mettle apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but
that 32

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour
on,

Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what then? 36

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the gods;

Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble, 40
But when extremities speak. I have heard you
say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I' the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me,

In peace what each of them by th' other lose, 44
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not,—which, for your best
ends,

You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace 49
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to
speak 52

To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts
you,

But with such words that are but rooted in
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth. 57

Now, this no more dishonours you at all
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune and
The hazard of much blood. 61

I would dissemble with my nature where
My fortunes and my friends at stake require'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this, 64
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general louts
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em,

For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard 68

Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!

Come, go with us; speak fair; you may save so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I prithee now, my son, 72
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;

And thus far having stretch'd it,—here be with
them,

Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such business

Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant 76

More learned than the ears,—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,

Now humble as the ripest mulberry

That will not hold the handling: or say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far 85
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were
yours;

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free 88
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prithee now,
Go, and be rul'd; although I know thou hadst rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i' the market-place; and,
sir, 'tis fit 93

You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve if he 96
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.
Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?

Must I with my base tongue give to my noble
heart 100

A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't:

Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it,

And throw 't against the wind. To the marketplace! 104

You have put me now to such a part which never

I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said

My praises made thee first a soldier, so, 108
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do 't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,

Which quired with my drum, into a pipe 113
Small as a eunuch, or the virgin voice

That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves Tent in my cheeks, and school-boys' tears take up 116

The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue

Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees,

Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms! I will not do 't, 120
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee it is my more dishonour 124
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list, 128
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me,

But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, 132

Cog their hearts from them, and come home
belov'd

Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do 136
I' the way of flattery further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.]
Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you:
arm yourself

To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong 140
Than are upon you yet.

Men. The word is 'mildly.'

Cor. Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly. 144

Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects

Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates 4
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.
What, will he come?

Æd. He's coming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue 8
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,

Set down by the poll?

Æd. I have; 'tis ready.

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither; 12

And when they hear me say, 'It shall be so,
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
them,

If I say, fine, cry 'fine,'—if death, cry 'death,' 16

Insisting on the old prerogative

And power i' the truth o' the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd 20

Enforce the present execution

Of what we chance to sentence.

Æd. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong and ready for this hint,

When we shall hap to give 't them.

Bru. Go about it. 24

[Exit Ædile.]

Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd

Ever to conquer, and to have his worth

Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot

Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks

What's in his heart; and that is there which looks 29

With us to break his neck.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS,
Senators, and Patricians.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece 32

Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice

Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!

Throng our large temples with the shows of
peace, 36

And not our streets with war!

First Sen. Amen, amen.

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes; audience; peace!
I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho! 40

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers, and are content 44

To suffer lawful censure for such faults

As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo! citizens, he says he is content:
The war-like service he has done, consider;
think 48

Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

Cor. Scratches with briers,
Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen, 52

You find him like a soldier: do not take

His rougher accents for malicious sounds,

But, as I say, such as become a soldier,

Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well; no more. 56

Cor. What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consul with full voice

I am so dishonour'd that the very hour

You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to us. 60

Cor. Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind

Yourself into a power tyrannical; 64

For which you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! Traitor!

Men. Nay, temperately; your promise.

Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold-in the people!

Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!

Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,

In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in

Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say

'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free 72

As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you this, people?

Citizens. To the rock!—to the rock with him!

Sic. Peace!

We need not put new matter to his charge:

What you have seen him do, and heard him
speak, 76

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try him; even

this,

So criminal and in such capital kind, 80

Deserves the extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You!

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother? 84

Com. Know, I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further:

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy 88

Their mercy at the price of one fair word,

Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have 't with saying 'Good morrow.'

Sic. For that he has,—

As much as in him lies,—from time to time 92

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power, as now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers 96

That do distribute it; in the name o' the

people,

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city,

In peril of precipitation 100

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more

To enter our Rome gates: i' the people's name,

I say, it shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so,—It shall be so,—Let him away. 104

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends,—

Sic. He's sentenc'd; no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak:

I have been consul, and can show for Rome 108

Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love

My country's good with a respect more tender,

More holy, and profound, than mine own life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,

And treasure of my loins; then if I would 113

Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift: speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people and his country: 116

It shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so,—it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate

As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcases of unburied men 120

That do corrupt my air, I banish you;

And here remain with your uncertainty!

Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!

Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, 124

Fan you into despair! Have the power still

To banish your defenders; till at length

Your ignorance,—which finds not, till it feels,—

Making but reservation of yourselves,— 128

Still your own foes,—deliver you as most

Abated captives to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising,

For you, the city, thus I turn my back: 132

There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS,

Senators, and Patricians.]

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Citizens. Our enemy is banish'd!—he is gone!—Hoo! hoo!

[They all shout and throw up their caps.]

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite; 137

Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard

Attend us through the city.

Citizens. Come, come,—let us see him out at gates! come! 140

The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come!

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA,

MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell: the best

With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,

Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd,

To say extremity was the trier of spirits; 4

That common chances common men could bear;

That when the sea was calm all boats alike

Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded,

craves 8

A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me

With precepts that would make invincible

The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome, 13

And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!

I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,

Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,

If you had been the wife of Hercules, 17

Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd

Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,

Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife! my

mother! 20

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,

Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's.

And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad
women 25

'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes
As 't should laugh at them. My mother, you wot
well

My hazards still have been your solace; and 28
Believe 't not lightly,—though I go alone
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen,— your son

Will or exceed the common or be caught 32
With cautelous baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: determine on some course,
More than a wild exposture to each chance 36
That starts i' the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods!

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with
thee

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of
us,

And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth 40
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well: 44
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full

Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate.
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and 48
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught 52
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand: 57
Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.

The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done 4
Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home;
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.
Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Bru. Why?

Sic. They say she's mad. 9

Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.

Vol. O! you're well met. The hoarded plague o' the gods
Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace! be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should
hear,— 13

Nay, and you shall hear some. [To BRUTUS.]
Will you be gone?

Vir. [To SICINIUS.] You shall stay too. I would I had the power
To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind? 16

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this fool.

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise
words; 21

And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what; yet go:

Nay, but thou shalt stay too: I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, 24
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then!
He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for
Rome! 28

Men. Come, come: peace!

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had. 32

Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incens'd
the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go. 36
Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
 You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear
 this:

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
 The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,— 40
 This lady's husband here, this, do you see,— Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you
 all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sc. Why stay we to be baited
 With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.
 [Exeunt Tribunes.]

I would the gods had nothing else to do 45
 But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em
 But once a day, it would unclog my heart
 Of what lies heavy to 't.

Men. You have told them home,
 And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup
 with me? 49

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
 And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let's go.

Leave this faint puling and lament as I do, 52
 In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsc, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name I think is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em: know you me yet? 5
Vols. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vols. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles. 15

Vols. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most war-like preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division. 19

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe apt-ness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vols. Coriolanus banished! 28

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor. 31

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country. 38

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home. 42

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you? 46

Vols. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning. 50

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours. 56

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Antium. Before AUFIDIUS' House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City,
 'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir
 Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
 Have I heard groan and drop: then, know me
 not, 4
 Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones
 In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,
 Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium? 8
Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
 At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?
Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir. Farewell.
 [Exit Citizen.]

O world! thy slippery turns. Friends now fast
sworn, 12
Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour, 16
On a dissension of a doit, break out
To bitterest enmity: so, fellest foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance, 20
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear
friends
And interjoin their issues. So with me:
My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon
This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me, 24
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The Same. A Hall in AUFIDIUS' House.

Music within. Enter a Servingman.

First Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter a Second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls for him. Cotus! [Exit.]

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well;
but I 5
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the First Servingman.

First Serv. What would you have, friend?
Whence are you? Here's no place for you:
pray, go to the door. [Exit.]

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertain-
ment,
In being Coriolanus. 11

Re-enter Second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

Sec. Serv. 'Away!' Get you away. 16

Cor. Now, thou art troublesome.

Sec. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a Third Servingman. Re-enter the First.

Third Serv. What fellow's this? 20

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on:

I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house. 25

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you? 28

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you;
pray you, avoid: come. 34

Cor. Follow your function; go, and batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away.]

Third Serv. What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

Sec. Serv. And I shall. [Exit.]

Third Serv. Where dwell'st thou? 40

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. 'Under the canopy!'

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that? 44

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. 'I' the city of kites and crows!
What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too? 48

Cor. No; I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress. 53

Thou prat'st, and prat'st: serve with thy trencher. Hence. [Beats him away.]

Enter AUFIDIUS and First Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

Sec. Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within. 57

Auf. Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. [Unmuffling.] If, Tullus, 60
Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost
not

Think me for the man I am, necessity

Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

[Servants retire.]

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name? 65
Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in 't; though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet? 69

Auf. I know thee not. Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces, 72 Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited 76
But with that surname; a good memory,
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people, 80
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity 84
Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world
I would have voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers, 89
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs and stop those mains 92
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it,
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee, for I will fight 96
Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes

Thou art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am 100
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, 104
Drawntuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from
my heart 108

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, 'Tis true,' I'd not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against 113
My grained ash a hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest 116
As hotly and as nobly with thy love

As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man 120
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell
thee, 124

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or lose mine arm for 't. Thou hast beat me
out 127

Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy
Marcius, 132

Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, 136
Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O! come; go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories, 140
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission, and set down,
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness, thine own ways;

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote, 148
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:

Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy; 152
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand:
most welcome!

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.]

First Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

Sec. Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of
him. 159

First Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

Sec. Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it. 165

First Serv. He had so; looking as it were,— would I were hanged but I thought there was more in him than I could think. 168

Sec. Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he is simply the rarest man i' the world.

First Serv. I think he is; but a greater soldier than he you wot on. 172

Sec. Serv. Who? my master?

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

Sec. Serv. Worth six on him.

First Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier. 177

Sec. Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town our general is excellent. 180

First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter Third Servingman.

Third Serv. O slaves! I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

First Serv. } What, what, what? let's partake.
Sec. Serv. }

Third Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief be a condemned man. 186

First Serv. } Wherefore? wherefore?
Sec. Serv. }

Third Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Marcius.

First Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our general?' 191

Third Serv. I do not say, 'thwack our general;' but he was always good enough for him.

Sec. Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself. 196

First Serv. He was too hard for him,—directly to say the truth on 't: before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.

Sec. Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too. 201

First Serv. But, more of thy news.

Third Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled. 216

Sec. Serv. And he's as like to do 't as any man I can imagine.

Third Serv. Do 't! he will do 't; for—look you, sir—he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir—as it were—durst not—look you, sir—show themselves—as we term it—his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

First Serv. Directitude! what's that? 224

Sec. Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him. 228

First Serv. But when goes this forward?

Third Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon; 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips. 233

Sec. Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

First Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; muffled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men. 242

Sec. Serv. 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

First Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another. 247

Third Serv. Reason: because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising. 251

All. In, in, in, in! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter SCINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;

His remedies are tame i' the present peace
And quietness o' the people, which before Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends 4

Blush that the world goes well, who rather had,

Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold
Dissentionous numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going
About their functions friendly. 9

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O! he is grown most kind
Of late. Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both! 12

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd

But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand,

And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if 16

He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife

Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good den, our neighbours. 20

Bru. Goodden to you all, good den to you all.

First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees,

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive!

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus 24

Had lov'd you as we did.

Citizens. Now the gods keep you!

Sic. } Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. } Sic. This is a happier and more comely time

Than when these fellows ran about the streets Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was 29

A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,

Self-loving,—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne, 32 Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome 36

Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,

There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports, the Volscs with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories, 40 And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius,

Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world; 44 Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be 48

The Volscs dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!

We have record that very well it can, And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow, 52 Before you punish him, where he heard this, Lest you shall chance to whip your information, And beat the messenger who bids beware Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me: 56

I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going

All to the senate-house: some news is come, That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave.— 60 Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes: his raising; Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir, The slave's report is seconded; and more, More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful? 64

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths— How probable I do not know—that Marcius, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,

And vows revenge as spacious as between 68 The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely.

Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish

Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on 't.

Men. This is unlikely: 72

He and Aufidius can no more atone, Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. You are sent for to the senate: A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius, 76 Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories; and have already O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took What lay before them. 80

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O! you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and To melt the city leads upon your pates,

To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—

Men. What's the news? what's the news? 85

Com. Your temples burned in their cement,
and

Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?— 88

You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—

Com. If!

He is their god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature, 92

That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work, 96

You, and your apron-men; you that stood so much

Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake

Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules 100

Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale

Before you find it other. All the regions

Do smilingly revolt; and who resist 104

Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame
him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone unless 108

The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf

Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they 112

Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they charg'd him even

As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:

If he were putting to my house the brand 116

That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease.'—You have made fair hands,

You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought

A trembling upon Rome, such as was never 120
So incapable of help.

Sic. }

Bru. }

Say not we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but,
like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,

Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fear 124

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,

The second name of men, obeys his points

As if he were his officer: desperation

Is all the policy, strength, and defence, 128

That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.

And is Aufidius with him? You are they

That made the air unwholesome, when you cast

Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at 132

Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;

And not a hair upon a soldier's head

Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs

As you threw caps up will he tumble down, 136

And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;

If he could burn us all into one coal,

We have deserv'd it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

First Cit. For mine own part,

When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity. 141

Sec. Cit. And so did I.

Third Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You're goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made

Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol? 149

Com. O! ay; what else?

[Exeunt COMINIUS and MENENIUS.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dis-may'd:

These are a side that would be glad to have 152
This truth which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

First Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' the wrong when we banished him. 157

Sec. Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I. 160

Bru. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth

Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray let us go. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Camp at a small distance from Rome.Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but

Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
 Their talk at table, and their thanks at end; 4
 And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
 Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now,
 Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
 Of our design. He bears himself more proudly,
 Even to my person, than I thought he would 9
 When first I did embrace him; yet his nature
 In that's no changeling, and I must excuse
 What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet, I wish, sir,— 12
 I mean for your particular,—you had not Join'd in commission with him; but either
 Had borne the action of yourself, or else
 To him had left it solely. 16

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou
 sure,
 When he shall come to his account, he knows
 not

What I can urge against him. Although it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent 20
 To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
 And shows good husbandry for the Volscian
 state,

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
 As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone 24
 That which shall break his neck or hazard
 mine,

Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down;
 And the nobility of Rome are his: 29

The senators and patricians love him too:

The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
 Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty 32

To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
 As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it

By sovereignty of nature. First he was
 A noble servant to them, but he could not 36

Carry his honours even; whether 'twas pride,
 Which out of daily fortune ever taints

The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
 To fail in the disposing of those chances 40

Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
 Not to be other than one thing, not moving

From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace

Even with the same austerity and garb 44
 As he controll'd the war; but one of these,
 As he hath spices of them all, not all,
 For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd,
 So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit 48
 To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
 Lie in the interpretation of the time;
 And power, unto itself most commendable,
 Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair 52
 To extol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
 Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRU-TUS, and Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general; who lov'd
 him

In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
 But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him; 4
 A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
 The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd
 To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear? 8

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
 That we have bled together. Coriolanus

He would not answer to; forbad all names; 12

He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
 Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire

Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so: you have made good work!
 A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome, 16

To make coals cheap: a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon

When it was less expected: he replied,
 It was a bare petition of a state 20

To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well.

Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
 For's private friends: his answer to me was, 24

He could not stay to pick them in a pile
 Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,

For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
 And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two! 28
I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
Above the moon. We must be burnt for you. 32

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid

In this so-never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good
tongue, 36

More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do? 40

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well; and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then? 44

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? say 't be so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure

As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it: 48
I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.
He was not taken well; he had not din'd:

The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then 52
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd

These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls 56
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore, I'll watch him

Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kindness, 60

And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success. [Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye 64
Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise,' dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would do 68

He sent in writing after me; what he would
not,

Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain
Unless his noble mother and his wife, 72
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—*The Volscian Camp before Rome.
The Guards at their stations.*

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

First Guard. Stay! whence are you?

Sec. Guard. Stand! and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well; but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

First Guard. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

First Guard. You may not pass; you must return: our general 5
Will no more hear from thence.

Sec. Guard. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome, 9
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

First Guard. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name 12
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,

Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read

His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified; 16
For I have ever glorified my friends—

Of whom he's chief—with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, 20
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therefore,
fellow,

I must have leave to pass.

First Guard. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back. 28

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

Sec. Guard. Howsoever you have been his liar—as you say you have—I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back. 35

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

First Guard. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is. 39

First Guard. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon. 53

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

Sec. Guard. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general. 57

First Guard. My general cares not for you. Back, I say: go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood; back, that's the utmost of your having: back. 61

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and cruller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoond for what's to come upon thee. [To CORIOLANUS.] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee. 85

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs 83

Are servanted to others: though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather 92 Than pity note how much. Therefore, be gone: Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee, Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, 96

[Gives a paper.]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius, Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st!

Auf. You keep a constant temper. 100

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.]

First Guard. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

Sec. Guard. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power. You know the way home again.

First Guard. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back? 105

Sec. Guard. What cause, do you think, I have to swoond?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! 110

[Exit.]

First Guard. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

Sec. Guard. The worthy fellow is our general: he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow

Set down our host. My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly

I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends 4

You have respected; stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper; no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, 8

Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,

Lov'd me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him; for whose old love I have, 12

Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only
That thought he could do more. A very little 16
I have yielded to; fresh embassies and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter

Will I lend ear to. [Shout within.] Hal! what shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow 20
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUM-NIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd
mould

Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection! 24

All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.

What is that curtsy worth? or those doves'
eyes,

Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not 28

Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows,

As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod; and my young boy

Hath an aspect of intercession, which 32
Great nature cries, 'Deny not.' Let the Volsces Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never

Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand
As if a man were author of himself 36

And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, 40
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,

Forgive my tyranny; but do not say
For that, 'Forgive our Romans.' O! a kiss 44

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss

I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate, 49

And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, i' the earth;

[Kneels.]

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O! stand up bless'd; 52

Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee, and improperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this? 56

Your knees to me! to your corrected son!
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach

Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun, 60

Mur'd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola, 64
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle
That's curdied by the frost from purest snow,

And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!
Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours, 68

[Pointing to the Child.]

Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform

Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove 72

To shame invulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,

And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy! 76

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,

Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:

The things I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me 81

Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not

Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not 84
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O! no more, no more;
You have said you will not grant us any thing;

For we have nothing else to ask but that 88
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame

May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volsces, mark; for
we'll 92

Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself

How more unfortunate than all living women Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should 98

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep and shake with fear and
sorrow; 100

Making the mother, wife, and child to see
The son, the husband, and the father tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us 104
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,

Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory, 108

Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose

The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had 112
Our wish, which side should win; for either
thou

Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin, 116
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on Fortune till These wars determine: if I cannot persuade
thee 120

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread—Trust to't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb, 124

That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name

Living to time.

Boy. A' shall not tread on me:
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll
fight. 128

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.]

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend 132

To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volsces whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsces
May say, 'This mercy we have show'd;' the Romans, 137

'This we receiv'd;' and each in either side

Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, 'Be bless'd
For making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son, 140

The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit

Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses; 144 Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man was noble,

But with his last attempt he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhorr'd.' Speak to me,
son! 148

Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt 152
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak
you:

He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou,
boy: 156

Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world

More bound to 's mother; yet here he lets me prate

Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy
life 160

Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she—poor hen! fond of no second brood—

Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home, Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,

And spurn me back; but if it be not so, 165
Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague
thee,

That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs. He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.

To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;

This is the last: so we will home to Rome, 172
And die among our neighbours. Nay, behold us.

This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,

But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength 176
Than thou hast to deny 't. Come, let us go:

This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child

Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch:
I am hush'd until our city be a-fire, 181

And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. [Holding VOLUMNIA by the hand, silent.]

O, mother, mother!

What have you done? Behold! the heavens do ope,

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene

They laugh at. O my mother! mother! O! 185

You have won a happy victory to Rome;

But, for your son, believe it, O! believe it,

Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd, 188

If not most mortal to him. But let it come.

Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,

I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,

Were you in my stead, would you have heard A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius? 193

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were:

And, sir, it is no little thing to make

Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,

What peace you'll make, advise me: for my part, 197

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you,

Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!

Auf. [Aside.] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour 200

At difference in thee: out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune.

[The ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS.]

Cor. Ay, by and by;

But we will drink together; and you shall bear A better witness back than words, which we, 204

On like conditions, would have counter-seal'd. Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve

To have a temple built you: all the swords

In Italy, and her confederate arms, 208

Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond coign o' the Capitol, yond corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that? 3

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in 't. Our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution. 9

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly. 16

Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly. 28

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you. 33

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, 40 And hale him up and down; all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Sec. Mess. Good news, good news! the ladies have prevail'd, 44

The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone.

A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,

No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain? 48

Sec. Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:

Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it?

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,

As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you! 52

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.]

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you! [A shout within.]

Men. This is good news:

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia 56

Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well
to-day: 59

This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!
[Music still and shouts.]

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

Sec. Mess. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city? 64
Sec. Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy. [Going.]

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the stage.

First Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, 68
And make triumphal fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius;
Repeat him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry, 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All. Welcome, ladies, 72
Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Corioli. A Public Place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, 4
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: dispatch. 8
[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of AUFIDIUS' faction.

Most welcome!

First Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

Sec. Con. Most noble sir, 12
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:

We must proceed as we do find the people. 16
Third Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either

Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits 20
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd,

He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end, 24
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

Third Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost 28
By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way 33
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his design-ments

In mine own person; help to reap the fame 36
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance, as if 40
I had been mercenary.

First Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last,
When we had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—

Auf. There was it; 44
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action: therefore shall he die, 48
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.]

First Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

Sec. Con. And patient fools, 52
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
tear
With giving him glory.

Third Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword, 56

Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more:
Here come the lords. 60

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

First Lord. And grieve to hear 't.
What faults he made before the last, I think 64
Might have found easy fines; but there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where 68
There was a yielding, this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter CORIOLANUS, with drums and colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love 72
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted and
With bloody passage led your wars even to 76
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home

Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made peace
With no less honour to the Antiates 80
Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,

Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords; 84
But tell the traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius. Dost thou
think 88
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n
name

Coriolanus in Corioli?

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up, 92
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,
I say 'your city,' to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution like
A twist of rotten silk, never admitting 96
Counsel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears

He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars? 100

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my
heart

Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slavell
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever 105
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion—
Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him,
that 108

Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join
To thrust the lie unto him.

First Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads, 112
Stain all your edges on me. Boy! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli: 116
Alone I did it. Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,

'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators. Let him die for 't. 120

All the People. Tear him to pieces.—Do it presently.—He killed my son.—My daughter.
—He killed my cousin Marcus.—He killed my
father. 124

Sec. Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace!
The man is noble and his fame folds in
This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us
Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O! that I had him, 129
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!
[AUFIDIUS and the Conspirators draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls: AU-
FIDIUS stands on his body.]

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold! 132

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

First Lord. O Tullus!

Sec. Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

Third Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all, be quiet.

Put up your swords. 136

Auf. My lords, when you shall know,—as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot,—the great danger Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours To call me to your senate, I'll deliver 141
Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure.

First Lord. Bear from hence his body; And mourn you for him! Let him be regarded As the most noble corse that ever herald 145
Did follow to his urn.

Sec. Lord. His own impatience Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame. Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone, 148
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up: Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one. Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully; Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, 153
Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory.

Assist.

[Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLANUS.

A dead march sounded.

TITUS ANDRONICUS

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

SATURNINUS, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor.

BASSIANUS, Brother to Saturninus, in love with Lavinia.

TITUS ANDRONICUS, a Roman, General against the Goths.

MARCUS ANDRONICUS, Tribune of the People, and brother to Titus.

LUCIUS,
QUINTUS, } Sons to Titus Andronicus.
MARTIUS, }
MUTIUS, }

YOUNG LUCIUS, a Boy, Son to Lucius.

PUBLIUS, Son to Marcus Andronicus.

SEMPRONIUS, }
CAIUS, } Kinsmen to Titus.
VALENTINE, }

ÆMILIUS, a noble Roman.

ALARBUS,
DEMETRIUS, } Sons to Tamora.

CHIRON,
AARON, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.

A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown;
Romans.

Goths and Romans.

TAMORA, Queen of the Goths.

LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.

A Nurse, and a black Child.

Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.

*The Tomb of the Andronici appearing. The Tribunes and Senators aloft; and then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other,
with drum and colours.*

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords: 4
I am his first-born son that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity. 8

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol, 12
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine, 16
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends

Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand 20

A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome: 24
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited home
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, 29
Hath yok'd a nation, strong, train'd up in arms.

Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms 32
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, 36
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms. 16
Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed, 40

And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness. 45

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity, 48
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament, 52
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right, 56

I thank you all and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
As I am confident and kind to thee.

Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.]

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way! the good Andronicus, 64

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword, 68
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Drums and trumpets sounded, and then enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS; after them two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS. After them TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and people following. The bearers set down the coffin, and TITUS speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

Lol as the bark, that hath discharg'd her freight,

Returns with precious lading to the bay 72
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome. 76

Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home.
With burial among their ancestors: 84
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword.

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx? 88
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!

O sacred receptacle of my joys, 92
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, 96

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror, 104

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O! think my son to be as dear to me. 108

Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets 112

For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood: 116
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful;
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:

Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son. 120

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.

These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld

Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice: 124

To this your son is mark'd, and die he must,

To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood, 128
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive 133

To tremble under Titus' threatening look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal

The self-same gods, that arm'd the Queen of Troy 136

With opportunity of sharp revenge

Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,

May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths—

When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen— 140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, 144

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus 148
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in
rest,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! 152
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned drugs, here are no
storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! 156

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus
long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!

Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render for my brethren's obsequies; 160

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy

Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.

O! bless me here with thy victorious hand,

Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd 165

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!

Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise! 168

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes; re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others.

Mar. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved
brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars, 172

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your
swords;

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp, 176

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,

And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 180

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,

This palliament of white and spotless hue;

And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons: 184

Be candidatus then, and put it on,

And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits

Than his that shakes for age and feebleness. 188

What should I don this robe, and trouble you?

Be chosen with proclamations to-day,

To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,

And set abroad new business for you all? 192

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,

And led my country's strength successfully,

And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,

Knights in field, slain manfully in arms, 196

In right and service of their noble country.

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world:

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 200

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empire.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right:

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not 204

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.

Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good 208

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, 212

But honour thee, and will do till I die:

My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,

I will most thankful be; and thanks to men

Of noble minds is honourable meed. 216

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages:

Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus,

And gratulate his safe return to Rome, 221

The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son, 224

Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,

Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,

And ripen justice in this commonweal:

Then, if you will elect by my advice, 228

Crown him, and say, 'Long live our emperor!'

Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,

Patricians and plebeians, we create

Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor, 232

And say, 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'

[A long flourish.]

Sal. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done

To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, 236

And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance

Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress, 240

Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,

And in the sacred Pantheon her spouse.

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match 244

I hold me highly honour'd of your Grace:

And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,

King and commander of our commonweal,

The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate 248

My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;

Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord:

Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,

Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet. 252

Sal. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!

How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts

Rome shall record, and, when I do forget

The least of these unspeakable deserts, 256

Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;

To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers. 260

Sal. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue

That I would choose, were I to choose anew.

Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:

Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer, 264

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:

Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent 267

Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you

Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I, my lord; with true nobility

Warrants these words in princely courtesy. 272

Sal. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go;

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trumpet and drum: [Flourish. SATURNINUS courts

TAMORA in dumb show.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing LAVINIA.]

Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my lord? 277

Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal

To do myself this reason and this right.

Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice: 280

This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?

Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surpris'd. 284

Sal. Surpris'd! By whom?

Bas. By him that justly may

Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS
with LAVINIA.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe. 288

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What! villain boy;

Barr'st me my way in Rome? [Stabs MUTIUS.]

Mut. Help, Lucius, help! [Dies.]

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so, 292

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;

My sons would never so dishonour me.

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor. 296
Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife

That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
 Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock: 300
 I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
 Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was none in Rome to make a stale 304

But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
 Agreed these deeds with that proud brag of thine,

That saidst I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these! 308

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.

A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons, 312

To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,

That like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs, 316

Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome,

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,

And will create thee Empress of Rome. 320

Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,

Sith priest and holy water are so near,

And tapers burn so bright, and every thing 324

In readiness for Hymenæus stand,

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,

Or climb my palace, till from forth this place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me. 328

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,

She will a handmaid be to his desires,

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth. 332

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,

Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered: 336

There shall we consummate our spousal rights.

[Exeunt all but TITUS.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.

Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone, 339

Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Mar. O! Titus, see, O! see what thou hast done;

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed 344

That hath dishonour'd all our family:

Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;

Give Mutius burial with our brethren. 348

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.

This monument five hundred years hath stood,

Which I have sumptuously re-edified:

Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors 352

Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.

Bury him where you can; he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you.

My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him; 356

He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. } And shall, or him we will accompany.

Mart. }

Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake that word?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. 360

Tit. What! would you bury him in my despite?

Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee

To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, 364

And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded:

My foes I do repute you every one;

So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself; let us withdraw. 368

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[MARCUS and the sons of TITUS kneel.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed. 372

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, 376

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax

That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son 380

Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.
The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw, 384
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[MUTIUS is put into the tomb.]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb. 388

All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble
Mutius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths 392
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is,
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.
Is she not, then, beholding to the man 396

That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Mar. Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, on one side, SATURNINUS, attended; TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and AARON: on the other side, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA and Others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride. 400

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no
more,

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape. 404

Bas. Rape call you it, my lord, to seize my own,

My true-betrothed love and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Meanwhile, I am possess'd of that is mine. 408

Sat. 'Tis good, sir: you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I
may,

Answer I must and shall do with my life. 412

Only thus much I give your Grace to know:

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,

Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd; 416

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave: 420

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express'd himself in all his deeds

A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds: 424

'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me.

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora 428

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge? 433

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome forfend

I should be author to dishonour you!

But on mine honour dare I undertake 436

For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose, 440

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.

[Aside to SATURNINUS.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:

You are but newly planted in your throne; 444

Lest then, the people, and patricians too,

Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant you for ingratitude,

Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin, 448

Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.

I'll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction and their family,

The cruel father, and his traitorous sons, 452

To whom I sued for my dear son's life;

And make them know what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.

[Aloud.] Come, come, sweet emperor; come,
Andronicus; 456

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd. 459

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good. 464

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd 468

My word and promise to the emperor,

That you will be more mild and tractable.

And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia,

By my advice, all humbled on your knees, 472

You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to his highness,

That what we did was mildly, as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour and our own. 476

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.
Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all
be friends:

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace; 480
I will not be denied: sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's
here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults: 484
Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest. 488
Come; if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty 492
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bon jour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.

[Trumpets. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of Fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envy's threatening reach. 4
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress, 13
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph
long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes 16
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress. 20
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's. 24
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be. 28

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all
And so in this, to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year or two

Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
I am as able and as fit as thou 33

To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love. 36

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadviz'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your
friends? 40

Go to; have your lath glu'd within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw.]

Aar. Why, how now, lords! 45
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge: 48
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them it most concerns;

Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome. 52
For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd

My rapier in his bosom, and withal Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here. 56

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd, Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!

Aar. Away, I say! 60

Now, by the gods that war-like Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right? 64

What! is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controlment, justice, or revenge? 68
Young lords, beware! an should the empress
know

This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
I love Lavinia more than all the world. 72

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not in Rome

How furious and impatient they be, 76

And cannot brook competitors in love?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love. 80

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore may be won;

She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd. 84

What, man! more water glideth by the mill

Than wots the miller of; and easy it is

Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:

Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, 88

Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality? 92

What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,

And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd. 96

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!

Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools

To square for this? Would it offend you then 100

That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:

'Tis policy and stratagem must do 104

That you affect; and so must you resolve,

That what you cannot as you would achieve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love. 109

A speedier course than lingering languishment

Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand; 112

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:

The forest walks are wide and spacious,

And many unfrequented plots there are

Fitted by kind for rape and villany: 116

Single you thither then this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force, if not by words:

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit

To villany and vengeance consecrate, 121

Will we acquaint with all that we intend;

And she shall file our engines with advice,

That will not suffer you to square yourselves, 124

But to your wishes' height advance you both.

The emperor's court is like the house of Fame,

The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:

The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns; 129

There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heaven's

eye,

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,

Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Forest.

Horns and cry of hounds heard. Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c.; MARCUS,
LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,

The fields are fragrant and the woods are green.

Uncouple here and let us make a bay,

And wake the emperor and his lovely bride, 4

And rouse the prince and ring a hunter's peal,

That all the court may echo with the noise.

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,

To attend the emperor's person carefully: 8

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,

But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

[A cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal.]

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LA-
VINIA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and Attendants.

Many good morrows to your majesty;

Madam, to you as many and as good; 12

I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord;

Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no; 16

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport.—[To TAMORA.] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Mar. I have dogs, my lord, 20
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. [Aside.] Chiron, we hunt not, we,
with horse nor hound, 25

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A lonely Part of the Forest.

Enter AARON, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had
none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.

Let him that thinks of me so abjectly 4
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget

A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest 8

That have their alms out of the empress' chest.
[Hides the gold.]

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush, 12

The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,

And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit, 16

And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,

Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise; 20
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd

The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,

And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave, 24
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,

Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds

Be unto us as is a nurse's song 28
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye, 32

My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls

Even as an adder when she doth unroll

To do some fatal execution? 36

No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,

Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40

Which never hopes more heaven than rests in
thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,

Thy sons make pillage of her chastity, 44
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.

Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.

Now question me no more; we are espied; 48
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,

Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.
Tam. Ah! my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life.

Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus

comes: 52
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons

To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.]

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop? 56
Or is it Dian, habited like her,

Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had, 61

Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds

Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art! 65

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horn-

ing;
And to be doubted that your Moor and you 68

Are singled forth to try experiments.
Jove shield your husband from his hounds

to-day!
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cim-merian 72

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.

Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, 77
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,

If foul desire had not conducted you?
Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport, 80

Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness. I pray you, let us hence,

And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well. 84
Bas. The king my brother shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:

Good king, to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this? 88

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place: 92

A barren destitute vale, you see, it is;

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe:

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven: 97

And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries,

As any mortal body hearing it

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale, 105

But straight they told me they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,

And leave me to this miserable death: 108

And then they call'd me fowl adulteress,

Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect;

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come, 112

This vengeance on me had they executed.

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son. 116

[Stabs BASSIANUS.]

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs BASSIANUS, who dies.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora;

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys, 120

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her:

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.

This minion stood upon her chastity, 124

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope she braves your mightiness:

And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole, 129

And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting. 132

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy

That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,— 136

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory

To see her tears; but be your heart to them 140

As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;

The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble; 144

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.

Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:

[To CHIRON.] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard? 148

Lav. 'Tis true! the raven doth not hatch a lark:

Yet have I heard, O! could I find it now,

The lion mov'd with pity did endure

To have his princely paws par'd all away. 152

Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,

The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:

O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,

Nothing so kind, but something pitiful. 156

Tam. I know not what it means; away with her!

Lav. O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,

That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. 160

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless.

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain

To save your brother from the sacrifice; 164

But fierce Andronicus would not relent:

Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will:

The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen, 168
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go. 172

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing
more

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit, 176
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. 180
Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too
long.

Lav. No grace! no womanhood! Ah, beastly creature,

The blot and enemy to our general name.
Confusion fall— 184

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband:

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[*DEMETRIUS throws the body of BAS-
SIANUS into the pit; then exeunt
DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, dragging off LAVINTIA.*]

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed 188
Till all the Andronici be made away.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower.

[Exit.]

Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot
before: 192

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you: were't not for shame, 196

Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[Falls into the pit.]

Quin. What! art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers,

Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother! with the dismall'st object hurt 204

That ever eye with sight made heart lament.

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,

That he thereby may give a likely guess

How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit.]

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out 209

From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o'erruns my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can
see. 213

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining
heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death. 216

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate
heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.

O! tell me how it is; for ne'er till now 220

Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit. 224

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument, 228
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,

And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus

When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother! help me with thy fainting hand, 233

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As hateful as Cocyus' misty mouth. 236

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 240

I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose
again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below. 244
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee.

[Falls in.]

Re-enter AARON with SATURNINUS.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is here,

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.

Say, who art thou that lately didst descend 248
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead. 252

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there. 256

Mart. We know not where you left him all alive;

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief. 260

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a letter.]

The complot of this timeless tragedy; 265
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. And if we miss to meet him handsomely, 268

*Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:*

Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder-tree 272
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus:

Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.
O Tamora! was ever heard the like? 276

This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. 280

Sat. [To TITUS.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs
of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.

Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:
There let them bide until we have devis'd 284
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What! are you in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee 288
I beg this boon with tears not lightly shed;
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent. 292

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;

For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow 296
They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou follow me.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers: 300

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king: 304
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;

An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe. 4

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks. 8

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.]

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this? my niece, that flies away so fast?
Cousin, a word; where is your husband? 12

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake
me!
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle
hands 16
Have lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness 20
As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips, 24
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy
tongue.
Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame;
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood, 29
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud. 32
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?
O! that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.
Sorrow concealed, like to an oven stopp'd, 36
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee; 40
A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O! had the monster seen those lily hands 44
Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss
them,
He would not, then, have touch'd them for his
life;
Or had he heard the heavenly harmony 48
Which that sweet tongue hath made,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind; 52
For such a sight will blind a father's eye:
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;
What will whole months of tears thy father's
eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with
thee: 56
O! could our mourning ease thy misery.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution; TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; 5
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons, 8
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write 12

[He throws himself on the ground.]

My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush. [Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c., with the Prisoners.

O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain, 16
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow, 20
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death: 24
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain:
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by; 28
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah! Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you
speak. 32

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did
hear,

They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
They would not pity me, yet plead I must,
All bootless unto them. 36

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. 40
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these. 44
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon
drawn? 48

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their
death;

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended
thee. 52

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?

Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then, 56
From these devourers to be banished!

But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break: 60
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is. 64

Luc. Ay me! this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon
her.

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?

What fool hath added water to the sea, 69
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?

My grief was at the height before thou cam'st;
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. 72

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;

And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up, 76
And they have serv'd me to effectless use:

Now all the service I require of them
Is that the one will help to cut the other.

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands, 80
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
thee?

Mar. O! that delightful engine of her thoughts,

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, 84

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung

Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear.

Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done this deed? 88

Mar. O! thus I found her straying in the park,

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my dear; and he that wounded
her 92

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me
dead:

For now I stand as one upon a rock
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,

Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge 97
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man, 100
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:

But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight 104
It would have maddened me: what shall I do

Now I behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:

Thy husband he is dead, and for his death 109
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look! Marcus; ah! son Lucius, look on her:

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew 113
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;

Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful, 117

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes, 120
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain, 124

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry,

With miry slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long 128
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb
shows 132

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our
tongues,

Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come. 136
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Mar. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.
Tit. Ah! Marcus, Marcus, brother; well I wot 140
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.
Luc. Ah! my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs: 144
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks. 148
O! what a sympathy of woe is this;
As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word: that, if thou love thy sons, 152
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive; 156
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? 160
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor my
hand:

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies, 164
Shall not be sent; my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers'
lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome, 168
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O! none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve 172
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come. 176

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!
Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
son, 180

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And for our father's sake, and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my
hand. 184

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both:

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, 188

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:

But I'll deceive you in another sort,

And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[Cuts off TITUS' hand.]

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is dispatch'd. 192

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:

Tell him it was a hand that warded him

From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;

More hath it merited; that let it have. 196

As for my sons, say I account of them

As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;

And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee. 201

[Aside.] Their heads, I mean. O! how this villany

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it.

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. 205

[Exit.]

Tit. O! here I lift this one hand up to heaven,

And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:

If any power pities wretched tears, 208

To that I call! [To LAVINIA.] What! wilt thou kneel with me?

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers,

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim, 211

And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O! brother, speak with possibilities,

And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom? 216
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes. 220
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? 224

I am the sea; hark! how her sighs do blow;
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; 229
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave 232
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons, 236
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
back:

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd;
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily, 241
And be my heart an ever burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal, 244
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah! that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat, 247
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe.

[LAVINIA KISSES TITUS.

Mar. Alas! poor heart; that kiss is comfort-less
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end? 252

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andro-nicus;
Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons'
heads,
Thy war-like hand, thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight 256
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs.

Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand 260
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal
sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes!

Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! 264

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes, 268
And make them blind with tributary tears:
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss 272
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed
them.

Come, let me see what task I have to do.

You heavy people, circle me about, 276
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear. 280
Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in these things:
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay: 284
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome: 289
Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister; 292
O! would thou wert as thou tofore hast been;
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs, 296
And make proud Saturnine and his empress
Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. 300

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in TITUS' House. A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit; and look you eat no
more

Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.

Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreath knot: 4
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our ten-fold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; 8
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.

[To LAVINIA.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs! 12

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Would it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth, 16

And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 20

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Til. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I. 24
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of
hands;

To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable? 28
O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.

Fie, fie! how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands, 32

If Marcus did not name the word of hands.
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs: 36

She says she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks.

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40

As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to
heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet, 44
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness. 49

Til. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of
tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

[MARCUS strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife? 52

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a fly.

Til. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent, 56
Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Til. But how if that fly had a father and a
mother? 60

How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And buzz lamenting doings in the air!

Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody, 64
Came here to make us merry! and thou hast kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me, sir; it was a black illfavour'd fly,

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd
him.

Til. O, O, O! 68

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor 72

Come hither purposely to poison me.
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.

Ah! sirrah.

Yet I think we are not brought so low, 76
But that between us we can kill a fly

That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas! poor man; grief has so wrought on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances. 80

Til. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.

Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begins to dazzle. 84

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. TITUS' Garden.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why:

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes:
Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean. 4

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee; Somewhither would she have thee go with her. Ah! boy; Cornelia never with more care 12 Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Mar. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her;
17 For I have heard my grandsire say full oft, Extremity of griefs would make men mad; And I have read that Hecuba of Troy
20 Ran mad through sorrow; that made me to fear, Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did, And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;
24 Which made me down to throw my books and fly,

Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt; And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship.
28

Mar. Lucius, I will.

[LAVINIA turns over the books which LUCIUS had let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see. Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.
32 But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd; Come, and take choice of all my library, And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.
36 Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Mar. I think she means that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact: ay, more there was; Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses; My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone, Perhaps, she cull'd it from among the rest.
44

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves! [Helping her.]

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read? This is the tragic tale of Philomel, And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;
48

And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Mar. See, brother, see! note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
52 Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods? See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,— O! had we never, never hunted there,— 56

Pattern'd by that the poet here describes, By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Mar. O! why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies?
60

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed: Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?
64

Mar. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, Inspire me, that I may this treason find!

My lord, look here; look here, Lavinia:
68

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst, This after me.

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with his feet and mouth.]

I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all. Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift!

Write thou, good niece, and here display at last What God will have discover'd for revenge.
74

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain, That we may know the traitors and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. O! do you read, my lord, what she hath writ?
77

Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius.

Mar. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?
80

Tit. Magni dominator poli, Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Mar. O! calm thee, gentle lord; although I know

There is enough written upon this earth
84 To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims. My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope; And swear with me, as, with the woeful here
89

And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame, Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,

That we will prosecute by good advice
92 Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,

And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how;
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:
The dam will wake, an if she wind you once: 97
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list. 100
You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind 104
Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad,
And where's your lesson then? Boy, what say
you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome. 109

Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full off

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live. 112

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury:
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal my boy
Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents that I intend to send them both: 116
Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou
not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house; 120
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.
[Exeunt TITUS, LAVINIA, and Boy.]

Mar. O heavens! can you hear a good man
groan,

And not relent or not compassion him? 124

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;
But yet so just that he will not revenge. 128
Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter, from one side, AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON; from the other young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I
may, 4
I greet your honours from Andronicus;

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound
you both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the news?

Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd,
that's the news, 8

For villains mark'd with rape. [Aloud.] May it
please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,

To gratify your honourable youth, 12

The hope of Rome, for so he bade me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well. 16

And so I leave you both: [Aside.] like bloody villains. [Exeunt Boy and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:—

[Reads.] '*Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus, 20
Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.*

Chi. O! 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it
well:

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay just, a verse in Horace; right, you have it. 24

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick;

But were our witty empress well afoot, 29

She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:

It did her rest in her unrest awhile.

[To them.] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star 32

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,

Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good before the palace gate

To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing. 36

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a
lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?

Did you not use his daughter very friendly? 40

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say
amen. 44

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand
more.

Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over. [Trumpets sound.]

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus? 49

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child.

Nur. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, did you see 52

Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron! we are all undone. 56
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O! that which I would hide from heaven's eye, 60

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace!

She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought a-bed.

Aar. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her? 64

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam: a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue.

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad 68

Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.

The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue? 72

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother. 76

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choicel

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend! 80

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What! must it, nurse? then let no man but I 84

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point:

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up. 88

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.]

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point 92
That touches this my first-born son and heir.

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 96
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue, 100
In that it scorns to bear another hue;

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood. 104

Tell the empress from me, I am of age

To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself; 108

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:

This before all the world do I prefer;

This maugre all the world will I keep safe,

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome. 112

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor in his rage will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. 116

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.

Fie, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart:

Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer: 120
Look how the black slaves miles upon the father,

As who should say, 'Old lad, I am thine own.'
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed

Of that self blood that first gave life to you; 124
And from that womb where you imprison'd were

He is enfranchised and come to light:

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face. 128

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done, And we will all subscribe to thy advice:

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe. 132

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult, My son and I will have the wind of you:

Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league, 137

I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor, The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms. 140 But say, again, how many saw the child?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself, And no one else but the deliver'd empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself: 144

Two may keep counsel when the third's away. Go to the empress; tell her this I said:

[Stabbing her.]

'Weke, weke!'

So cries a pig prepared to the spit. 148

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours, A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no.

And now be it known to you my full intent. 153 Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman;

His wife but yesternight was brought to bed. His child is like to her, fair as you are: 156

Go pack with him, and give the mother gold, And tell them both the circumstance of all,

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd, And be received for the emperor's heir, 160

And substituted in the place of mine, To calm this tempest whirling in the court;

And let the emperor dandle him for his own. Hark ye, lords; you see, I have given her physic,

[Pointing to the Nurse.]

And you must needs bestow her funeral; 165 The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.

This done, see that you take no longer days, But send the midwife presently to me. 168

The midwife and the nurse well made away, Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora, 172 Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, bearing off the Nurse's body.]

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms, And secretly to greet the empress' friends. 176

Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence;

For it is you that puts us to our shifts: I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,

And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat, And cabin in a cave, and bring you up 181

To be a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit with the Child.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter TITUS, bearing arrows, with letters on the ends of them; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, CAIUS, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.

Sir boy, now let me see your archery: Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.

Terras Astræa reliquit: 4 Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;

Happily you may find her in the sea; 8 Yet there's as little justice as at land.

No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it; 'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth: 12 Then, when you come to Pluto's region,

I pray you, deliver him this petition; Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,

And that it comes from old Andronicus, 16 Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.

Ah! Rome. Well, well; I made thee miserable What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. 20 Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd: This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence; And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O Publius! is not this a heavy case, 25 To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns By day and night to attend him carefully, 28

And feed his humour kindly as we may, Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy. Join with the Goths, and with revengeful war 32

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude, And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters! What! have you met with her? 36

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,

If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else, 40

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. Heddoth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels. 44

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;
No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear: 48

And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven and move the gods

To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer,

Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you: here, ad Apollinem:
Ad Martem, that's for myself:

Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:

To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine; 56

You were as good to shoot against the wind.

To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.

Of my word, I have written to effect;

There's not a god left unsolicited. 60

Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into
the court:

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O!
well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap: give it Pallas. 64

Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon;

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou
done?

See, see! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot, 69

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court;

And who should find them but the empress'
villain? 72

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post is
come. 76

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. O! the gibbet-maker? He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week. 81

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas! sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life. 84

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! alas! sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men. 93

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you. 96

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life. 100

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.

Hold, hold; meanwhile, here's money for thy charges. 104

Give me pen and ink.

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you.
And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone. 113

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like a humble suppliant:
And when thou hast given it to the emperor, 117
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, Lords, and Others: SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these!
Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne,

Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of egal justice, us'd in such contempt? 4

My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,—
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears,—there nought hath pass'd,

But even with law, against the wilful sons 8
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits.
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? 12

And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war;
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of
Rome! 16

What's this but libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were. 20
But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages;
But he and his shall know that justice lives
In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep, 24
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, 28
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd
his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight 32
Than prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempt. — [Aside.] Why, thus it shall become

High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, 36
Thy life-blood out; if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with
us?

Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be emperial. 40

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den.

I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[SATURNINUS reads the letter.]

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently. 44

Clo. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.

Clo. Hanged! By 'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit, guarded.]

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs! 49
Shall I endure this monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same device proceeds:
May this be borne? As if his traitorous sons, 52
That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege. 56
For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughterman;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius? 60 Æmil. Arm, arm, my lord! Rome never had more cause.

The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct 64
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is war-like Lucius general of the Goths?
These tidings nip me, and I hang the head 69
As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:
'Tis he the common people love so much; 72
Myself hath often heard them say,

When I have walked like a private man,
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor. 76

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name. 80

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings 84
He can at pleasure stint their melody;
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus 88
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep,
Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed. 92

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear

With golden promises, that, were his heart 96
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
[To ÆMILIUS.] Go thou before, be our ambassador:

Say that the emperor requests a parley 100
Of war-like Lucius, and appoint the meeting,
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.
Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety, 104
Bid him demand what pledge will please him
best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.
[Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have, 108
To pluck proud Lucius from the war-like Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Flourish. Enter LUCIUS, and an army of Goths, with drums and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful
friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their
emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are. 4
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs;
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
Let him make treble satisfaction. 8

First Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our
comfort;

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt, 12
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora. 16

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with
him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you
all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON, with his Child in his arms.

Sec. Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops
I stray'd, 20

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall. 24

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art, 28
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor;
But where the bull and cow are both milk-
white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf. 32
Peace, villain, peace!—even thus he rates the babe,—

'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress'
babe,

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.' 36
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon
him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him
hither,

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil 40

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.

Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey 44

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? not a word?

A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy. 48

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal
blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal. 52

Get me a ladder. [A ladder brought, which AARON is made to ascend.

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear: 56

If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'

Luc. Say on; and if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure thee,
Lucius, 61

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds, 64
 Complots of mischief, treason, villanies
 Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:
 And this shall all be buried by my death,
 Unless thou swear to me my child shall live. 68

Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st no god:

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
 Yet, for I know thou art religious,
 And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
 With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies, 76
 Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
 Therefore I urge thy oath; for that I know
 An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
 And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,
 To that I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt vow
 By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
 That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
 To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up:
 Or else I will discover nought to thee. 85

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed of charity 89

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.

'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;

They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her, 92

And cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it. 96

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thy-

self!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct

them.

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set; 100

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me

As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole 104

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,

Confederate with the queen and her two sons:

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
 And, when I had it, drew myself apart, 112
 And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall
 When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily, 116
 That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
 And when I told the empress of this sport,
 She swoonded almost at my pleasing tale,
 And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses. 120

First Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand
 more. 124

Even now I curse the day, and yet, I think,
 Few come within the compass of my curse,
 Wherein I did not some notorious ill:

As kill a man, or else devise his death; 128

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;

Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself;

Set deadly enmity between two friends;

Make poor men's cattle break their necks; 132

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their

tears,

Of't have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends'
 doors, 136

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;

And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,

'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.' 140

Tut! I have done a thousand dreadful things

As willingly as one would kill a fly,

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed

But that I cannot do ten thousand more. 144

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die

So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,

To live and burn in everlasting fire, 148

So I might have your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from
 Rome 152

Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius! what's the news from Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths, 156

The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages, 160
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

First Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus, 164
And we will come. March away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome. Before TITUS' House.

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habili-
ment,

I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps, 5
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies. 8

[They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?

Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect? 12
You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee. 16

Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talk,

Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me. 20

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night; 24

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.

Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora; 28

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:

I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes. 32
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;

Confer with me of murder and of death.

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale, 36

Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me, 41

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;

Now give some surance that thou art Revenge;

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels,

And then I'll come and be thy waggoner, 48

And whirl along with thee about the globe.

Provide two proper palfreys, black as jet,

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,

And find out murderers in their guilty caves: 52

And when thy car is loaden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel

Trot like a servile footman all day long,

Even from Hyperion's rising in the east 56

Until his very downfall in the sea:

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,

So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. 60

Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so,

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are, 64

And you the empress! but we worldly men

Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;

And, if one arm's embracement will content thee, 68

I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.

Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches, 72

For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;

And, being credulous in this mad thought,

I'll make him send for Lucius his son;

And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure, 76

I'll find some cunning practice out of hand

To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme. 80

Enter TITUS.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.
How like the empress and her sons you are! 84
Well are you fitted had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor; 88
And would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil.
But welcome as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus? 92

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,

And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong, 96

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,

Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer. 100

Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap

To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.

Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court 104

There is a queen attended by a Moor;

Well mayst thou know her by thy own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee:

I pray thee, do on them some violent death; 108
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son, 112
Who leads towards Rome a band of war-like Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house:

When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the empress and her sons, 116

The emperor himself, and all thy foes,

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,

And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device? 120

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him 124
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him, 129
As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again.
[Exit.]

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business, 132
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;

Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius. 136

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,

While I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair, 140

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they suppose me mad;

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices;
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam. 144

Dem. [Aside to TAMORA.] Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes

To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

[Exit TAMORA.]

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell. 148

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut! I have work enough for you to do.
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter PUBLIUS and Others.

Pub. What is your will? 152

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The empress' sons,

I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd; 156

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them;
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it: therefore bind them sure, 161
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit. PUBLIUS, &c., seize CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.]

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded. 164

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.

Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a basin, and he a knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me, 168

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd. 172

You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,

My hand cut off and made a merry jest:

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear 176

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,

Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say if I should let you speak?

Villains! for shame you could not beg for grace.

Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you. 181

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood. 184

You know your mother means to feast with me,

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.

Hark! villains, I will grind your bones to dust,

And with your blood and it I'll make a paste;

And of the paste a coffin I will rear, 189

And make two pasties of your shameful heads;

And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,

Like to the earth swallow her own increase. 192

This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;

For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Procne I will be reveng'd. 196

And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come.

[He cuts their throats.]

Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small,

And with this hateful liquor temper it; 200

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.

Come, come, be every one officious

To make this banquet, which I wish may prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,

And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Court of Titus' House. A banquet set out.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS and Goths, with AARON prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

First Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor, 4

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;

Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,

Till he be brought unto the empress' face,

For testimony of her foul proceedings: 8

And see the ambush of our friends be strong;

I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,

And prompt me, that my tongue may utter

forth 12

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.

[Exeunt Goths, with AARON. Trumpets sound.]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand. 16

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Senators, Tribunes, and Others.

Sat. What! hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?

Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20

The feast is ready which the careful Titus

Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places. 24

Sat. Marcus, we will. [Hautboys sound.]

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;

Welcome, ye war-like Goths; welcome, Lucius;

And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor,

'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. 29

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well

To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus. 33

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.
 My lord the emperor, resolve me this:
 Was it well done of rash Virginius 36
 To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforced, stain'd, and deflower'd?
Sat. It was, Andronicus.
Tit. Your reason, mighty lord? 40
Sat. Because the girl should not survive her
 shame,
 And by her presence still renew his sorrows.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
 A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, 44
 For me most wretched, to perform the like.
 Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;
 And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die!
 [Kills LAVINIA.]
Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind? 48
Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.
 I am as woeful as Virginius was,
 And have a thousand times more cause than he
 To do this outrage: and it is now done. 52
Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.
Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?
Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?
Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius: 56
 They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue:
 And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.
Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie; 60
 Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
 Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
 'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point. [Kills TAMORA.]
Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed! [Kills TITUS.]
Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed? 65
 There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed!
 [Kills SATURNINUS. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their partisans, go up into the balcony.]
Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,
 By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl 68
 Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
 O! let me teach you how to knit again
 This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
 These broken limbs again into one body; 72

Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
 And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,
 Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,
 Do shameful execution on herself. 76
 But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
 Grave witnesses of true experience,
 Cannot induce you to attend my words,
 [To LUCIUS.] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst
 our ancestor, 80
 When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
 To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
 The story of that baleful burning night
 When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's
 Troy; 84
 Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
 Or who hath brought the fatal engine in
 That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
 My heart is not compact of flint nor steel, 88
 Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
 But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
 And break my very utterance, even in the time
 When it should move you to attend me most, 92
 Lending your kind commiseration.
 Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
 Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him
 speak.
Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to
 you, 96
 That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
 Were they that murdered our emperor's
 brother;
 And they it was that ravish'd our sister. 99
 For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
 Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd
 Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out,
 And sent her enemies unto the grave:
 Lastly, myself unkindly banished, 104
 The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
 To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
 Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
 And op'd their arms to embrace me as a
 friend: 108
 And I am the turn'd forth, be it known to you,
 That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,
 And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
 Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body. 112
 Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I;
 My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
 That my report is just and full of truth.
 But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, 116
 Citing my worthless praise: O! pardon me;
 For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.
Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this
 child;
 Of this was Tamora delivered, 120
 The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
 The villain is alive in Titus' house,
 Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true. 124
 Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
 These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
 Or more than any living man could bear.
 Now you have heard the truth, what say you
 Romans? 128

Have we done aught amiss, show us wherein,
 And, from the place where you behold us now,
 The poor remainder of Andronici
 Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
 And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
 And make a mutual closure of our house.
 Speak, Romans, speak! and if you say we shall,
 Lo! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall. 136

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of
 Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
 Lucius, our emperor; for well I know
 The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140
Romans. Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal
 emperor!

Mar. [To Attendants.] Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,
 And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
 To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
 As punishment for his most wicked life. 145

[Exeunt Attendants.]

LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the Others descend.

Romans. Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern
 so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
 But, gentle people, give me aim awhile, 149
 For nature puts me to a heavy task.

Stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near,
 To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk. 152
 O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses TITUS.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
 face,

The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
 Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips: 157
 O! were the sum of these that I should pay
 Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us 160
 To melt in showers: thy grandsire lov'd thee
 well:

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
 Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
 Many a matter hath he told to thee, 164
 Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
 In that respect, then, like a loving child,
 Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
 spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so: 168
 Friends should associate friends in grief and woe.

Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
 Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart 172

Would I were dead, so you did live again.
 O Lord! I cannot speak to him for weeping;
 My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants, with AARON.

First Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with woes: 176

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
 That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food: 180

If any one relieves or pities him,
 For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
 Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb? 184

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
 I should repent the evils I have done.

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
 Would I perform, if I might have my will: 188
 If one good deed in all my life I did,
 I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave. 192
 My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
 Be closed in our household's monument.

As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
 No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds, 196
 No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
 But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey.
 Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
 And, being so, shall have like want of pity. 200
 See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
 By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
 Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
 That like events may ne'er it ruinate. [Exeunt.]

SCENE.—Verona: Once (in the Fifth Act), at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. *Two households, both alike in dignity,
 In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
 From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
 Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
 From forth the fatal loins of these two foes 5
 A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
 Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
 Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
 The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
 And the continuance of their parents' rage,
 Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
 Is now the two hours' traffick of our stage; 12
 The which if you with patient ears attend,
 What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.* [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No. for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.
 Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar. 6

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves
 me. 10

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand; therefore, if thou art moved, thou runnest away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's. 16

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:
 therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men. 24

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:
 when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids? 28

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh. 34

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues. 37

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run? 40

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin. 44

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it. 49

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? 52

Sam. [Aside to GREGORY.] Is the law of our side if I say ay?

Gre. [Aside to SAMPSON.] No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir. 57

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you. 61

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. [Aside to SAMPSON.] Say, 'better;' here comes one of my master's kinsmen. 65

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. Part, fools!

Put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds? 72

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What! drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word, 76

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.

Have at thee, coward! [They fight.]

Enter several persons of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs and partisans.

Citizens. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues! 80

Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY

CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

Lady Cap. A crutch, a crutch! Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me. 84

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet! Hold me not; let me go.

Lady Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,— 88 Will they not hear? What hol you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands 92 Throw your mis-temper'd weapons to the ground, And hear the sentence of your moved prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, 96

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets, And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments, To wield old partisans, in hands as old, 100

Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate. If ever you disturb our streets again

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away: 104

You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon

To know our further pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. 109

[Exeunt all but MONTAGUE, LADY MONTAGUE, and BENVOLIO.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary

And yours close fighting ere I did approach: 113

I drew to part them; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd,
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, 116
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal hiss'd him in scorn.
While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, Came more and more, and fought on part and
part, 120
Till the prince came, who parted either part.

Lady Mon. O! where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun 124

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side, 128
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own, 132
That most are busied when they're most alone,
Pursu'd my humour not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen, 136

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw 140
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night. 145
Black and portentous must this humour prove Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself and many other friends:

But he, his own affections' counsellor, 152
Is to himself, I will not say how true,
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm, 156
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows
grow,

We would as willingly give cure as know. 160

Ben. See where he comes: so please you, step aside;

I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,

To hear true shrift. Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt MONTAGUE and LADY.]

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young? 165

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay mel! sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens
Romeo's hours? 168

Rom. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love? 172

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas! that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.

Rom. Alas! that love, whose view is muffled
still, 176

Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will.
Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was
here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with
love: 180

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!

O any thing! of nothing first create.

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms! 184
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick
health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep. 188

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast, 192
Which thou wilt propagate to have it press'd

With more of thine: this love that thou hast shown

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes; 197

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:

What is it else? a madness most discreet,

A choking gall, and a preserving sweet. 200

Farewell, my coz. [Going.]

Ben. Soft, I will go along;

An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut! I have lost myself; I am not
here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where. 204
Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love.

Rom. What! shall I groan and tell thee?

Ben. Groan! why, no;

But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will; 208

Ah! word ill urg'd to one that is so ill.

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's fair I love. 212

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's wit;
 And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd, 216
 From love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
 Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
 Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold: 220
 O! she is rich in beauty; only poor
 That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste; 224

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
 Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
 She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
 To merit bliss by making me despair: 228
 She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
 Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me; forget to think of her.

Rom. O! teach me how I should forget to think. 232

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes:
 Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way

To call hers exquisite, in question more.
 These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows
 Being black put us in mind they hide the fair; 237

He, that is stricken blind cannot forget
 The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
 Show me a mistress that is passing fair, 240
 What doth her beauty serve but as a note
 Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
 In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
 For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
 And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long. 5
 But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:

My child is yet a stranger in the world, 8
 She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;

Let two more summers wither in their pride
 Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made. 12

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
 She is the hopeful lady of my earth:

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart, 16
 My will to her consent is but a part;

An she agree, within her scope of choice
 Lies my consent and fair according voice.
 This night I hold an old accustom'd feast, 20

Whereto I have invited many a guest
 Such as I love; and you, among the store,
 One more, most welcome, makes my number more.

At my poor house look to behold this night 24
 Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light:

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
 When well-apparell'd April on the heel

Of limping winter treads, even such delight 28
 Among fresh female buds shall you this night

Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
 And like her most whose merit most shall be:

Which on more view, of many mine being one 32
 May stand in number, though in reckoning none.

Come, go with me. [To Servant, giving him a paper.] Go, sirrah, trudge about

Through fair Verona; find those persons out
 Whose names are written there, and to them say, 36

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut! man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish; 48
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish:

Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die. 52

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is; 56

Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd and tormented, and—Good den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' good den. I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery. 60

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book: but, I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language. 64

Serv. Ye say honestly; rest you merry!

[Offering to go.]

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.

Signior Martino and his wife and daughters; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.

A fair assembly: whether should they come?

Serv. Up. 76

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's. 80

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

[Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's, Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st, 88

With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with unattainted eye
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow. 92

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these, who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars! 96
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd with herself in either eye; 100
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now shows best. 104

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,

But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve year old,—

I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-bird!

God forbid! where's this girl? what, Juliet! 4

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now! who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

Lady Cap. This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile.

We must talk in secret: nurse, come back again; 8

I have remember'd me, thou's hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Lady Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth— 12
And yet to my teen be it spoken I have but four—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now

To Lammastide?

Lady Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,

Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen. 17

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—

Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God;

She was too good for me. But, as I said, 20

On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen;

That shall she, marry; I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;

And she was wean'd, I never shall forget it, 24

Of all the days of the year, upon that day;

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;

My lord and you were then at Mantua. 28

Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool!

To see it tetchy and fall out with the dug. 32

'Shake,' quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need,

I throw,

To bid me trudge:

And since that time it is eleven years;

For then she could stand high lone; nay, by the rood, 36

She could have run and waddled all about;

For even the day before she broke her brow:

And then my husband—God be with his soul!

A' was a merry man—took up the child: 40

'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit;

Wilt thou not, Jule?' and, by my halidom,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said 'Ay.' 44

To see now how a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Jule?'

quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.' 48

Lady Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh,

To think it should leave crying, and say 'Ay.'

And yet, I warrant, it had upon his brow 52

A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;

A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly:

'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou com'st to

age; 56

Wilt thou not, Jule?' it stinted and said 'Ay.'

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed:

An I might live to see thee married once, 61

I have my wish.

Lady Cap. Marry, that 'marry' is the very

theme

I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet, 64
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat. 68

Lady Cap. Well, think of marriage now;

younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,

Are made already mothers: by my count,

I was your mother much upon these years 72

That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief,

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax. 76

Lady Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

Lady Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast; 80

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face

And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;

Examine every married lineament,

And see how one another lends content; 84

And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies

Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beautify him, only lacks a cover: 88

The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride

For fair without the fair within to hide:

That book in many eyes doth share the glory,

That in gold clasps locks in the golden story: 92

So shall you share all that he doth possess,

By having him making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! nay, bigger; women grow by

men.

Lady Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love? 96

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move;

But no more deep will I endart mine eye

Than your consent gives strength to make it

fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech

you, follow straight. 104

Lady Cap. We follow thee. Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Masquers, Torch-Bearers, and Others.

Rom. What! shall this speech be spoke for our excuse,

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity:

We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf, 4

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,

Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;

Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance: 8

But, let them measure us by what they will,

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch: I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light. 12

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes

With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead

So stakes me to the ground I cannot move. 16

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings, And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft

To soar with his light feathers; and so bound 20

I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:

Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing. 24

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,

Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down. 28

Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a masque.]

A visor for a visor! what care I,

What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me. 32

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me; let wantons, light of heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels, 36

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase;

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word: 40

If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire, Of—save your reverence—love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay 44

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.

Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits

Five times in that ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this masque; 48

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dream'd a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true. 52

Mer. O! then, I see, Queen Mab hath been with you.

Ben. Queen Mab! What's she?

Mer. She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate-stone 56

On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; 61

The traces, of the smallest spider's web;

The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film; 64

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut, 68

Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,

Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love; 72

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies straight;

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;

Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are. 77

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,

And then dreams he of smelling out a suit;

And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

Tickling a parson's nose as a' lies asleep, 81

Then dreams he of another benefice;

Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,

And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,

Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades, 85

Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes;
And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or
two, 88

And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which once untangled much misfortune bodes;
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace! Mercutio, peace! 96
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air, 100
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south. 104

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear too early; for my mind mis-gives

Some consequence yet hanging in the stars 108
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my breast
By some vile forfeit of untimely death. 112
But he, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—*The Same. A Hall in CAPULET'S
House.*

Musicians waiting. Enter Servingmen.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

Sec. Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing. 6

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate.
Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and,
as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony! and Potpan!

Sec. Serv. Ay, boy; ready. 12

First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for in the great chamber.

Third Serv. We cannot be here and there
too. 17

Sec. Serv. Cheerly, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.]

Enter CAPULET and JULIET and Others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies that have their toes 20

Unplagu'd with corns will walk a bout with you.
Ah! hal! my mistresses, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty,
she,

I'll swear, hath corns; am I come near ye
now? 24

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear
Such as would please; 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
gone. 28

You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play.

A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance.]
More light, ye knaves! and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room has grown too
hot. 32

Ah! sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet,
For you and I are past our dancing days;
How long is 't now since last yourself and I 36
Were in a mask?

Sec. Cap. By'r Lady, thirty years.

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will, 40
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

Sec. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more; his son is older, sir.

His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago. 44

Rom. What lady is that which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O! she doth teach the torches to burn bright. 48

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear;
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows, 52
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night. 57

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.
Fetch me my rapier, boy. What! dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antick face, 60
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so? 54

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo. 68

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone:

He bears him like a portly gentleman;

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him

To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth. 72

I would not for the wealth of all this town

Here in my house do him disparagement;

Therefore be patient, take no note of him:

It is my will; the which if thou respect, 76

Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,

An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest:
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd: 80

What! Goodman boy; I say, he shall, go to;

Am I the master here, or you? go to.

You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests! 84

You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to;

You are a saucy boy—is't so indeed?—

This trick may chance to scathe you.—I know what: 88

You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time.

Well said, my hearts! You are a princ Cox; go:

Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For shame!

I'll make you quiet. What! cheerly, my hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting 93

Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.

I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall

Now seeming sweet convert to bitter gall. [Exit.
Rom. [To JULIET.] If I profane with my un-worthiest hand 97

This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this;

My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand

To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much, 101

Which mannerly devotion shows in this;

For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss. 104

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers
too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair. 108

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayers' effect I take.

Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.
[Kissing her.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took. 112

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly
urg'd!

Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word
with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house, 117

And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:

I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;

I tell you he that can lay hold of her 120

Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone; 125

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.

Is it e'en so? Why then, I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good-night. 128

More torches here! Come on then, let's to bed.

Ah! sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest. [Exeunt all except JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond
gentleman? 132

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance? 136

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name.—If he be married,

My grave is like to be my wedding bed.
Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
 The only son of your great enemy. 141

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
 Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
 Prodigious birth of love it is to me, 144
 That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this, what's this?
Jul. A rime I learn'd even now
 Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within, 'JULIET!'
Nurse. Anon, anon!—
 Come, let's away; the strangers are all gone. 148
[Exeunt.]

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
 And young affection gapes to be his heir;
 That fair for which love groan'd for and would
 die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again, 5
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks: 8

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers us'd to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-belov'd any where: 12
But passion lends them power, time means, to
meet,
Tempering extremity with extreme sweet.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Verona A Lane by the wall of CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is
 here?
 Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
 [He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed. 4

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard
 wall:

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.

Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh: 8
 Speak but one rime and I am satisfied;
 Cry but 'Ay me!' couple but 'love' and 'dove';
 Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word.

One nickname for her purblind son and heir, 12
 Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim

When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.
 He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;
 The ape is dead, and I must conjure him. 16

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
 By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
 By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie, 20
 That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger
 him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle 24
 Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
 That were some spite: my invocation

Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name 28
 I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be consorted with the humorous night:
 Blind is his love and best befits the dark. 32

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
 And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit

As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
 O Romeo! that she were, O! that she were 37

An open et cætera, thou a poperin pear.
 Romeo, good night: I'll to my truckle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep: 40
 Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
 To seek him here that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.

[JULIET appears above at a window.
 But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!
 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, 4

Who is already sick and pale with grief,
 That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious;
 Her vestal livery is but sick and green, 8
 And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.

It is my lady; O! it is my love:
 O! that she knew she were.
 She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?
 Her eye discourses; I will answer it. 3
 I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
 Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
 Having some business, do entreat her eyes 16
 To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
 What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
 The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars
 As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven 20
 Would through the airy region stream so bright
 That birds would sing and think it were not
 night.
 Seel how she leans her cheek upon her hand:
 O! that I were a glove upon that hand, 24
 That I might touch that cheek.

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks:

O! speak again, bright angel; for thou art
 As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
 As is a winged messenger of heaven 28
 Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
 Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him
 When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
 And sails upon the bosom of the air. 32

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou
 Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name;
 Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
 And I'll no longer be a Capulet. 36

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;
 Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.
 What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot, 40
 Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
 Belonging to a man. O! be some other name:
 What's in a name? that which we call a rose
 By any other name would smell as sweet; 44
 So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
 Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name;
 And for that name, which is no part of thee, 48
 Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word.
 Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
 Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night, 52
 So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
 I know not how to tell thee who I am:
 My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
 Because it is an enemy to thee: 56
 Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred
 words

Of that tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague? 60

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
 And the place death, considering who thou art,
 If any of my kinsmen find thee here. 65

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
 And what love can do that dares love attempt;
 Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me. 69

Jul. If they do see thee they will murder
 thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye

Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet, 72

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee
 here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;

And but thou love me, let them find me here;
 My life were better ended by their hate, 77
 Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By Love, that first did prompt me to inquire; 80

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,
 I would adventure for such merchandise. 84

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
 For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny 88
 What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!

Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say 'Ay,'
 And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st,
 Thou mayst prove false; at lovers' perjuries, 92
 They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo!

If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:

Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
 I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay, 96
 So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
 And therefore thou mayst think my haviour
 light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange. 101

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was 'ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love, 105
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,— Jul. O! swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon, 109

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Least that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, 113
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—
Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in
thee, 116

I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good-night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and rest
Come to thy heart as that within my breast! 124

Rom. O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it; 128

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have: 132
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.]
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu! 136
Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit above.]

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream, 140
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and goodnight indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word tomorrow, 144

By one that I'll procure to come to thee, Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam! 149

Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st not
well,

I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. By and by; I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief: 152
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—

Jul. A thousand times good-night!

[Exit above.]

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books; 156

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring.]

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist! O! for a falconer's
voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again.

Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud, 160

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,

And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine,

With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name:

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by
night, 165

Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear!

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow

Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine. 168

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till then.

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there, 172

Remembering how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee
gone; 176

And yet no further than a wanton's bird,

Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again, 180
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good-night, good-night! parting is such sweet
sorrow 184
That I shall say good-night till it be morrow.

[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell, 188
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S
Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, with a basket.

Fri. L. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,

Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of
light,

And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels:

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye 5
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours

With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb; 9

What is her burying grave that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find, 12
Many for many virtues excellent,

None but for some, and yet all different.
O! mickle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities: 16

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,

Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse: 20
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,

And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this weak flower

Poison hath residence and medicine power: 24
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each

part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.

Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will; 28

And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. L. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me? 32

Young son, it argues a distemper'd head

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,

And where care lodges, sleep will never lie; 36

But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth

reign:

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure

Thou art up-rous'd by some distemperature; 40

Or if not so, then here I hit it right,

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline? 44

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy, 49

Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,

That's by me wounded: both our remedies

Within thy help and holy physic lies: 52

I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo!

My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift. 56

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine 60

By holy marriage: when and where and how

We met we woo'd and made exchange of vow,

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day. 64

Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here;

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,

So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes. 68

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine

Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline;

How much salt water thrown away in waste,

To season love, that of it doth not taste! 72

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,

Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;

Lo! here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit

Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet. 76

If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then:

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
men. 80

Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosa-line.

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil
mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have. 84

Rom. I pray thee, chide not; she, whom I love now

Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. L. O! she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell. 88
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O! let us hence; I stand on sudden
haste. 93

Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,
Torments him so, that he will sure run mad. 4

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life. 8

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared. 12

Mer. Alas! poor Romeo, he is already dead;
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt? 19

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you.
O! he is the courageous captain of compliments.
He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom; the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah! the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay! 28

Ben. The what?

Mer. Thepox of such antick, lipping, affecting fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!—'By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man! a very good whore.'—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons! 38

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in: Laura to his lady was but a kitchen-wench; marry, she had a better love to be-rime her; Dido a dowdy; Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and Hero hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you? 52

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy. 57

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to curtsy. 60

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower. 64

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then, is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said; follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out the pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest! solely singular for the singleness. 72

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wit faints.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs;
or I'll cry a match. 76

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-geese chase, I have done, for thou hast more of the wild-geese in one of thy wits than, I am sure,

I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose? 81

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not here for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not. 85

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweetening; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not then well served in to a sweet goose? 89

Mer. O! here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad;' which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose. 94

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole. 100

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large. 105

Mer. O! thou art deceived; I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer. 109

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock. 112

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face. 117

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den? 120

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar. 125

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; 'for himself to mar,' quoth a'?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse. 132

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yeal is the worst well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some conference with you. 137

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found? 140

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent. [Sings.]

An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar, Is very good meat in Lent:

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score, When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither. 149

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell,

Lady, lady, lady. 152

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month. 158

Nurse. An a' speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skeins-mates. [To PETER.] And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure! 165

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side. 170

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave! Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bid me say I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing. 182

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman. 187

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer. 192

Rom. Bid her devise
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;
And there she shall at Friar Laurence's cell,
Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny. 197

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there. 200

Rom. And stay, good nurse; behind the abbey wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy 204
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell! Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.
Farewell! Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir. 208

Rom. What sayst thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee my man's as true as steel. 212

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O! there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse: what of that? both with an R. 224

Nurse. Ah! mocker; that's the dog's name. R is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she had the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it. 229

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit ROMEO.] Peter! 232

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Before, and apace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so.

O! she is lame: love's heralds should be thoughts, 4

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,

Driving back shadows over lowering hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill 9
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours, yet she is not come.

Had she affections, and warm youthful blood, 12
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;

My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead; 16
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God! she comes. O honey nurse! what news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit PETER.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse; O Lord! why look'st thou sad? 21

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face. 24

Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave awhile:

Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunce have I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news.

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good nurse, speak. 28

Nurse. Jesu! what haste? can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath? 32

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance: 36

Let me be satisfied, is 't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;
you know not how to choose a man: Romeo!
no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare.
He is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What! have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before.

What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord! how my head aches; what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o' t'other side; O! my back, my back!

Beshrew your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jauncing up and down.

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou reliest:

'Your love says, like an honest gentleman, Where is your mother?'

Nurse. O! God's lady dear, Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Laurence's cell,

There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.

Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark;
I am the drudge and toil in your delight,

But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go; I'll to dinner: hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heaven upon this holy act,

That after hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,

Then love-devouring death do what he dare;
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die, like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss consume: the sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite:

Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady: O! so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:

A lover may bstride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air,

And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah! Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more

To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,

Braggs of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that when he thouers the confines of a tavern claps me his sword upon the table and says, 'God send me no need of thee!' and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow? 11

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to? 15

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling! 33

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter. 36

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT, and Others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den! a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow. 44

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving? 48

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,—
Mer. Consort! What! dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance.
'Zounds! consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw unto some private place, 56
Or reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. 60

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; Your worship in that sense maycall him 'man.'

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford No better term than this,—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage 68
To such a greeting; villain am I none,
Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw. 72

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee, But love thee better than thou canst devise, Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet, which name I tender 76 As dearly as my own, be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! Alla stoccata carries it away. [Draws.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk? 80

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. [Drawing.] I am for you. 88

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage! 92
Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt! good Mercutio!

[Exeunt TYBALT and his Partisans.

Mer. I am hurt.

A plague o' both your houses! I am sped. 96
Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What! art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much. 100

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague o' both your houses! 'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm. 109

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint. A plague o' both your houses! They have made worms' meat of me: I have it, 113

And soundly too:—your houses!

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt 116 In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman. O sweet Juliet! Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, 120 And in my temper soften'd valour's steel!

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo! brave Mercutio's dead;

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend; 125 This but begins the woe others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain! Away to heaven, respective lenity, 129 And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now! Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads, 133 Staying for thine to keep him company: Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Wretched boy, that didst consort him here, 136 Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that. [They fight: TYBALT falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away! be gone! The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain. Stand not amaz'd: the prince will doom thee death 140

If thou art taken: hence! be gone! away!

Rom. O! I am Fortune's fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROMEO.]

Enter Citizens, &c.

First Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he? 144

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

First Cit. Up, sir, go with me. I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter PRINCE, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince! I can discover all 148 The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

Lady Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child! 152 O prince! O cousin! husband! O! the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman. Prince, as thou art true, For blood of ours shed blood of Montague. O cousin, cousin! 156

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay:

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal 160 Your high displeasure: all this, uttered With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts 164

With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast, Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point, And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends 168 It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, 'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and, swifter than his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points, 172 And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled; But by and by comes back to Romeo, 176 Who had but newly entertain'd revenge, And to 't they go like lightning, for, ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain,

And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly. 180 This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Lady Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague; Affection makes him false, he speaks not true: Some twenty of them fought in this black strife And all those twenty could but kill one life. 185 I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give; Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio; Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend,
His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence 192
Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleed-
ing;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine 196
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses;
Therefore use none; let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last. 201
Bear hence this body and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phœbus' lodging; such a waggoner
As Phæthon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately. 4
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That runaway's eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen!
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites 8
By their own beauties; or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match, 12
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,

Think true love acted simple modesty. 16
Come, night! come, Romeo! come, thou day in
night!

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.
Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd
night, 20

Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night, 24
And pay no worship to the garish sun.
O! I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it, and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day 28
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not wear them. O! here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks 32

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.
Now nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
the cords

That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse.

Ay, ay, the cords.

[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands? 36

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!

Alack the day! he's gone, he's killed, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse.

Romeo can, 40

Though heaven cannot. O! Romeo, Romeo;

Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell. 44

Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but 'I,'

And that bare vowel, 'I,' shall poison more

Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:

I am not I, if there be such an 'I,' 48

Or those eyes shut that make thee answer 'I.'

If he be slain, say 'I,' or if not 'no:'

Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes, 52

God save the mark! here on his manly breast:

A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,

All in gore blood; I swounded at the sight. 56

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!

Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;

And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! 60

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had:

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!

That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary? 64

Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?

My dearest cousin, and my dearer lord?

Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living if those two are gone? 68

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;

Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did. 72

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
 Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
 Dove-feather'd raven! wolvish-ravens lamb!
 Despised substance of divinest show! 77
 Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st;
 A damned saint, an honourable villain!
 O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell 80
 When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
 In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
 Was ever book containing such vile matter
 So fairly bound? O! that deceit should dwell
 In such a gorgeous palace.

Nurse. There's no trust, 85
 No faith, no honesty in men; all naught,
 All perjur'd, all dissemblers, all forsworn.
 Ah! where's my man? give me some aqua
vitæ: 88
 These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!
Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue
 For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
 Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit; 92
 For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
 Sole monarch of the universal earth.
 O! what a beast was I to chide at him.

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin? 96
Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah! poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
 thy name,
 When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?
 But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin? 100
 That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
 Your tributary drops belong to woe,
 Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy. 104
 My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
 And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:

All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
 Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's
 death, 108
 That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
 But O! it presses to my memory,
 Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
 'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished!' 112
 That 'banished,' that one word 'banished,' Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's
 death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
 Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship, 116
 And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
 Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,'

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, 119
 Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
 But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
 'Romeo is banished!' to speak that word
 Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
 All slain, all dead: 'Romeo is banished!' 124
 There is no end, no limit, measure, bound
 In that word's death; no words can that woe
 sound.—

Where is my father and my mother, nurse?
Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corpse: 128

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent,
 When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
 Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd, 132

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd:
 He made you for a highway to my bed,
 But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
 Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed; 136

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber; I'll find
 Romeo

To comfort you: I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here to-night: 140
 I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O! find him; give this ring to my true
 knight,
 And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S
 Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth,
 thou fearful man:
 Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
 And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom? 4
 What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
 That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar
 Is my dear son with such sour company:
 I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom. 8

Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Hal banishment! be merciful, say
'death;' 12

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say 'banish-
ment.'

Fri. L. Hence from Verona art thou banished.
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide. 16

Rom. There is no world without Verona
walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death; then 'banished,' 20
Is death mis-term'd. Calling death 'banished,'
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind
prince, 25

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banish-
ment:

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not. 28
Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is
here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her; 32
But Romeo may not: more validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's lips, 36

And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly: 40
They are free men, but I am banished.

And sayst thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground
knife,

No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, 44
But 'banished' to kill me? 'Banished!'
O friar! the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor, 48
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word 'banished?'

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O! thou wilt speak again of banish-
ment. 52

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that
word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet 'banished!' Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet, 57

Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no more.

Fri. L. O! then I see that madmen have no
ears. 60

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 64
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,

Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now, 68
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

[Knocking within.]

Fri. L. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick
groans,

Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes. 72
[Knocking.]

Fri. L. Hark! how they knock. Who's there? Romeo arise;

Thou wilt be taken. Stay awhile! Stand up;
[Knocking.]

Run to my study. By and by! God's will!
What wilfulness is this! I come, I come! 76
[Knocking.]

Who knocks so hard? whence come you?
what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand:

I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. L. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord? where's Romeo? 81

Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O! he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. L. O woeful sympathy! 84
Piteous predicament! Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubber-
ing.

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;

Why should you fall into so deep an O? 89
Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir! Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with
her? 92

Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says 96

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O! she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries, 100
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman. O! tell me, friar, tell
me, 104

In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.

Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman in a seeming man;
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both! 112
Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives, 116
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do
meet

In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst
lose. 120

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit,

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy
wit. 124

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man;
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish; 128

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Misshapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
To set a-fire by thine own ignorance, 132
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

What! rouse thee, man; thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy
too: 137

The law that threaten'd death becomes thy
friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings light upon thy back; 140

Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable. 144

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua; 148

Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation. 153
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto: 156
Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord! I could have stay'd here all the night

To hear good counsel: O! what learning is.
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come. 160

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,
sir.

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
[Exit.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by
this! 164

Fri. L. Go hence; good-night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man, 168
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here.
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good-
night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee: 173
Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—*The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S
House.*

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily, That we have had no time to move our
daughter:

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I: well, we were born to die. 4

'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,

I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woe. 8

Madam, good-night: commend me to your daughter.

Lady Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;

To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender 12

Of my child's love: I think she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it not.

Wife go you to her ere you go to bed;

Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love; 16

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon;

O' Thursday let it be: o' Thursday, tell her, 20

She shall be married to this noble earl.

Will you be ready? do you like this haste?

We'll keep no great ado; a friend or two;

For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, 24

It may be thought we held him carelessly,

Being our kinsman, if we revel much.

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? 28

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone: o' Thursday be it then.

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,

Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day. 32

Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!

Afore me! it is so very very late,

That we may call it early by and by.

Good-night. [Exeunt. 36

SCENE V.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,

That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;

Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree: 4

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,

No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east: 8

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day

Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain tops:

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not daylight, I know it, I:

It is some meteor that the sun exhales, 13

To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,

And light thee on thy way to Mantua:

Therefore stay yet; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death; 17

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I'll say yon grey is not the morning's eye,

'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow; 20

Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat

The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:

I have more care to stay than will to go:

Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so. 24

How is 't, my soul? let's talk; it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is; hie hence, be gone, away!

It is the lark that sings so out of tune,

Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

Some say the lark makes sweet division; 29

This doth not so, for she divideth us:

Some say the lark and loathed toad change eyes;

O! now I would they had chang'd voices too, 32

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,

Hunting thence hence with hunts-up to the day.

O! now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes. 36

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse!

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber: 39

The day is broke; be wary, look about. [Exit.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [Descends. 43

Jul. Art thou gone so? my lord, my love, my friend!

I must hear from thee every day in the hour, 44

For in a minute there are many days:

O! by this count I shall be many in years

Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! 48

I will omit no opportunity

That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O! think'st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve 52

For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul:

Methinks I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb: 56

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit.

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle: 60

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back. 64

Lady Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you
up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady
mother?

Is she not down so late, or up so early?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!

Jul. Madam, I am not well. 69

Lady Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What! wilt thou wash him from his grave with
tears?

And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him
live; 72

Therefore, have done: some grief shows much of love;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

Lady Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend 76

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

Lady Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

Lady Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. [Aside.] Villain and he be many miles
asunder. 82

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;

And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

Lady Cap. That is because the traitor mur-derer lives. 85

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

Would none but I might venge my cousin's
death!

Lady Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not: 88

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,
Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram

That he shall soon keep Tybalt company: 92

And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied

With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd: 96

Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,

That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet. O! how my heart abhors

To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt

Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him.

Lady Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man. 104

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy
time:

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?

Lady Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child; 108

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy

That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

Lady Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn 113

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The County Paris, at Saint Peter's church,

Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride. 116

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter
too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.

I wonder at this haste; that I must wed

Ere he that should be husband comes to woo.

I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam, 121

I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,

It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,

Rather than Paris. These are news indeed! 124

Lady Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;

But for the sunset of my brother's son 128
It rains downright.

How now! a conduit, girl? what! still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body

Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind; 132
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,

Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;

Who, raging with thy tears, and they with
them, 136

Without a sudden calm, will overset

Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!

Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

Lady Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks. 140

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?

Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd, Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought 145 So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:

Proud can I never be of what I hate; 148 But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this?

'Proud,' and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you not;'

And yet 'not proud;' mistress minion, you, 152 Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next, To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church, Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. 156 Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!

You tallow face!

Lady Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees, Hear me with patience but to speak a word. 160

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what, get thee to church o' Thursday, Or never after look me in the face.

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; 164 My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd

That God had lent us but this only child; But now I see this one is one too much, And that we have a curse in having her. 168 Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue, 71

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go. Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O! God ye good den.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool;

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl;

For here we need it not.

Lady Cap. You are too hot. 176

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad.

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play, Alone, in company, still my care hath been To have her match'd; and having now provided A gentleman of noble parentage, 181 Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts, Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man; 184

And then to have a wretched puling fool, A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender, To answer 'I'll not wed,' 'I cannot love,' 'I am too young,' 'I pray you, pardon me;' 188 But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you: Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest. Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise. 192 An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend; An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee, Nor what is mine shall never do thee good. 196 Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds, That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O! sweet my mother, cast me not away: 200 Delay this marriage for a month, a week; Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word. 204

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.

Jul. O God! O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven; How shall that faith return again to earth, 208 Unless that husband send it me from heaven By leaving earth? comfort me, counsel me. Alack, alack! that heaven should practise strata-gems

Upon so soft a subject as myself! 212 What sayst thou? hast thou not a word of joy? Some comfort, nurse?

Nurse. Faith, here it is. Romeo Is banished; and all the world to nothing That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you; Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth. 217 Then, since the case so stands as now it doth, I think it best you married with the county.

O! he's a lovely gentleman; 220 Romeo's a disbelout to him: an eagle, madam, Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart, I think you are happy in this second match, 224 For it excels your first: or if it did not, Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were, As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul too; 228 Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse.What!Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.*Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession and to be absolv'd.* 233*Nurse.* Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. [Exit.]Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn, 236
*Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times? Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy:* 241
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Verona. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS.Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind: 4*Uneven is the course, I like it not.Par.* Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,*And therefore have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.* 8*Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway,
And in his wisdom hastes our marriageTo stop the inundation of her tears;* 12*Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society.Now do you know the reason of this haste.Fri. L. [Aside.]* I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. 16*Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.Enter JULIET.Par.* Happily met, my lady and my wife!Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next. 20*Jul.* What must be shall be.Fri. L. That's a certain text.Par. Come you to make confession to this father?Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.Jul. I will confess to you that I love him. 25*Par.* So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your back, than to your face. 28*Par.* Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;For it was bad enough before their spite.Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report. 32*Jul.* That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own. 36
Are you at leisure, holy father, now;Or shall I come to you at evening mass?Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now:My lord, we must entreat the time alone. 40*Par.* God shield, I should disturb devotion!
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.]Jul. O! shut the door! and when thou hast done so, 44*Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past help!Fri. L.* Ah! Juliet, I already know thy grief;
It strains me past the compass of my wits:*I hear thou must, and nothing may proroque it,
On Thursday next be married to this county.* 49*Jul.* Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,*Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,* 52*Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd, 56
Shall be the label to another deed,Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both.Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, 60
Give me some present counsel; or behold,'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire, arbitrating thatWhich the commission of thy years and art 64
Could to no issue of true honour bring.Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.Fri. L.* Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope, 68*Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself, 72*

Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from it;
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy. 76

Jul. O! bid me leap, rather than marry
Paris,

From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears; 80

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
bones,

With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave 84
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love. 88

Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow:
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed, 93

And this distilled liquor drink thou off;
When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, for no pulse 96

Shall keep his native progress, but surcease;
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fall
To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall, 100

Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death;
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours, 105
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.

Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then—as the manner of our country is— 109
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier, Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault

Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. 112
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night 116
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.

And this shall free thee from this present shame;
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it. 120

Jul. Give me, give me! O! tell me not of fear!

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord. 124

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father! [Exit.

SCENE II.—*The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S
House.*

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and Servingmen.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.
[Exit Servant.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

Sec. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers. 4

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

Sec. Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me. 8

Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit Second Servant.
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

What! is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?
Nurse. Ay, forsooth. 12

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look. 16

Enter JULIET.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition
To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd 20
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of
this: 24

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.
Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
cell;

And gave him what became love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. 28

Cap. Why, I'm glad on't; this is well: stand
up:

This is as 't should be. Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.
Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar, 32
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? 36
Lady Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her. We'll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt JULIET and Nurse.]

Lady Cap. We shall be short in our provision:

'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, 40
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife:

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone;
I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!
They are all forth: well, I will walk myself 45
To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. 48
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best; but, gentle nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state, 4
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What! are you busy, ho? need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow: 8
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
For, I am sure, you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good-night: 12
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life: 16
I'll call them back again to comfort me:
Nurse! What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.
Come, vial. 20

What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no; this shall forbid it: lie thou there.

[Laying down a dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar 24
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd
Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, 28
For he hath still been tried a holy man.
I will not entertain so bad a thought.

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo 32
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifed in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes? 37
Or, if I live, is it not very like,

The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, 40
Where, for these many hundred years, the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they 44
say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort:
Alack, alack! is it not like that I,
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the 48
earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad:
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,

Environed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forefathers' joints, 52
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?

O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost 56
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She falls upon her bed within the curtains.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock: 4

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go;
Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching. 8

Cap. No, not a whit; what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Serving-men, with spits, logs, and baskets.

Now, fellow, 13

What's there?

First Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [*Exit first
Serving-man.*] Sirrah, fetch drier logs: 16

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

Sec. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whore-son, ha! 20

Thou shalt be logger-head. Good faith! 'tis
day:

The county will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would. [Music within.] I hear him near.

Nurse! Wife! what, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up; 25
I'll go and chat with Paris. Hie, make haste,

Make haste; the bridegroom he is come
already:

Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast,
I warrant her, she:

Why, lamb! why, lady! fie, you slug-a-bed!

Why, love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride!

What! not a word? you take your pennyworths
now: 4

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The County Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little. God forgive
me,

Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep! 8

I needs must wake her. Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;

He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be?

What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again! 12

I must needs wake you. Lady! lady! lady!

Alas! alas! Help! help! my lady's dead!

O! well-a-day, that ever I was born.

Some aqua-vitæ, ho! My lord! my lady! 16

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

Lady Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

Lady Cap. O me, O me! my child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! 20

Help, help! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead;
alack the day!

Lady Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead! she's dead! 24

Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's
cold;

Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:

Death lies on her like an untimely frost 28

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse. O lamentable day!

Lady Cap. O woeful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak. 32

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.

O son! the night before thy wedding-day Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies, 36

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;

My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,

And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's! 40

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

Lady Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw 44
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight! 48

Nurse. O woel O woeful, woeful, woeful
day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! 52
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorc'd, wronged, spited, slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd, 56
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!
O love! O love! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now 60
To murder, murder our solemnity?
O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
Dead art thou! dead! alack, my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried! 64

Fri. L. Peace, hol for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid: 68
Your part in her you could not keep from
death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd 73
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O! in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well: 76
She's not well married that lives married
long;

But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is, 80
In all her best array bear her to church;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival, 84
Turn from their office to black funeral;
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change, 88
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go with
him;

And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare 92

To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do lower upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high will.
[Exeunt CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, PARIS, and Friar.

First Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone. 97

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up, for, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit.
First Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended. 101

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians! O! musicians, 'Heart's ease,
Heart's ease:' O! an ye will have me live, play
'Heart's ease.' 104

First Mus. Why 'Heart's ease?'

Pet. O! musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe;' O! play me some merry dump, to comfort me. 108

Sec. Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Musicians. No. 112

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

First Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith! but the glee;
I will give you the minstrel. 116

First Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate, I will carry no crotchets:
I'll re you, I'll fa you. Do you note me? 121

First Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

Sec. Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit. 125

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men: 128

When griping grief the heart doth wound,

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,

Then music with her silver sound—

Why 'silver sound?' why 'music with her silver sound?' What say you, Simon Catling? 133

First Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

Sec. Mus. I say 'silver sound,' because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost? 140

Third Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O! I cry you mercy; you are the singer;

I will say for you. It is, 'music with her silver sound,' because musicians have no gold for sounding: 145

Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit.

First Mus. What a pestilent knave is this samel 149

Sec. Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of
sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit 4
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful
thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead;—
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think,—

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips, 8
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, bootied.

News from Verona! How now, Balthasar? 12
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill if she be well. 16

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, 20
And presently took post to tell it you.
O! pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and
paper, 25

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import 28
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone, 32
And hire those horses: I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHASAR.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means: O mischief! thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men. 36
I do remember an apothecary,
And hereabouts he dwells, which late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, 40
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves 44
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show. 48
Noting this penury, to myself I said
An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a catiff wretch would sell it him. 52
O! this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. 56
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats; let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear 60
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir'd 64
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's
law

Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretched-
ness, 68

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back;
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich; 73
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. 76
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls, 80

Doing more murders in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh. 84
Come, cordial and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Verona. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, hol

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo?

Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter. 4

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,

Here in this city visiting the sick,

And finding him, the searchers of the town, 8

Suspecting that we both were in a house

Where the infectious pestilence did reign,

Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;

So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd. 12

Fri. L. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it, here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,

So fearful were they of infection. 16

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,

The letter was not nice, but full of charge

Of dear import; and the neglecting it

May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;

Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight 21

Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

[Exit.]

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument
alone;

Within these three hours will fair Juliet wake: 24

She will beshrew me much that Romeo

Hath had no notice of these accidents;

But I will write again to Mantua,

And keep her at my cell till Romeo come: 28

Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Churchyard; in it a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof;

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.

Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,

Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground: 4

So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm with digging up of graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee; go. 9

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone

Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew, 12

O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones;

Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,

Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans: 16

The obsequies that I for thee will keep

Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.

[The Page whistles.]

The boy gives warning something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,

To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? 20

What! with a torch?—muffle me, night, awhile.

[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning

See thou deliver it to my lord and father. 24

Give me the light: upon thy life I charge thee,

Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,

And do not interrupt me in my course.

Why I descend into this bed of death, 28

Is partly, to behold my lady's face;

But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger

A precious ring, a ring that I must use

In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:

But, if thou, jealous, dost return to pry 33

In what I further shall intend to do,

By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,

And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs. 36

The time and my intents are savage-wild,

More fierce and more inexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble
you. 40

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.

Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good
fellow.

Bal. [Aside.] For all this same, I'll hide me here about:

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. 44

[Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Opens the tomb.]

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,

That murder'd my love's cousin, with which grief

It is supposed the fair creature died;

And here is come to do some villainous shame

To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.—

[Comes forward.]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague,

Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:

Obeys, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;
Fly hence and leave me: think upon these gone;

Let them aflight thee. I beseech thee, youth,

Put not another sin upon my head

By urging me to fury: O! be gone:

By heaven, I love thee better than myself.

For I come hither arm'd against myself:

Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say

A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,

And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy!

[They fight.]

Page. O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.

[Exit.]

Par. [Falls.] O, I am slain!—If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet.

[Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face:

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!

What said my man when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think

He told me Paris should have married Juliet:

Said he not so? or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,

To think it was so? O! give me thy hand,

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book:

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave;

A grave? O, no! a lanthorn, slaughter'd youth,

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd,

[Laying PARIS in the tomb.]

How oft when men are at the point of death

Have they been merry! which their keepers call

A lightning before death: O! how may I

Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife!

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:

Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet

Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,

And death's pale flag is not advanced there.

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?

O! what more favour can I do to thee,

Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain

To sunder his that was thine enemy?

Forgive me, cousin! Ah! dear Juliet,

Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe

That unsubstantial Death is amorous,

And that the lean abhorred monster keeps

Thee here in dark to be his paramour?

For fear of that I still will stay with thee,

And never from this palace of dim night

Depart again: here, here will I remain

With worms that are thy chambermaids; O! here

Will I set up my everlasting rest,

And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars

From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death!

Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on

The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!

Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, FRIAR LAURENCE, with a lanthorn, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night

Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's there?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,

What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern, It burneth in the Capel's monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,

One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir.

My master knows not but I am gone hence; 132
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay then, I'll go alone. Fear comes upon me;

O! much I fear some ill unlucky thing. 136

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. [Advances.] Romeo!
Alack, alack! what blood is this which stains 140
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the tomb.
Romeo! O, pale! Who else? what! Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah! what an unkind
hour 145
Is guilty of this lamentable chance.
The lady stirs. [JULIET wakes.
Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be, 149
And there I am. Where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.
Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep: 152
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away.
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee 156
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare
no longer stay.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.
[Exit FRIAR LAURENCE.
What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand? 161
Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end.
O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop
To help me when I will kiss thy lips; 164
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.
Thy lips are warm!

First Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy: which way?
Jul. Yea, noise? then I'll be brief. O happy dagger! [Snatching ROMEO's dagger.
This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] there rest, and let me die. 170

[Falls on ROMEO's body and dies.
Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS.
Page. This is the place; there where the torch doth burn.
First Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard. 172

Go, some of you; whoe'er you find, attach.
[Exeunt some of the Watch.

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried. 176
Go, tell the prince, run to the Capulets,
Raise up the Montagues, some others search:
[Exeunt others of the Watch.

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry. 181

Re-enter some of the Watch, with BAL-THASAR.

Sec. Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

First Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Re-enter other of the Watch, with FRIAR LAURENCE.

Third Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps; 184
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

First Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too. 187

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.
Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and Others.
Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

Lady Cap. The people in the street cry
Romeo,
Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run 192
With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County
Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, 196
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;
With instruments upon them, fit to open 200
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heaven!—O wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en!—for, lo, his house
Is empty on the back of Montague— 204
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

Lady Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague: for thou art early up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas! my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.
What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.
Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,

To press before thy father to a grave?
Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,

Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: meantime forbear,

And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:
I married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.
You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To County Paris: then comes she to me,

And, with wild looks bid me devise some mean
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her,—so tutor'd by my art,—
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire
night,

To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight
Return'd my letter back. Then, all alone,

At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But, when I came,—some minute ere the time

Of her awakening,—here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience;
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,

But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;

And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father,
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.
Where is the county's page that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave,

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did;
Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;
And by and by my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
Where be these enemies?—Capulet! Montague!
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love;

And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague! give me thy
hand: 296

This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more;
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That while Verona by that name is known. 300
There shall no figure at such rate be set

As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity! 304

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things:

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe 309

Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

SCENE.—Athens, and the neighbouring Woods.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known;

But what particular rarity? what strange, 4

Which manifold record not matches? See,

Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power

Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller. 8

Mer. Ol 'tis a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were,

To an untirable and continue goodness:

He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here— 12

Mer. Ol pray, let's see 't: for the Lord
 Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile.

*It stains the glory in that happy verse 16
 Which aptly sings the good.*

Mer. [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good form.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.
 Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes 21

From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire i' the flint
 Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current flies 24
 Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.
 Let's see your piece. 28

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace
 Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination 33 Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life. 36
 Here is a touch; is 't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the stage.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd! 40

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man, 44
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment: my free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice 48
Infects one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you. 52
You see how all conditions, how all minds—

As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality—tender down
Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, 57
Subdues and properties to his love and tend-
ance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better 60
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill 64

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o' the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere

To propagate their states: amongst them all, 68
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to
her;

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants 72

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount 76
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.

All those which were his fellows but of late,

Some better than his value, on the moment 80
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these? 84

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late below'd, all his dependants
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down, 88

Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:

A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's 92

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

*Trumpets sound. Enter LORD TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him;
LUCILIUS and other servants following.*

Tim.

Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt, 96

His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which, failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim.

Noble Ventidius! Well; 100

I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know
him

A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt and free
him. 104

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him. I will send his ransom;

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, 108

But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour. [Exit.]

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim.

Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him? 113

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here or no? Lucilius!

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service. 116

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd 120
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin
else,

On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride, 124
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort; 128
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself;
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him? 132

Old Ath. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To LUCILIUS.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing, 137

I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband? 141

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me
long:

To build his fortune I will strain a little, 144
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter;
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. 148

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never may

That state or fortune fall into my keeping
Which is not ow'd to you! 152

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and Old Athenian.]

Pocl. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:

Go not away. What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech 156

Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are 160
Even such as they give out. I like your work;
And you shall find I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me
your hand; 164

We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel
Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd, 168
It would unclew me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give: but you well
know,

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear
lord, 172

You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,

Which all men speak with him. 176

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be child?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good
morrow; 180

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves
honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes. 184

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus?

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name. 188

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going? 192

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law. 197

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence. 200

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You're a dog. 204

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Will dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords. 208

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension. 212

Apem. So thou apprehendest it, take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus? 216

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet! 221

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one? 224

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes. 228

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feigned; he is so. 231

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord! 235

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart. 238

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore? 241

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord. Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus. 244

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee! 249

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, All of companionship. 252

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us. [Exeunt some Attendants.]

You must needs dine with me. Go not you hence Till I have thanked you; when dinner's done, Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so, there! 257

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!

That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out 260

Into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir!

Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time 264 In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all except APEMANTUS.]

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

First Lord. That time serves still. 268

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.

Sec. Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools. 272

Sec. Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

Sec. Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none. 277

First Lord. Hang thyself!

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend. 280

Sec. Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog! or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of an ass. [Exit.]

First Lord. He's opposite to humanity.

Come, shall we in, 285

And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness.

Sec. Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold, 288

Is but his steward: no meed but he repays

Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding 291

All use of quittance.

First Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man.

Sec. Lord. Long may he live in fortunes!
Shall we in? 295

First Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

*Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and Others attending:
then enter LORD TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lords, and Senators, VENTIDIUS and Attendants.
Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS discontentedly, like himself.*

Ven. Most honour'd Timon,
It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's age,

And call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich: 4

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound

To your free heart, I do return those talents,

Doubled with thanks and service, from whose
help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O! by no means, 8

Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love;

I gave it freely ever; and there's none

Can truly say he gives, if he receives:

If our betters play at that game, we must not dare 12

To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.]

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,

Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown; 17

But where there is true friendship, there needs
none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes

Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.]

First Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it. 21

Apem. Ho, ho! confess'd it; hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O! Apemantus, you are welcome.

Apem. No, 24

You shall not make me welcome:

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie! thou'rt a churl; ye've got a humour there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.

They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est; 28

But yond man is ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself,

For he does neither affect company,

Nor is he fit for it, indeed. 32

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on 't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou'rt an Athenian, therefore, welcome. I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make thee silent. 38

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should

Ne'er flatter thee. O you gods! what a number

Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not. 41

It grieves me to see so many dip their meat

In one man's blood; and all the madness is,

He cheers them up too. 44

I wonder men dare trust themselves with
men:

Methinks they should invite them without knives;

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for 't; the fellow that 48

Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,

Is the readiest man to kill him: 't has been prov'd.

If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals; 52

Lest they should spy my wind-pipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, 60

Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire:

This and my food are equals, there's no
odds:

Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf; 64

I pray for no man but myself:

Grant I may never prove so fond,

To trust man on his oath or bond;

Or a harlot for her weeping; 68

Or a dog that seems a-sleeping;

Or a keeper with my freedom;

Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to 't; 72

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now. 76

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my
lord. 32

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends. 80

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em and bid me to 'em. 86

First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. 91

Tim. O! no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O! what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes. O joy! e'en made away ere it can be born. Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weapest to make them drink, Timon. 116

Sec. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,

And, at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much. 120

Apem. Much! [Tucket sounded.

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance. 124

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures. 128

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon; and to all

That of his bounties taste! The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely 132

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. Th' ear, Taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise; They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance: 136

Music, make their welcome! [Exit CUPID.

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're belov'd.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way:

They dancel they are mad women. 140

Like madness is the glory of this life, As this pomp shows to a little oil and root.

We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves; And spend our flatteries to drink those men 144

Upon whose age we void it up again, With poisonous spite and envy.

Who lives that's not depraved or depraves?

Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves 148

Of their friend's gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me: it has been done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 152

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and to show their loves each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind;

You have added worth unto 't and lustre, 156 And entertain'd me with mine own device;

I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. 161

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord. 164

[Exit CUPID and Ladies.]

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord!

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More jewels yet!
There is no crossing him in 's humour; 168
Else I should tell him well, i' faith, I should,
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

[Exit.]

First Lord. Where be our men? 173

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS with the Casket.

Tim. O, my friends! I have one word to say to you; 176

Look you, my good lord,
I must entreat you, honour me so much
As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it,
Kind my lord. 180

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate

Newly alighted, and come to visit you. 184

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour,
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near! why then another time I'll hear
thee.

I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment. 188

Flav. [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, Lord
Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver. 192

Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents

Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?

Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds. 198

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great
gifts, 201

And all out of an empty coffer:

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is, 204
Being of no power to make his wishes good.

His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes
For every word: he is so kind that he now 208 Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.

Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were forc'd out!

Happier he that has no friend to feed 212
Than such as do e'en enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love. 216

Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks
I will receive it.

Third Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty.

Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser 220
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

Third Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect: 224
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O! none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give; 228

Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defil'd land, my lord.

First Lord. We are so virtuously bound,— Tim. And so

Am I to you.

Sec. Lord. So infinitely endear'd,— 236

Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights!

First Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord
Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES, Lords, &c.]
Apem. What a coil's here!

Serving of becks and jutting out of bums! 240
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curtsies. 244

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing; for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories? 252

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.]

Apem. So: 256
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not
then;

I'll lock thy heaven from thee.

O! that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—*Athens. A Room in a Senator's
House.*

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum,
Which makes it five-and-twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste! It cannot hold; it will not. 4
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold;
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon, 8
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses. No porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason 12
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?
Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon;

Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd 16
With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when—
'Commend me to your master'—and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus;—but tell him,
My uses cry to me; I must serve my turn 20

Out of mine own; his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love and honour him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger;
Immediate are my needs, and my relief 25
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone:
Put on a most importunate aspect, 28
A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone. 32

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. 'I go, sir!' Take the bonds along with
you,
And have the dates in compt.

Caph. I will, sir.

Sen. Go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—*The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S
House.*

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,

That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account
How things go from him, nor resumes no care 4
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting. 8

Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What!
You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it. 12

Caph. Here comes the lord!

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth
again,

My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord. 17

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month: 20

My master is awak'd by great occasion
To call upon his own; and humbly prays you
That with your other noble parts you'll suit
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend, 24
I prithee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good
lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment. 28

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks

And past.

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my
lord; 32

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.]

[To FLAVIUS.] Come hither: pray you, 36
How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd
With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen, 40
The time is unagreeable to this business:
Your importunacy cease till after dinner,
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends. 44
See them well entertained. [Exit.]

Flav. Pray, draw near. [Exit.]

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay; here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us. 48

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee. 52

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool.]
Come away.

Isid. Serv. [To VAR. SERV.] There's the fool hangs on your back already. 56

Apem. No, thou stand'st single; thou'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want! 61

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why? 64

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress? 69

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth! 72

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain!
what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably. 80

Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read? 84

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd. 89

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. [Exit Page.]

Apem. E'en so thou outrunn'st grace.—
Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers? 97

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I, as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. 100

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool.
When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this? 108

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed. 112

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than 's artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in. 121

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest. 125

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon. 129

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother and woman; sometime the philosopher.

[Exeunt APEMANTUS and Fool.]

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon. [Exeunt Servants.]

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore, ere this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense 136 As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me, At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to: Perchance some single vantages you took, When my indisposition put you back; 140 And that unaptness made your minister, Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord! At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you; you would throw them off, 144

And say you found them in mine honesty. When for some trifling present you have bid me Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept;

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you 148

To hold your hand more close: I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, 152 Though you hear now, too late, yet now's a time,

The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone; 156

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth Of present dues; the future comes apace:

What shall defend the interim? and at length How goes our reckoning? 160

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord! the world is but a world;

Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true. 164

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,

Call me before the exactest auditors, And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me, When all our offices have been oppress'd 168 With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept With drunken spilth of wine, when every room Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrels,

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock, 172 And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.

Flav. Heavens! have I said, the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants

This night englutted! Who is not Timon's? 176 What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon! Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise, 179

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made: Feast-won, fast-lost; onecloud of winter showers, These flies are cough'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further; No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart; Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. 184 Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart; If I would broach the vessels of my love, And try the argument of hearts by borrowing, Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use 189 As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings; for by these 192 Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends. Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord! my lord! 196

Tim. I will dispatch you severally: you, to Lord Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord. 204

Flav. [Aside.] Lord Lucius, and Lucullus? hum!

Tim. [To another Servant.] Go you, sir, to the senators,—

Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing,—bid 'em send o' the instant 208

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,—
For that I knew it the most general way,—
To them to use your signet and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be? 213

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry; you are honourable; 216

But yet they could have wish'd; they know not;
Something hath been amiss; a noble nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity;

And so, intending other serious matters, 220
After distasteful looks and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!
Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary; 225
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;
And nature, as it grows again toward earth, 228
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.

[To a Servant.] Go to Ventidius.—[*To FLA-
VIUS.*] Prithee, be not sad,
Thou art true and honest; ingenuously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee.—[To Servant.] Ven-tidius lately 232

Buried his father; by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate; when he was poor,
Imprison'd and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents; greet him from
me; 236

Bid him suppose some good necessity
Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd

With those five talents. [Exit Servant.] [To FLAVIUS.] That had, give't these fellows
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe; 242
Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—*Athens. A Room in LUCULLUS'
House.*

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord. 4

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men! a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver bason and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectfully welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.]
And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master? 12

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well,
sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius? 16

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir;
which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein. 22

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas! good lord; a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on 't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I ha' told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from it. 32

Re-enter Servant with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure. 36

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well:
good parts in thee. [To the Servant.]—Get you gone, sirrah.—[Exit Servant.] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's 'three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well. 49

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ,

And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness,

To him that worships thee. 52

[Throwing the money away.]

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation, 56

Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!

Has friendship such a faint and milky heart

It turns in less than two nights? O you gods!

I feel my master's passion. This slave unto his honour 60

Has my lord's meat in him:

Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment

When he is turn'd to poison?

O! may diseases only work upon 't, 64

And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature

Which my lord paid for, be of any power

To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him. 8

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How! 16

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. 26

Enter SERVILIUS.

Servil. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. [To LUCIUS.]
My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. 32

Servil. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now? 38

Servil. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents. 41

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. 44

If his occasion were not virtuous,

I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Servil. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir. 48

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do; the more beast, I say; I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him? 66

Servil. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius
[Exit SERVILIUS.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit.]

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Sec. Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece 72

Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him

His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,

And kept his credit with his purse, 76
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, O! see the monstrousness of man, 80
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape,
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part, 84
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, 88
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to
him, 92

So much I love his heart. But, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in SEMPRONIUS'S House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in 't. Hum!
'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these 4
Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for
They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied him?
Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? 8
And does he send to me? Three? hum!
It shows but little love or judgment in him:
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrice give him over; must I take the cure
upon me? 12

He has much disgrac'd me in 't; I'm angry at
him,
That might have known my place. I see no sense for 't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man 16
That e'er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No:
So it may prove an argument of laughter 20
To the rest, and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now
return, 24

And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.]

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't:
and I cannot think but in the end the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:
Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are
fled 36

Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead, Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master: 40

And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—*The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S
House.*

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

First Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow,
Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius!

What! do we meet together!

Luc. Ser. Ay, and I think
One business does command us all; for mine 4
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine. 8

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on 't; he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:

You must consider that a prodigal course
Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness:

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns; what's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equall'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent.

[Exit FLAMINIUS.]

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

Sec. Var. Serv. By your leave, sir.

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough.

Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills,

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?

Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts,
And take down the interest into their gluttonous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly:

Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you;

For you serve knaves.

[Exit.]

First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

Sec. Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Servil. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from 't; for, take 't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.

Servil. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help! my lord! my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now,

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? and yours?

First Var. Serv. My lord,—

Sec. Var. Serv. My lord,— 100

Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.]

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a mad-man owes 'em. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors? devils!

Flav. My dear lord,— 108

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord. 112

Tim. So fitly! Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all: I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord!

You only speak from your distracted soul; 116
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. Be 't not in thy care: go.
I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. [Exeunt]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate House.

The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's

Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die;
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate! 5

First Sen. Now, captain.

Alcib. I am a humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law, 8
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past death
To those that without heed do plunge into 't. 13
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues;

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice,— 16
An honour in him which buys out his fault,—

But, with a noble fury and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe; 20

And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair: 25
Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour; which indeed 28

Is valour misbegot, and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born.

He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs 32

His outsides, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill, 36

What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord,—

First Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;

To revenge is no valour, but to bear. 40

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
me,

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats? sleep upon 't, 44

And let the foes quietly cut their throats

Without repugnancy? If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Abroad? why then, women are more valiant 48

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,

And the ass more captain than the lion, the felon

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,

If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords! 52

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;

But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. 56

To be in anger is impiety;

But who is man that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

Sec. Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain! his service done 60

At Lacedæmon and Byzantium

Were a sufficient bribe for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair service, 64

And slain in fight many of your enemies.

How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!

Sec. Sen. He has made too much plenty with
'em; 68

He's a sworn rioter; he has a sin that often
Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner;
If there were no foes, that were enough
To overcome him; in that beastly fury 72
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions; 'tis infer'd to us,
His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

First Sen. He dies. 76

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him,— Though his right arm might purchase his own
time,

And be in debt to none,—yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both; 81
And, for I know your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns. 84
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive 't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

First Sen. We are for law; he dies: urge it
no more, 88
On height of our displeasure. Friend, or brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.
Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My
lords,

I do beseech you, know me. 92
Sec. Sen. How!

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.

Third Sen. What!

Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot
me;

It could not else be I should prove so base, 96
To sue, and be denied such common grace.
My wounds ache at you.

First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me! 100
Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

First Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit, 104
He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt Senators.]

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough; that you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their
foes, 108

While they have told their money and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself
Rich only in large hurts: all those for this?
Is this the balsam that the usuring senate 112
Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up 116
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.
[Exit.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

*Music. Tables set out: Servants attending.
Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.*

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day. 3

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting. 9

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear. 14

Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go. 20

Sec. Lord. Everyman here's so. What would he have borrowed you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces! 24

First Lord. What of you?

Third Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both;
and how fare you? 29

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. 33

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile,

if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently. 39

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O! sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,— 44

Tim. Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that when your lordship this other day sent to me I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir. 49

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in.] Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you. 56

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it? 61

First Lord. } Alcibiades banished!

Sec. Lord. } Alcibiades banished!

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How? how? 64

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward. 68

Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

Sec. Lord. It does; but time will—and so—

Third Lord. I do conceive. 72

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.— 78

You great benefactors sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap. 96

[The dishes uncovered are full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold, You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water 100

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing the water in their faces.]

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long, 104 Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites, Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears, You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies, Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man and beast the infinite malady 109 Crust you quite o'er! What! dost thou go?

Soft! take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou;—

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none. 112 [Throws the dishes at them.]

What! all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.

Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, &c.

First Lord. How now, my lords! 117

Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?

Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap? 120

Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown.

First Lord. He's but a mad iord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat: did you see my jewel? 125

Third Lord. Did you see my cap?

Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.

Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown. 128

First Lord. Let's make no stay.

Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

Third Lord. I feel 't upon my bones.

Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth.

And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!

Obedience fail in children! slaves and fools, 4
Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
And minister in their steads! To general filths
Convert, o' the instant, green virginity!

Do't in your parents' eyes! Bankrupts, hold fast; 8

Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! Bound servants, steal!—

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,—
And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed; 12

Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen,
Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,
With it beat out his brains! Piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, 16

Domestic awe, night-rest and neighbourhood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs and laws,

Decline to your confounding contraries, 20
And let confusion live! Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious fevers heap

On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! Lust and liberty
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,

That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains, 28
Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath,
That their society, as their friendship, may
Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee
But nakedness, thou detestable town! 33

Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!
Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
The gods confound—hear me, you good gods
all— 37

The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low! 40

Amen. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, Master steward!
where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack! my fellows, what should I say
to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, 4
I am as poor as you.

First Serv. Such a house brokel
So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not

One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

Sec. Serv. As we do turn our backs 8

From our companion thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away, leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self, 12
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd
house. 16

Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,

That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow. Leak'd is our bark,
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, 20
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake 24
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and
say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
'We have seen better days.' Let each take some;
[Giving them money.]

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
more: 28

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

[They embrace, and part several ways.]
O! the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us.
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt? 32
Who would be so mock'd with glory? or so live,
But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp and all what state compounds
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends? 36
Poor honest lord! brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind agen? 40
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar
men.

My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most accurs'd,
Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord,
He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat 45
Of monstrous friends;
Nor has he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it. 48
I'll follow and inquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Woods and Cave near the Sea-shore.Enter TIMON from the Cave.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth

Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence and birth, 4
Scarce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes;

The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,

But by contempt of nature. 8
Raise me this beggar, and deny't that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the rother's sides, 12
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, 'This man's a flatterer?' if one be,
So are they all; for every grize of fortune 16
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures

But direct villany. Therefore, be abhorr'd 20
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! [Digging.]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate 24
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No, gods,
I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair, 28

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.

Ha! you gods, why this? What this, you gods?
Why, this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides,

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their head: 32

This yellow slave

Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation, 36
With senators on the bench; this is it

That makes the wappen'd widow weep again;
She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices 40

To the April day again. Come, damned earth,

Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.] Ha! a drum? thou'rt quick, 44

But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief,

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:

Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Keeping some gold.]

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak. 48

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,

That art thyself a man? 52

Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well,

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more than that

I know thee 57

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;

With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; 60

Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword

For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns 64

To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:

But then renew I could not like the moon; 68

There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon? 72

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man! 76

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots. 80
Timan. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the world
 Voic'd so regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra?
Timan. Yes.
Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee;
 Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
 Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves 85
 For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth
 To the tub-fast and the diet.
Timan. Hang thee, monster!
Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits 88
 Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
 I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
 The want whereof doth daily make revolt
 In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd
 How curs'd Athens, mindless of thy worth, 93
 Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,
 But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—
Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone. 96
Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.
Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
 I had rather be alone.
Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
 Here is some gold for thee.
Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it. 100
Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—
Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?
Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.
Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest; and 104
 Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!
Alcib. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That, by killing of villains, thou wast born to conquer
 My country.
 Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on;
 Be as a planetary plague, when Jove 109
 Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
 In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one.
 Pity not honour'd age for his white beard; 112
 He is a usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron;
 It is her habit only that is honest,

Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milkpaps, 116
 That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
 Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
 But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,
 Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy; 120
 Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
 Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
 And mince it sans remorse. Swear against objects;
 Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes, 124 Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,
 Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
 Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, 128
 Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,
 Not all thy counsel.
Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee! 132
Phr. } Give us some gold, good Timon:
Timan. } hast thou more?
Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
 And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you
 sluts,
 Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable,
 Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear
 Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues 138
 The immortal gods that hear you, spare your oaths,
 I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still;
 And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
 Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
 Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
 And be no turncoats: yet may your pains, six
 months, 144
 Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs
 With burdens of the dead; some that were hang'd,
 No matter; wear them, betray with them:
 whore still;
 Paint till a horse may mire upon your face: 148
 A pox of wrinkles!
Phr. } Well, more gold. What then?
Timan. }
 Believe't, that we'll do anything for gold.
Tim. Consumptions sow 152

In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp
shins,

And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's
voice,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quilllets shrilly: hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh, 157

And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him that, his particular to foresee, 160
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald,

And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell 164
The source of all erection. There's more gold;
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!

Phr. } More counsel with more money,
Timan. } bounteous Timon. 168

Tim. More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens!
Farewell, Timon:

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm. 173

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take

Thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!

[Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES, PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness, 177

Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou, [Digging.

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle, Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, 181

Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!
Ensear thy fertile and conception womb, 188
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and
bears;

Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward
face

Hath to the marbled mansion all above 192

Never presented! O! a root; dear thanks:

Dry up thy marrows, vines and plough-torn leas;

Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips! 197

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man! Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use
them. 200

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog

Whom I would imitate: consumption catch
thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung 204
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?

This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseases'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
By putting on the cunning of a carper. 210

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bid
welcome, 216

To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again, Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself; 221

A madman so long, now a fool. What! think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd
trees, 224

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold brook,

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste
To cure the o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures 228

Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee; 232
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.
Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a catiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?
Apem. To vex thee. 237
Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in 't?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. What! a knave too?
Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit
on 240
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before; 244
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content. 248
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog. 252
Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself 256
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself, 260
Who had the world as my confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of
men
At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves 264
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows; I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden: 268
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time Hath made thee hard in 't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, 272
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.
Apem. Art thou proud yet? 277
Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.
Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.
Tim. I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, 280
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.
Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.
Tim. First mend my company, take away
thyself. 284
Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.
Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, 289
Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Apem. Here is no use for gold.
Tim. The best and truest;
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm. 292
Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?
Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it. 296
Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew
my mind!
Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?
Tim. To sauce thy dishes.
Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.
Tim. On what I hate I feed not. 306
Apem. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now.
What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was belov'd after his means? 312
Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know belov'd?
Apem. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog. 317
Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?
Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the
men. 324
Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?
Apem. Ay, Timon. 328

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass; if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf; if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner; wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury; wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What hawk couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here; the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse!

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.

I'll beat thee, but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! Choler does kill me that thou art alive; I swoond to see thee.

Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim. Away,

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose a stone by thee.

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue! I am sick of this false world, and will love nought

But even the mere necessities upon 't.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave; 380

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,

That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

[Looking on the gold.]

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce 384

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god, 389

That soldier'st close impossibilities,

And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! 392

Think, thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue

Set them into confounding odds, that beasts

May have the world in empire.

Apem. Would 'twere so:

But not till I am dead; I'll say thou'st gold:

Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I prithee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!

[Exit APEMANTUS.]

I am quit.

More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

First Thief. Where should he have this gold?

It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

Sec. Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure.

Third Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for 't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

Sec. Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid.

First Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

Sec. Thief. 'Tis his description.

Third Thief. He; I know him.

All. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons. 420

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet hips; 425
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

First Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water, 428

As beasts, and birds, and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con
That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not 432

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves,
Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape, 435

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villainy, do, since you protest to do 't, 440
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun; 444
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement, each thing's a thief;
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power 449

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away!

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal 453
But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!
Amen. 456

Third Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery. 461

Sec. Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

First Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens; there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. [Exeunt Thieves.]

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yond despised and ruinous man my lord? 468
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made! 472
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies! 476
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me than those that do!

He hath caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, 480
Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

TIMON comes forward.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee. 484

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not: I never had an honest man about me; ay all I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, 488
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What! dost thou weep? Come nearer. Then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st 492
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts 497

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward

So true, so just, and now so comfortable? 500
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman.

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, 504
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man, mistake me not, but one;
No more, I pray, and he's a steward.
How fain would I have hated all mankind! 508

And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me, 512
Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,—
For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,—
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, 517
If not a usuring kindness and as rich men deal
gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast 520

Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late.
You should have fear'd false times when you did feast;

Suspect still comes when an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind, 525
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me, 528
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requite me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so. Thou singly honest
man, 532

Here, take: the gods out of my misery,
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from
men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none, 536
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar; give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow
'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing; be men like blasted woods, 540

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell and thrive.

Flav. O! let me stay

And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hatest Curses, pass not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free: 544

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.
[Exeunt, severally.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true that he is so full of gold? 5

Pain. Certain; Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum. 10

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else; you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation;
only, I will promise him an excellent piece. 22

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming towards him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation; performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use.
To promise is most courtly and fashionable; performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it. 33

Enter TIMON from his cave.

Tim. [Aside.] Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency. 40

Tim. [Aside.] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee. 44

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True; 48

When the day serves, before black-corner'd
night,

Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. [Aside.] I'll meet you at the turn.

What a god's gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st
the foam,

Settled admired reverence in a slave: 56
 To thee be worship; and thy saints for aye
 Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey.
 Fit I meet them. [Advancing.]

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master! 60

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,

Having often of your open bounty tasted, 63
 Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
 Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
 Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
 What! to you,

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
 To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover 69

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude

With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see 't the better: 72

You, that are honest, by being what you are,
 Make them best seen and known.

Pain. He and myself
 Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
 And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men. 76

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you
 service. 80

Tim. Ye're honest men. Ye've heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest
 men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend nor I. 84

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens: thou'rt, indeed, the best;
 Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction, 88

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and
 smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art.

But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say you have a little fault: 92

Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
 You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour

To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you indeed? 96

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,

That thoughtfully deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble, 100

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
 Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd
 That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I. 104

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you
 gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to
 me, 108

I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know them.

Tim. You that way and you this, but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 112

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art two villains shall not be,
 Come not near him. [To the Poet.] If thou would not reside

But where one villain is, then him abandon.

Hence! pack! there's gold; ye came for gold,
 ye slaves: 117

You have done work for me, there's payment:
 hence!

You are an alchemist, make gold of that.

Out, rascal dogs! 120

[Beats them out and then returns to his cave.]

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself

That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
 Is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave: 124

It is our part and promise to the Athenians

To speak with Timon.

Sec. Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer
 hand, 128

Offering the fortunes of his former days,
 The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
 And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave. 131

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!

Look out, and speak to friends. The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter TIMON, from his cave.

Tim. Thousun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd: 136

For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon. 140

Sec. Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee,
Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen. O! forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. 144

The senators with one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. Sen. They confess 148

Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross;
Which now the public body, which doth seldom
Play the recanter, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 152
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth
As shall to thee block out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it; 160

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators.

First Sen. Therefore so please thee to return
with us, 164

And of our Athens—thine and ours—to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good
name

Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild; 169
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

Sec. Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.

First Sen. Therefore, Timon,— 172

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir;
thus:—

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair
Athens, 176

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks
it, 180

In pity of our aged and our youth
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,
And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not

While you have throats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle in the unruly camp 185
But I do prize it at my love before
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave
you

To the protection of the prosperous gods, 188
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not; all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend, 192
And nothing brings me all things. Go; live still:

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

First Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country, and am
not 196

One that rejoices in the common wrack,
As common bruit doth put it.

First Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men,—

First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them. 200

Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers

In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades'
wrath. 208

Sec. Sen. I like this well; he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; tell my friends, 212

Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso
please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, 216
And hang himself. I pray you, do my greeting.
Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion 220
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Who once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle. 224
Lips, let sour words go by and language end:
What is a miss plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Exit.]

First Sen. His discontents are unremovably
Coupled to nature.

Sec. Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us
return,
And strain what other means is left unto us 232
In our dear peril.

First Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files

As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least;

Besides, his expedition promises

Present approach. 4

Sec. Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend,

Whom, though in general part we were op-
pos'd,

Yet our old love made a particular force, 8
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship i' the cause against your city, 12
In part for his sake mov'd.

First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Enter Senators from TIMON.

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring

Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare. 17
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Woods. TIMON'S Cave, and a rude Tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho! No answer! What is
this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:

Some beast rear'd this; here does not live a
man. 4

Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill;

An ag'd interpreter, though young in days. 8
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,

Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES with his Powers.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town

Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.]

Enter Senators, on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills 4

The scope of justice; till now myself and such
As slept within the shadow of your power

Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush, 8
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,

Cries of itself, 'No more: ' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,

And pury insolence shall break his wind 12
With fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm, 16
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

Sec. Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promis'd means: 20
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours

Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have receiv'd your grief; nor are they such That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall 25

For private faults in them.

Sec. Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame that they wanted cunning in excess 28
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food 32
Which nature loathes,—take thou the destin'd
tenth,

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take 36
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin 40
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

Sec. Sen. What thou wilt, 44
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before, 48
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers 52
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:

Those enemies of Timon's and mine own 56
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream 60
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words. 64

[The Senators descend, and open the gates.]

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea:
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression 68
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:

Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate: 72

Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass and stay not here thy gait.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which 76

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory 80

Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war;
make each

Prescribe to other as each other's leech. 84

Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners.

Flav. Hencel home, you idle creatures, get you home:

Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign 4
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on? 8

You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me
directly. 12

Sec. Com. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade? 16

Sec. Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow! 20

Sec. Com. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork. 29

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop today?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home? 36

What tributaries follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, 40
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation, 45
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made a universal shout, 48

That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire? 52
And do you now cull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone! 56
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault 60
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your
tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all. 64

[Exeunt all the Commoners.
See whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I. Disrobe the images 68
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.
Mar. May we do so?

You know it is the feast of Lupercal.
Flav. It is no matter; let no images 72
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing 76
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter, in procession, with music, CÆSAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIVS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIVS, and CASCA; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.

Cæs. Calphurnia!
Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. 1
[Music ceases.
Cæs. Calphurnia!
Cal. Here, my lord.
Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. Antonius! 4
Ant. Cæsar, my lord.
Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase, 8
Shake off their sterile curse.
Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd.

Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.
[Music. 12

Sooth. Cæsar!
Cæs. Hal! Who calls?
Casca. Bid every noise be still: peace yet again! [Music ceases.

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, 16
Cry 'Cæsar.' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?
Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.
Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar. 21

Cæs. What sayst thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him: pass.
[Sennet. Exeunt all but BRUTUS and CASSIVS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?
Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.
Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some
part 28

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late: 32
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius, 36
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference, 40
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,—

Among which number, Cassius, be you one,— 44
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion; 48
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things. 53
Cas. 'Tis just:

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn 56
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,—
Except immortal Cæsar,—speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke, 61
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself 64
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to
hear;

And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass, 68
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughèr, or did use 72
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know 76
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.]

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear
the people

Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it? 80
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me? 84

If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love 88
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.

Well, honour is the subject of my story. 92
I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be

In awe of such a thing as I myself. 96
I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:

We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he:

For once, upon a raw and gusty day, 100
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Cæsar said to me, 'Dar'st thou, Cassius, now

Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,

Accoutred as I was, I plunged in 105

And bade him follow; so, indeed he did.

The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside 108

And stemming it with hearts of controversy;
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,

Cæsar cried, 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!' 112
I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
Is now become a god, and Cassius is 116

A wretched creature and must bend his body
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark 120

How he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake;
His coward lips did from their colour fly,

And that same eye whose bend doth awe the
world

Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan; 124
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the
Romans

Mark him and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'

As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me, 128
A man of such a feeble temper should

So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. [Flourish. Shout.]

Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are 132

For some new honours that are heaped on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow
world

Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about 136

To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings. 140

Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that
'Cæsar?'

Why should that name be sounded more than
yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as

well; 144
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar.'

Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed, 148

That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd!

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,

But it was fam'd with more than with one man?

When could they say, till now, that talk'd of
Rome, 153
That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man. 156
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king. 160

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim:
How I have thought of this and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present, 164
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time 168
Both meet to hear and answer such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome 172
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad
That my weak words have struck but thus much show

Of fire from Brutus. 176

Bru. The games are done and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day. 180

Re-enter CÆSAR and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calphurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero 184
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cæs. Antonius! 189

Ant. Cæsar.

Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights.
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look; 193
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given. 196

Cæs. Would he were fatter! But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;

He is a great observer, and he looks 201
Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no plays,

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort 204
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.

Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous. 209

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Sennel. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.

CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd
to-day,

That Cæsar looks so sad. 216

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you
not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and, being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too. 224

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was 't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony. 232

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets; and, as I told you, he put it by once;
but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again; then he put it by again; but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refused it the rabblement shouted and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swoounded and fell down at it: and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you: what! did Cæsar swoond? 252

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man. 263

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, 'Alas! good soul,' and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less. 279

Bru. And after that he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect? 284

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too; Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it. 292

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating. 297

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be! 300

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form. 304

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you: 308

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world. [Exit BRUTUS. 313

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd: therefore 'tis meet That noble minds keep ever with their likes; 316

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd? Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius He should not humour me. I will this night,

In several hands, in at his windows throw, 321 As if they came from several citizens,

Writings all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely 324

Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:

And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;

For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so? Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero! 4

I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen

The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam, To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds: 8

But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.

Either there is a civil strife in heaven, Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, 12

Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave—you know him well by sight—

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand, 17

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides,—I have not since put up my sword,—
Against the Capitol I met a lion, 20
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me; and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw 24

Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.—
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say 29
'These are their reasons, they are natural;'
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon. 32

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow? 36

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Casca: this disturbed sky

Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICERO.]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace
so? 44

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, 48
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it. 52

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us. 56

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of
life

That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, 60
To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men, fools, and children calculate; 65
Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality, why, you shall find 68
That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man 72
Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me 76
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not,
Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now 80
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and suzerance show us womanish. 84

Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy. 88

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger
then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most
strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat: 92
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of those worldly bars, 96
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.]

Casca. So can I: 100
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf 104
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep;
He were no lion were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws; what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves 109
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief!

Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman; then I know 113
My answer must be made: but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a
man 116

That is no fleeing tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes furthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made. 120

Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence; 124
And I do know by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element 128
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna; I do know him by his gait:
He is a friend.

Enter CINNA.

Cinna, where haste you so? 133

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on 't. What a fearful night is
this! 137

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are.

O Cassius! if you could 140
But win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Bz you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax 145
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find
us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there? 148

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

[Exit CINNA.]

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day 153
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire

Upon the next encounter yields him ours. 156 Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need
of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and ere day

We will awake him and be sure of him. 164
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. BRUTUS' Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. 4
When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! what,
Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here. 8

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Bru. It must be by his death: and, for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd: 12
How that might change his nature, there's the
question:

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—
that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, 16
That at his will he may do danger with.

The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Cæsar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd 20
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round, 24
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:

Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel 28

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities;

And therefore think him as a serpent's egg 32
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found 36
This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? 40

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me
word.

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air 44
Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter.]

*Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!*

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake! 48

Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.

'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe?

What, Rome? 52

Our ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.

'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee

promise; 56

If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.]

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is 64

Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:

The genius and the mortal instruments

Are then in council; and the state of man,

Like to a little kingdom, suffers then 68

The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,

Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them? 72

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them

By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter. 76

[Exit LUCIUS.]

They are the faction. O conspiracy!

Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by
night,

When evils are most free? O! then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough 80

To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;

Hide it in smiles and affability:

For if thou path, thy native semblance on,

Not Erebus itself were dim enough 84

To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DE-CIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TRE-BONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all
night. 88

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man
here

But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself 92

Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; 96

And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? 100

[BRUTUS AND CASSIUS whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O! pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day. 104

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;

Which is a great way growing on the south,

Weighing the youthful season of the year. 108

Some two months hence up higher toward the

north

He first presents his fire; and the high east

Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one. 112

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,
If these be motives weak, break off betimes, 116
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120
To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women, then, country-
men,

What need we any spur but our own cause
To prick us to redress? what other bond 124
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word
And will not palter? and what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it? 128
Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise, 133
Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause or our performance
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood 136
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. 140

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O! let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion 145
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity. 149

Bru. O! name him not: let us not break with him;

For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out. 152

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not meet,

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, 156
Should outlive Cæsar: we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far

As to annoy us all; which to prevent, 160
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards; 164

For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.

We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood: 168

O! then that we could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar. But, alas!

Cæsar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully; 172

Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,

Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:

And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,

Stir up their servants to an act of rage, 176

And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious;

Which so appearing to the common eyes,

We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. 180

And, for Mark Antony, think not of him;

For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm

When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him;

For in the engrafted love he bears to Cæsar— 184

Bru. Alas! good Cassius, do not think of him:

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do

Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar:

And that were much he should; for he is given

To sports, to wildness, and much company. 189

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die:

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.]

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three. 192

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;

For he is superstitious grown of late,

Quite from the main opinion he held once 196

Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.

It may be, these apparent prodigies,

The unaccustom'd terror of this night,

And the persuasion of his augurers, 200

May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,

I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear

That unicorns may be betray'd with trees, 204

And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,

He says he does, being then most flattered. 208

Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him. 212

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder none of you have thought of him. 217

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. 220

Cas. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes, 225
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits and formal constancy:
And so good morrow to you every one. 228

[Exeunt all except BRUTUS.]

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound. 233

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus, 237
Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across, 240
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot; 244
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
But, with an angry walture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience 248
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep, 252
And could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,

I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all. 257

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed. 260

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed 264
To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place, 269
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow 272
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
Why are you heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been 276
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets 281
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort of limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs 285

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife, 288

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman, but, withal, 292
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife;
I grant I am a woman, but, withal,
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex, 296
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience
And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods!

Render me worthy of this noble wife.

[Knocking within.

Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake 305
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows. 308
Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA.

Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spoke of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how? 312

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble
tongue.

Bru. O! what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief. Would you were not sick.

Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour. 317

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand,
Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome! 321

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up

My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, 324
And I will strive with things impossible;

Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick? 328

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee as we are going

To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you, 332

To do I know not what; but it sufficeth

That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. CÆSAR'S House.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, hol! They murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord! 4

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth? 8

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me

Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished. 12

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,

Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets; 17
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their

dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol; 21
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,

Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets. 24

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?

Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar. 29

Cal. When beggars die there are no comets
seen;

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths; 32

The valiant never taste of death but once.

Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should

fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end, 36

Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth
to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast. 40

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart

If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

No, Cæsar shall not; danger knows full well 44
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible:
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas! my lord, 48
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house, 52
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not
well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home. 56

Enter DECIVS.

Here's this Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy
Cæsar:

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.
Cæs. And you are come in very happy time
To bear my greeting to the senators, 61
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser;
I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius. 64
Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far
To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come. 68

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some
cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate: 72
But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know:
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statua, 76
Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it:
And these does she apply for warnings and por-
tents, 80

And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate: 84
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. 89
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded
it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say: 92

And know it now: the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock 96

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
'Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better
dreams.'

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper 100
'Lo! Cæsar is afraid?'

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
And reason to my love is liable. 104

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go:

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METEL-LUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me. 108
Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.
What! Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy 112
As that same ague which hath made you lean.

What is't o'clock?

Bru. Cæsar, 'tis stricken eight.
Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights, 116
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.
Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now, Cinna; now, Metellus; what, Trebonius!
I have an hour's talk in store for you; 121
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will:—[Aside.] and so near will I be, 124
That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Bru. [Aside.] That every like is not the same,
O Cæsar! 128
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper.

Art. Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, 9

ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this. 12
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou mayst live;
If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the same Street, before the House of BRUTUS.Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, 4
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.

O constancy! be strong upon my side;
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue;

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. 8
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what shall I do?

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else? 12

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth; and take good note
What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that? 16

Luc. I hear none, madam.Por. Prithee, listen well:

I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing. 20*Enter the Soothsayer.*

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.Por. What is 't o'clock?Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol? 24*Sooth.* Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand,

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Cæsar 28

To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,

I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. 32

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death: 36
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. [Exit.]

Por. I must go in. Ayme! how weak a thing The heart of woman is. O Brutus! 40

The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise.

Sure, the boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit
That Cæsar will not grant. O! I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord; 44

Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

[Exeunt, severally.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A crowd of People; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and Others.

Cæs. [To the Soothsayer.] The ides of March are come.Sooth. Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.Art. Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule.Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, 4
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.Art. O Cæsar! read mine first; for mine's a suit

That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd. 8*Art.* Delay not, Cæsar; read it instantly.Cæs. What! is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cæs. What! urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol. 12
CÆSAR goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following. All the Senators rise.
Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well.
[Advances to CÆSAR.]
Bru. What said Popilius Lena?
Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive. 16
I fear our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.
Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.
Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, 20
Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.
Bru. Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change. 24
Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.
[Exeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS. CÆSAR and the Senators take their seats.]
Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar. 28
Bru. He is address'd; press near and second him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.
Casca. Are we all ready? What is now amiss,
That Cæsar and his senate must redress? 32
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar, Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
A humble heart,— [Kneeling.]
Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings and these lowly courtesies, 36
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turn pre-ordinance and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond,
To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood 40
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean sweet words,
Low-crook'd curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished: 44
If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied. 48
Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?
Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,
Cæsar; 52
Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Cæs. What, Brutus!
Cas. Pardon, Cæsar; Cæsar, pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall, 56
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Cæs. I could be well mov'd if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;
But I am constant as the northern star, 60
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire and every one doth shine, 64
But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
So, in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one 68
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this,
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so. 73
Cin. O Cæsar,— Cæs. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus!
Dec. Great Cæsar,— Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?
Casca. Speak, hands, for me! 76
[They stab Cæsar.]
Cæs. Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Cæsar! [Dies.]
Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.
Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out,
'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!' 80
Bru. People and senators be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still; ambition's debt is paid.
Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too. 84
Bru. Where's Publius?
Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's
Should chance— 88
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;
There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, 92
Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed
But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd. 96
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run
As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures.
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon. 100

Casca. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd 104
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads, 109
Let's all cry, 'Peace, freedom, and liberty!'

Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages
hence

Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er, 112
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be, 116
So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome. 121

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down; 124
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:

Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:

Say I love Brutus, and I honour him; 128

Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd
him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony

May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death, 132

Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state 136
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant
Roman;

I never thought him worse.

Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, 141
Depart untouched.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.]

Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose. 146

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome,
Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, 151
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world. 156
I do beseech ye, if ye bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die: 160

No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and
cruel, 165

As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands

And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful; 169

And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—

Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony; 173

Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in

With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence. 176

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear, 180
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand: 184
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metel-

lus;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours; 188
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebinius.

Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer. 193

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O! 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace, 197

Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corpse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, 200
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.

Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart; 204
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
stand,

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy leth
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee. 208
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie!

Cas. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cæsar shall say this; 212
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends, 216
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar.

Friends am I with you all, and love you all, 220
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard 224

That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:

And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market place; 228
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
[Aside to BRUTUS.] You know not what you do;
do not consent 232

That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?

Bru. By your pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first, 236
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:

What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Cæsar shall 240
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.
Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body. 244

You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
And say you do 't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all 248
About his funeral; and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so; 252
I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.
[Exeunt all but ANTONY.]

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,

That I am mæek and gentle with these butchers;
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man 256
That ever lived in the tide of times.

Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips, 260

To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy; 264

Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds: 269
And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice

Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war; 273
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not? 276

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;

And bid me say to you by word of mouth— 280
[Seeing the body.]

O Cæsar!—

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, 284
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd:

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 289

Hie hence and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile;
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place; there shall I try, 292

In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things. 296
Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt, with CÆSAR's body.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers. 4

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.

First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak. 8

Sec. Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,

When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens;

BRUTUS goes into the pulpit.

Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended:
silencè!

Bru. Be patient till the last. 12

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply. 37

Citizens. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. 44

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CÆSAR's body.
Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart: that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death. 52

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live! live!

First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Sec. Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

Fourth Cit. Cæsar's better parts
Shall be crown'd in Brutus. 57

First Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

Sec. Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

First Cit. Peace, ho! 60

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony.

Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech
 Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,
 By our permission, is allow'd to make. 65
 I do entreat you, not a man depart,
 Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.
First Cit. Stay, hol and let us hear Mark
 Antony. 68
Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;
 We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.
Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to
 you. [Goes up.
Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?
Third Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
 He finds himself beholding to us all. 73
Fourth Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.
First Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.
Third Cit. Nay, that's certain:
 We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him. 76
Sec. Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.
Ant. You gentle Romans,—
Citizens. Peace, hol! let us hear him.
Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
 I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. 80
 The evil that men do lives after them,
 The good is oft interred with their bones;
 So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
 Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious; 84
 If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
 And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
 Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
 For Brutus is an honourable man; 88
 So are they all, all honourable men,—
 Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
 He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
 But Brutus says he was ambitious; 92
 And Brutus is an honourable man.
 He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
 Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
 Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious? 96
 When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;
 Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
 Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
 And Brutus is an honourable man. 100
 You all did see that on the Lupercal
 I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
 Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
 Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; 104
 And, sure, he is an honourable man.
 I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
 But here I am to speak what I do know.
 You all did love him once, not without cause:

What cause withholds you then to mourn for
 him? 109
 O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
 And men have lost their reason. Bear with me;
 My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, 112
 And I must pause till it come back to me.
First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.
Sec. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
 Cæsar has had great wrong.
Third Cit. Has he, masters? 116
 I fear there will a worse come in his place.
Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
 Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.
First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it. 120
Sec. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.
Fourth Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might
 Have stood against the world; now lies he there,
 And none so poor to do him reverence.
 O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
 Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, 128
 I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
 Who, you all know, are honourable men.
 I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
 To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
 Than I will wrong such honourable men. 133
 But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
 I found it in his closet, 'tis his will.
 Let but the commons hear this testament— 136
 Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
 And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's
 wounds,
 And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
 Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, 140
 And, dying, mention it within their wills,
 Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
 Unto their issue.
Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it,
 Mark Antony. 144
Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
 It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.
 You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
 And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar, 149
 It will inflame you, it will make you mad.
 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
 For if you should, O! what would come of it.

Fourth Cit. Read the will! we'll hear it,
Antony; 153
You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?

I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it. 156

I fear I wrong the honourable men

Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable
men!

Citizens. The will! the testament! 160

Sec. Cit. They were villains, murderers. The will! read the will.

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?

Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,

And let me show you him that made the will. 164

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Citizens. Come down.

Sec. Cit. Descend. [ANTONY comes down.]

Third Cit. You shall have leave. 168

Fourth Cit. A ring; stand round.

First Cit. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body.

Sec. Cit. Room for Antony; most noble
Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far
off. 172

Citizens. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them
now.

You all do know this mantle; I remember

The first time ever Cæsar put it on; 176

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,

That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through:

See what a rent the envious Casca made: 180

Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;

And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,

Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,

As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd 184

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:

Judge, O you gods! how dearly Cæsar lov'd
him.

This was the most unkindest cut of all; 188

For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty
heart;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face, 192

Even at the base of Pompey's statua,

Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

O! what a fall was there, my countrymen;

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, 196

Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O! now you weep, and I perceive you feel

The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.

Kind souls, what! weep you when you but
behold 200

Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here, Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

First Cit. O piteous spectacle!

Sec. Cit. O noble Cæsar! 204

Third Cit. O woeful day!

Fourth Cit. O traitors! villains!

First Cit. O most bloody sight!

Sec. Cit. We will be revenged. 208

Citizens. Revenge!—About!—Seek!—Burn!

Fire!—Kill!—Slay! Let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen!

First Citizen. Peace there! Hear the noble
Antony. 212

Sec. Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up

To such a sudden flood of mutiny.

They that have done this deed are honourable:

What private griefs they have, alas! I know
not, 217

That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:

I am no orator, as Brutus is; 221

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,

That love my friend; and that they know full
well

That gave me public leave to speak of him. 224

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;

I tell you that which you yourselves do know,

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths, 229

And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony

Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move 233

The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens. We'll mutiny.

First Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

Third Cit. Away, then! come, seek the conspirators. 237

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me
speak.

Citizens. Peace, ho!—Hear Antony,—most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what. 240

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?

Alas! you know not: I must tell you then.

You have forgot the will I told you of.
Citizens. Most true. The will! let's stay and hear the will. 244

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.
 To every Roman citizen he gives,
 To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

Sec. Cit. Most noble Cæsar! we'll revenge his death. 248

Third Cit. O royal Cæsar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Citizens. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
 His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
 On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
 And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
 To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves. 256
 Here was a Cæsar! when comes such another?

First Cit. Never, never! Come, away, away!
 We'll burn his body in the holy place,
 And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.

Take up the body. 261

Sec. Cit. Go fetch fire.

Third Cit. Pluck down benches.

Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing. [Exeunt Citizens, with the body.]

Ant. Now let it work: mischief, thou art afoot, 265

Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he? 268

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.

He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
 And in this mood will give us any thing. 272

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius
 Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the
 people, 275

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with
 Cæsar,
 And things unlucky charge my fantasy:
 I have no will to wander forth of doors,
 Yet something leads me forth. 4

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name?

Sec. Cit. Whither are you going?

Third Cit. Where do you dwell?

Fourth Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor? 9

Sec. Cit. Answer every man directly.

First Cit. Ay, and briefly.

Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely. 12

Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly:
 wisely I say, I am a bachelor. 18

Sec. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly. 21

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

First Cit. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend. 24

Sec. Cit. That matter is answered directly.

Fourth Cit. For your dwelling, briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly. 28

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

Sec. Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a con-spirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet. 33

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Sec. Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going. 39

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, hol' firebrands! To Brutus', to Cassius', burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away! go! 43

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—*Rome. A Room in ANTONY'S
 House.*

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, AND LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Ocl. Your brother too must die; consent you,
 Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Ocl. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, 4
 Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
 Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine 8
 How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What! shall I find you here?

Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

[Exit LEPIDUS.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, 12
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,
In our black sentence and proscription. 17

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than
you:

And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, 20
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way; 23
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier. 28

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on, 32
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds 36
On abject orts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and stal'd by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers; we must straight make head;
Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out; 44

And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake, 48
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I
fear,
Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Camp near Sardis. Before BRUTUS' Tent.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet
them.

Bru. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?
Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come 4
To do you salutation from his master.

[PINDARUS gives a letter to BRUTUS.]

Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pin-
darus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish 8
Things done, undone; but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour. 12

Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect
enough;

But not with such familiar instances, 16
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay, 20
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle; 24

But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd; 28

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.
[Low march within.]

March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho! 32

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

First Sold. Stand!

Sec. Sold. Stand!

Third Sold. Stand! 36

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me
wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs; 40

And when you do them—

Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our armies here,

Which should perceive nothing but love from
us, 44
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off 48
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no
man

Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. 52

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear
in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side, 4
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment. 8

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm! 12
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,

And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement! 17

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March
remember:

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, 20
And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, 24
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me; 28
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius. 32

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health; tempt me no
further. 36

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is 't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted when a madman stares? 40

Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all
this?

Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;

Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge? 44

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true, 52
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;
I said an elder soldier, not a better: 56
Did I say, 'better'?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not! 60

Bru. No.

Cas. What! durst not tempt him!

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my
love;

I may do that I shall be sorry for. 64

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind, 68

Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;
For I can raise no money by vile means:

By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions, 76
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart. 84

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults. 88

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
come, 92

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aware of the world;
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O! I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes. There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart 100

Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:

If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;

I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:

Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar; for, I know, 104

When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst

him better

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger:

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;

Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius! you are yoked with a lamb 109

That carries anger as the flint bears fire,

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,

And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd 112

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?

Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd

too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your
hand. 116

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Bru. What's the matter?

Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with
me,

When that rash humour which my mother gave
me

Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, 121
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so. [Noise within.]

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet
They be alone. 125

Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay
me.

Enter Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS.

Cas. How now! What's the matter? 128

Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should
be;

For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic rime!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,
hence! 133

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:

What should the wars do with these jiggling fools? 136

Companion, hence!

Cas. Away, away! be gone.
[Exit Poet.]

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Mes-sala with you, 140

Immediately to us.

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.]

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Exit LUCIUS.]

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use 144

If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead. 148

Cas. How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!

Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark
Antony 152
Have made themselves so strong;—for with her death

That tidings came:—with this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods! 156

Enter LUCIUS, with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl
of wine.

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup; 160
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

[Drinks.

Bru. Come in, Titinius. [Exit LUCIUS.

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Welcome, good Messala.

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities. 164

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power, 168
Bending their expedition towards Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry, 172

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators that died 176
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one!

Mes. Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala. 181

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours? 184

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die,
Messala: 189

With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure. 192

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently? 196

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This is it:

'Tis better that the enemy seek us:

So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still, 200
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better,

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection; 204

For they have grudg'd us contribution:

The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off, 209
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside, 212

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:

The enemy increaseth every day;

We, at the height, are ready to decline. 216

There is a tide in the affairs of men,

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life

Is bound in shallows and in miseries. 220

On such a full sea are we now afloat;

And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;

We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi. 224

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our
talk,

And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good-night: 228
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius!

*Re-enter LUCIUS.*My gown. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Farewell, good Messala:

Good-night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,

Good-night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother! 232

This was an ill beginning of the night:

Never come such division 'tween our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.Cas. Good-night, my lord.Bru. Good-night, good brother. 236*Tit.* } Good-night, Lord Brutus.Mes. } Farewell, every one.[Exeunt CASSIUS, TITINIUS, and MESSALA.]Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.Bru. What! thou speak'st drowsily?Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd. 240

Call Claudius and some other of my men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro! and Claudius!Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.Var. Calls my lord? 244*Bru.* I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep:

It may be I shall raise you by and by

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure. 248*Bru.* I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs;

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket of my gown. 252

[VARRO and CLAUDIUS lie down.]Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,

And touch thy instrument a strain or two? 256

Luc. Ay, my lord, an 't please you.Bru. It does, my boy:

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might; 260

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep
again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live, 264

I will be good to thee. [Music, and a Song.]This is a sleepy tune: O murderous slumber!
Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,
That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good-
night; 268

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;

I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good-night.

Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd
down 272

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

*Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.*How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes
here?

I think it is the weakness of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous apparition. 276

It comes upon me. Art thou any thing?

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,

That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare?

Speak to me what thou art. 280

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.Bru. Why com'st thou?Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.[Ghost vanishes.]

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest: 285

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.

Boy, Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!
Claudius! 288*Luc.* The strings, my lord, are false.Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument Lucius, awake!Luc. My lord! 292*Bru.* Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?Luc. Nothing, my lord. 296*Bru.* Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah, Claudius!
Fellow thou! awake!Var. My lord!Clau. My lord! 300*Bru.* Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?Var. Did we, my lord?Clau. } Did we, my lord?Bru. Ay: saw you any thing?Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.Clau. Nor I, my lord.Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother

Cassius. 304

Did him set on his powers betimes before,

And we will follow.

Var. } It shall be done, my lord.
Clau. }

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand; 4
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content 8
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals: 12
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, 16
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. 20
[March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge. 24

Make forth; the generals would have some
words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: is it so, country-
men?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes,
Octavius. 29

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,

Crying, 'Long live! hail, Cæsar!'

Cas. Antony, 32

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Bru. O! yes, and soundless too; 36

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar: 40

You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind

Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers! 44

Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself:

This tongue had not offended so to-day,

If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat, 48

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look;

I draw a sword against conspirators;

When think you that the sword goes up again?

Never, till Cæsar's three-and-thirty wounds 53

Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar

Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.
Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' 56

hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,

Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable. 60

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such
honour,

Join'd with a masquer and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony; away!

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth. 64

If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;

If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.]

Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard. 68

Bru. Ho!

Lucilius! hark, a word with you.

Lucil. My lord?

[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart.]

Cas. Messala!

Mes. What says my general?

Cas. Messala,
This is my birth-day; as this very day 72
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness that against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties. 76
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion; now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign 80
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away and gone, 84
And in their stead do ravens, crows, and kites
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which 88
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly. 92
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall. 97
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then, determined to do? 100

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself; I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile, 104
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle, 108
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble
Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome; 112
He bears too great a mind: but this same
day

Must end that work the ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take: 116
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed; 121
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

Bru. Why, then, lead on. O! that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come; 124
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! away!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side.

[Loud alarum.]
Let them set on at once, for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, 4
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O! look, Titinius, look, the villains fly:
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy;
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him. 4
Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;
Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd. 8

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord:
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look,
Titinius; 12
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.
Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in
him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
And here again; that I may rest assur'd 17
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought.
[Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius, 21
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.

[PINDARUS ascends the hill.]
This day I breathed first; time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end; 24
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?
Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about 28
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on: now they are almost on him;
Now, Titinius! now some light; O! he lights
too:

He's ta'en; [Shout.] and, hark! they shout for
joy. 32

Cas. Come down; behold no more.
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

PINDARUS descends.

Come hither, sirrah: 36
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath; 40

Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer; here, take thou the hilts;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, 44
Guide thou the sword. Cæsar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been;

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius, 48
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

[Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, 52
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill. 56
Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!
Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun! 60
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are
done. 64

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child!

Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of
men 68

The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv'd,

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pin-
darus? 72

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel and darts envenomed 76
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

[Exit MESSALA.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they 82
Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas! thou hast misconstru'd every thing. 84
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I

Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius. 88

By your leave, gods: this is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.

[Kills himself.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS.
Young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body
lie? 92

Mes. Lo, yonder: and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar! thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. [Low alarums.]

Cato. Brave Titinius! 96

Look whe'r he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

It is impossible that ever Rome 100
Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more
tears

To this dead man than you shall see me
pay.—

I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come therefore, and to Thassos send his body: 104

His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
And come, young Cato;—let us to the field.
Labæo and Flavius, set our battles on:— 108
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then BRUTUS, Young CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! 4
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus! [Exit, charging the enemy.]
CATO is overpowered, and falls.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? 9

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And mayst be honour'd being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil. Only I yield to die: 12
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight. [Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!

Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en. 16

First Sold. I'll tell the news: here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:
I dare assure thee that no enemy 21

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive or dead, 24
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,

Give him all kindness: I had rather have 28

Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,

And see where Brutus be alive or dead;

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,

How every thing is chanc'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,

He came not back: he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word; 4

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

[Whispers.]

Cli. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace, then! no words.

Cli. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.]

Dar. Shall I do such a deed? 8

Cli. O, Dardanius!

Dar. O, Clitus!

Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, 13
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why this, Volumnius: 16
The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night; at Sardis once,
And this last night here in Philippi fields.

I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord. 20

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, 24
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I prithee,

Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it. 28

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.]

Cli. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying here.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; 32
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,

My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life,
I found no man but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day, 36
More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.

So fare you well at once; for Brutus tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history: 40 Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would
rest,
That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly.

Bru. Hence! I will follow.

[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord: 44
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:
Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? 48

Stra. Give me your hand first: fare you well,
my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—[He runs on his sword.] Cæsar, now be still;

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [Dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and Army.

Oct. What man is that? 52

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?

Stra. Free from the bondage you are in,
Messala;

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;

For Brutus only overcame himself, 56

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain
them. 60

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato? 64

Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them
all; 68

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;

He only, in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of them. 72

His life was gentle, and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world, 'This was a man!'

Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,

With all respect and rites of burial. 77

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.

So, call the field to rest; and let's away, 80

To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.

SCENE.—Scotland; England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A desert Heath.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?

Sec. Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

First Witch. Where the place?

Sec. Witch. Upon the heath.

Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!

Sec. Witch. Paddock calls.

Third Witch. Anon.

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter KING DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant
Who, like a good and hardy soldier fought
'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend!

Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.

Serg. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald—

Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him—from the western isles
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak;
For brave Macbeth,—well he deserves that
name,—

Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion carv'd out his passage
Till he fac'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to
him,

Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Serg. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwracking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to
come

Discomfited swells. Mark, King of Scotland,
mark:

No sooner justice had with valour arm'd

Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,

But the Norway lord surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men 32
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Serg. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were 36
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they

Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha, 41
I cannot tell—

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy
wounds; 44
They smack of honour both. Go, get him surgeons. [Exit Sergeant, attended.]

Enter Ross.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look

That seems to speak things strange.

Ross. God save the king! 48

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthythane?

Ross. From Fife, great king;

Where the Norway banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold. Norway himself,
With terrible numbers, 52

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons, 56
Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst
arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.—

Dun. Great happiness!

Ross. That now 60

Sweno, the Norway's king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use. 64

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present
death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Ross. I'll see it done. 68

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

Sec. Witch. Killing swine.

Third Witch. Sister, where thou?

First Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap, 4

And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd:
'Give me,' quoth I:

'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon cries.
Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger:

But in a sieve I'll thither sail, 8

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

Sec. Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

First Witch. Thou'rt kind. 12

Third Witch. And I another.

First Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know 16

I' the shipman's card.

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his pent-house lid; 20

He shall live a man forbid.

Weary se'nights nine times nine

Shall he dwindle, peak and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost, 24

Yet it shall be tempest-tost.

Look what I have.

Sec. Witch. Show me, show me.

First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb, 28
Wrack'd as homeward he did come.

[Drum within.]

Third Witch. A drum! a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand, 32

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine. 36

Peace! the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is 't call'd to Forres? What are these,

So wither'd and so wild in their attire, 40

That look not like th' inhabitants o' the earth,

And yet are on 't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying 44

Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?

First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Thane of Glamis! 48

Sec. Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Thane of Cawdor!

Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? I' the name of truth, 52

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope, 56

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak
not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow and which will
not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60
Your favours nor your hate.

First Witch. Hail!

Sec. Witch. Hail!

Third Witch. Hail! 64

First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

Sec. Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo! 68

First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me
more:

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and to be king 73
Stands not within the prospect of belief

No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why 76
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge
you.

[Witches vanish.]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd? 80

Macb. Into the air, and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten on the insane root 84
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it
not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune and words.
Who's here? 88

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend 92

Which should be thine or his. Silence'd with
that,

In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make, 96

Strange images of death. As thick as hail
Came post with post, and every one did bear

Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent 100

To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor: 105

In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.

Ban. What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me 108

In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet;

But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel 112

With hidden help or vantage, or that with both

He labour'd in his country's wrack, I know not;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,

Have overthrown him.

Macb. [Aside.] Glamis, and Thane of Caw-dor:

The greatest is behind. [To ROSS and ANGUS.]
Thanks for your pains. 117

[To BANQUO.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,

When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to
me

Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home, 120

Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,

Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,

The instruments of darkness tell us truths, 124
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act 128
Of the imperial theme. I thank you, gentlemen.

[Aside.] This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill, cannot be good; if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success, 132
Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor:

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears 137
Are less than horrible imaginings;
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is 141
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. [Aside.] If chance will have me king,
why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him, 144
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould

But with the aid of use.

Macb. [Aside.] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest
day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure. 148

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains

Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king.
Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more
time, 153

The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends. 156
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONAL-
BAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back; but I have spoke
With one that saw him die; who did report 4

That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implor'd your highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died 8
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face: 12
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin!

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before 16
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee; would thou hadst less deserv'd,

That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been mine! only I have left to
say, 20

More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties; and our duties 24
Are to your throne and state, children and
servants;

Which do but what they should, by doing everything

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour 28
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow, 32
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know 36
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland; which honour must
Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you: 44

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumberland!
that is a step 48
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be 52
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit.]

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him, 56
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:

It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Inverness. MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

*They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge.
When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor,' by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, 'Hail, king that shall be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee.
Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.*

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be 16
What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy nature;

It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way; thou wouldst be great,

Art not without ambition, but without 20
The illness should attend it; what thou wouldst highly,

That thou wouldst holily; wouldst not play
false,

And yet wouldst wrongly win; thou'dst have,
great Glamis,

That which cries, 'Thus thou must do, if thou
have it;' 24

And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee
hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue 28

All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings?

Mess. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it. 32

Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,

Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming;

One of my fellows had the speed of him, 36
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending;
He brings great news.—[Exit Messenger.] The raven himself is hoarse

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me here,
And fill me from the crown to the toe top full
Of direst cruelty; make thick my blood, 44
Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers, 49

Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
night,

And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell, 52
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,

To cry, 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! 56

Thy letters have transported me beyond

This ignorant present, and I feel now

The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence? 60

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent
flower,

But be the serpent under't. He that's coming
Must be provided for; and you shall put 68

This night's great business into my dispatch;

Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear; 72
To alter favour ever is to fear.
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve 4
By his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutting, frieze,
Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle: 8
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd
The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach
you 12
How you shall bid God 'eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business, to contend 16 Against those honours deep and broad where-
with
Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor? 20
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hold
him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever 25
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; 28
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then, enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then
'twere well

It were done quickly; if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow 4
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return 9
To plague the inventor; this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust: 12
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been 17
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels trumpet-tongu'd against
The deep damnation of his taking-off; 20
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, 24
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no
spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself
And falls on the other.—

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now! what news? 28

Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought 32
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since, 36
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale

At what it did so freely? From this time
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour 40
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,' 44
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prithee, peace.
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was 't, then,
That made you break this enterprise to me? 48
When you durst do it then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place Did then adhere, and yet you would make both: 52
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face, 56
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as
you

Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady M. We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place, 60
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,
Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince 64
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only; when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death, 68
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only; 72
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy
two 75
Of his own chamber and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done 't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. 80
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth
know.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a Servant bearing a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 'tis later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven; 4
Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature
Gives way to in repose.

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.— 9

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir! not yet at rest? The king's a-bed: 12

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd, 17
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters: 20
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that
business,

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure. 24

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear, 28
I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you.

[Exeunt BANQUO and FLEANCE.

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. 32

[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,

The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:
 I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
 Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible 36
 To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
 A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
 Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
 I see thee yet, in form as palpable 40
 As this which now I draw.
 Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
 And such an instrument I was to use.
 Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses, 44
 Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
 And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
 Which was not so before. There's no such thing:
 It is the bloody business which informs 48
 Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-
 world
 Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
 The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates
 Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder, 52
 Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
 Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
 With Tarquin's ravishing strides, toward his design
 Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set
 earth, 56
 Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
 Thy very stones prate of my whereabouts,
 And take the present horror from the time,
 Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat he
 lives: 60
 Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives. [A bell rings.
 I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
 Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
 That summons thee to heaven or to hell. 64
 [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same.Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold,
 What hath quench'd them hath given me fire.
 Hark!
 Peace!
 It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, 4 Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:
 The doors are open, and the surfeited grooms
 Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets,

That death and nature do contend about them,
 Whether they live or die. 9

Macb. [Within.] Who's there? what, ho!
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
 And 'tis not done; the attempt and not the deed Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready; 13
 He could not miss them. Had he not resembled
 My father as he slept I had done 't. My husband!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise? 16
Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.
 Did not you speak?
Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Macb. As I descended?
Lady M. Ay.
Macb. Hark! 20
 Who lies i' the second chamber?
Lady M. Donalbain.
Macb. [Looking on his hands.] This is a sorry
 sight.
Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry
 sight.
Macb. There's one did laugh in 's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!' 24
 That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
 But they did say their prayers, and address'd
 them
 Again to sleep.
Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.
Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen'
 the other: 28
 As they had seen me with these hangman's
 hands.
 Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen,'
 When they did say 'God bless us!'
Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce
 'Amen?' 32
 I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
 Stuck in my throat.
Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
 After these ways; so, it will make us mad.
Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep
 no more! 36
 Macbeth does murder sleep,' the innocent sleep,
 Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
 The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
 Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second
 course, 40
 Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady M. What do you mean?
Macb. Still it cried, 'Sleep no more!' to all the house:
'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!' ⁴⁴

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength to think
So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand. ⁴⁸
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there: go carry them, and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done; ⁵²
Look on 't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, ⁵⁶
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.]

Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noise appals
me?

What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine eyes. ⁶⁰

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this
blood

Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red. ⁶⁴

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour, but I
shame

To wear a heart so white.—[Knocking within.]
I hear a knocking

At the south entry; retire we to our chamber;
A little water clears us of this deed; ⁶⁸

How easy is it, then! Your constancy
Hath left you unattended. [Knocking within.]

Hark! more knocking.
Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers. Be not lost ⁷²

So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed 'twere best not know myself. [Knocking within.]

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate he should have old turning the key. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for 't. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock!
Who's there i' the other devil's name! Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in, equivocator.
[Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose.
[Knocking within.] Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further:
I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within.] Anon, anon!
I pray you, remember the porter. ²⁴

[Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,

That you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker
of three things. ²⁹

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery; it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on,
and it takes him off; it persuades him, and dis-heartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him. ⁴¹

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last
night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me:
but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

⁴⁹

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir.Macb. Good morrow, both.Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?Macb. Not yet.Macd. He did command me to call timely on him: 52

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;

But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain. This is the door.Macd. I'll make so bold to call, 57
For 'tis my limited service. [Exit.]Len. Goes the king hence to-day?Macb. He does: he did appoint so.Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay, 60Ourchimneys have been blown down; and, as they say, Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death,And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion and confus'd events 64New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure birdClamour'd the livelong night: some say the earth
Was feverous and did shake. 64*Macb.* 'Twas a rough night.Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it. 69*Re-enter MACDUFF.Macd.* O horror! horror! horror! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb. } What's the matter?Len. }Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece! 72

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' the building!

Macb. What is 't you say? the life? 76*Len.* Mean you his majesty?Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon: do not bid me speak;

See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX.]

Awake! awake! 80

Ring the alarum-bell. Murder and treason!

Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,

And look on death itself! up, up, and see 84

The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banquo!

As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.
[Bell rings.]Enter LADY MACBETH.Lady M. What's the business, 88

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley

The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd. O gentle lady!

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak;

The repetition in a woman's ear 92

Would murder as it fell.

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo! Banquo!

Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What! in our house?

Ban. Too cruel any where.

Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, 96

And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX.Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance

I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,

There's nothing serious in mortality, 100

All is but toys; renown and grace is dead,

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees

Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.Don. What is amiss?Macb. You are, and do not know 't:The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.Mal. O! by whom?Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done 't: 108

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood;

So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found

Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted; no man's life

Was to be trusted with them. 112

Macb. O! yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man: 116

The expedition of my violent love

Outran the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature 120

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers, Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make 's love known? 124

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. [Aside to DONALBAIN.] Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours:

Don. [Aside to MALCOLM.] What should be spoken 128

Here where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush and seize us? Let's away: our tears
Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. [Aside to DONALBAIN.] Nor our strong
sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady: 132
[LADY MACBETH is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand, and thence 137
Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i' the hall together.

All. Well contented. 141

[Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way 149
Is to avoid the aim: therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away: there's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself when there's no mercy left.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an Old Man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember well;

Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore
night

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah! good father, 4
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.
Is 't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb, 9
When living light should kiss it?

Old Man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday
last,

A falcon, towering in her pride of place, 12
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses,—a thing most strange and certain,—

Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung
out, 16

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war with mankind.

Old Man. 'Tis said they eat each other.

Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine
eyes,

That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macduff. 20

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Ross. Is 't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd. 24
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon
them

Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still!
Thrifless ambition, that wilt ravin up 28
Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone

To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body? 32

Macd. Carried to Colmekill;
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither. 36

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there: adieu!
 Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!
Ross. Farewell, father.
Old Man. God's benison go with you; and with those 40
 That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!
 [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now: King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
 As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
 Thou play'st most foully for 't; yet it was said
 It should not stand in thy posterity, 4
 But that myself should be the root and father
 Of many kings. If there come truth from them,—
 As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,—
 Why, by the verities on thee made good, 8
 May they not be my oracles as well,
 And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as king; LADY MACBETH, as queen; LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten
 It had been as a gap in our great feast, 12
 And all thing unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
 And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness
 Command upon me; to the which my duties 16
 Are with a most indissoluble tie
 For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?
Ban. Ay, my good lord. 20 Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice—
 Which still hath been both grave and prosperous—

In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
 Is 't far you ride? 24

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
 'Twixt this and supper; go not my horse the
 better,

I must become a borrower of the night
 For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast. 28

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd

In England and in Ireland, not confessing

Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers 32
 With strange invention; but of that to-morrow,
 When therewithal we shall have cause of state
 Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse; adieu
 Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?
Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon 's. 37

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;
 And so I do commend you to their backs.
 Farewell. [Exit BANQUO.]

Let every man be master of his time 41
 Till seven at night; to make society
 The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone; while then, God be with you! [Exeunt all but MACBETH and an Attendant.]

Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men 45
 Our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us. [Exit Attendant.] To be thus is nothing; 48

But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banquo
 Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature
 Reigns that which would be fear'd: 'tis much he dares,

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind, 52
 He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
 To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear; and under him
 My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said 56
 Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters

When first they put the name of king upon me,
 And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings. 60
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding. If 't be so, 64
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
 Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them; and mine eternal jewel 68
 Given to the common enemy of man,
 To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
 Rather than so, come fate into the list,
 And champion me to the utterance! Who's
 there? 72

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.]
 Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

First Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
 Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know 76

That it was he in the times past which held you
So under fortune, which you thought had been
Our innocent self. This I made good to you
In our last conference, pass'd in probation with
you, 80
How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,
Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
To half a soul and to a notion craz'd Say, 'Thus did Banquo.'

First Mur. You made it known to us. 84

Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature
That you can let this go? Are you so gossell'd
To pray for this good man and for his issue, 89
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men; 92
As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept
All by the name of dogs: the valu'd file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, 96
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill 100

That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosoms, 104
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

Sec. Mur. I am one, my liege, 108
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

First Mur. And I another,
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune, 112
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.

Sec. Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance 116

That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: and though I could
With bare-fac'd powers sweep him from my sight
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, 120
For certain friends that are both his and mine,

Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall Whom I myself struck down; and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love, 124
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.

Sec. Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

First Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most 128

I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought
That I require a clearness: and with him— 133
To leave no rubs nor botches in the work—
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me 136
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

Sec. Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. [Exeunt Murderers.

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight, 141
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent, 4

Where our desire is got without content:

'Tis safer to be that which we destroy

Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, 8
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard: what's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd
it: 13

She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor
malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer, 16

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
 In the affliction of these terrible dreams
 That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,
 Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,
 Than on the torture of the mind to lie 21
 In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
 After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
 Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison, 24
 Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
 Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
 Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
 Bebright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you.
 Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
 Present him eminence, both with eye and
 tongue:

Unsafe the while, that we 32
 Must lave our honours in these flattering streams,

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
 Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife; 36
 Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance
 lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assail-
 able;

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown 40
 His cloister'd flight, ere, to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done? 44

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest
 chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
 Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
 And with thy bloody and invisible hand 48
 Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood;
 Good things of day begin to droop and drowse, Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse. 53

Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee
 still;

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill:

So, prithee, go with me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

Third Mur. Macbeth.

Sec. Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices and what we have to do
 To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us. 4
 The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
 Now spurs the lated traveller apace
 To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
 The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses. 8

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

Sec. Mur. Then 'tis he: the rest
 That are within the note of expectation
 Already are i' the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.

Third Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually, 12

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
 Make it their walk.

Sec. Mur. A light, a light!

Third Mur. 'Tis he.

First Mur. Stand to 't.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a torch.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

First Mur. Let it come down. 16

[They set upon BANQUO.]

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

Thou mayst revenge. O slave!

[Dies. FLEANCE escapes.]

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?

First Mur. Was 't not the way?

Third Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.

Sec. Mur. We have lost 20

Best half of our affair.

First Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

*A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, LADY
 MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.*

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down: at first and last,

The hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourselves will mingle with society

And play the humble host. 4
Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome.
Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our
friends;
For my heart speaks they are welcome. 8

Enter First Murderer, to the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks;
Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst:
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round. [Approaching the door.] There's blood upon thy face. 12

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's, then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
Is he dispatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him. 16

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats;
yet he's good
That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scap'd. 20

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;
Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air:
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound
in 24

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that. 28
There the grown serpent lies: the worm that's fed

Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. Get thee gone; tomorrow

We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.
Lady M. My royal lord, 32

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making, 'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at
home;

From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony; 36
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer!
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May it please your highness sit?
[The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH'S place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd, 40
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!

Ross. His absence, sir, Lays blame upon his promise. Please 't your highness 44

To grace us with your royal company.
Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is 't that moves your highness? 48

Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake

Thy gory locks at me.
Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not
well. 52

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep
seat;

The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him 56
You shall offend him and extend his passion:
Feed and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on
that
Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff! 60
This is the very painting of your fear;
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O! these flaws and starts—
Impostors to true fear—would well become 64

A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look but on a stool. 68

Macb. Prithee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments 72
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears.

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie, for shame!
Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal; 76
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would
die,

And there an end; but now they rise again, 80
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: this is more strange

Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget. 84
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;

Then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full.
I drink to the general joy of the whole table, 89
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge. 92

Re-enter Ghost.

Macb. Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other; 97
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger; 101
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword; 104
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost vanishes.]

Why, so; being gone,
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still. 108

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make me
strange 112

Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord? 116

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him. At once, good-night:
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good-night; and better health 120

Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good-night to all!
[Exeunt Lords and Attendants.]

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:

Stones have been known to move and trees to
speak;

Augurs and understood relations have 124
By maggot-pies and coughts and rooks brought forth

The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning,
which is which.

Macb. How sayst thou, that Macduff denies his person 128

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send.
There's not a one of them but in his house

I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow— 132
And betimes I will—to the weird sisters:

More shall they speak; for now I am bent to
know,

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good

All causes shall give way: I am in blood 136
Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.

Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures,
sleep. 141

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:

We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting
HECATE.

First Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy and overbold? How did you dare

To trade and traffic with Macbeth 4
In riddles and affairs of death;

And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,

Was never call'd to bear my part, 8
Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,

Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do, 12
Loves for his own ends, not for you.

But make amends now: get you gone,

And at the pit of Acheron

Meet me i' the morning: thither he 16
 Will come to know his destiny:
 Your vessels and your spells provide,
 Your charms and every thing beside.
 I am for the air; this night I'll spend 20
 Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
 Great business must be wrought ere noon:
 Upon the corner of the moon
 There hangs a vaporous drop profound; 24
 I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
 And that distill'd by magic sleights
 Shall raise such artificial sprites
 As by the strength of their illusion 28
 Shall draw him on to his confusion:
 He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
 His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear;
 And you all know security 32
 Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Song within, 'Come away, come away,' &c.
 Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
 Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.
First Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
 Which can interpret further: only, I say,
 Things have been strangely borne. The gracious
 Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth: marry, he was dead: 4
 And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
 Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Fleance
 kill'd,

For Fleance fled: men must not walk too late.
 Who cannot want the thought how monstrous 8
 It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
 To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
 How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight
 In pious rage the two delinquents tear, 12
 That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
 For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
 To hear the men deny 't. So that, I say, 16
 He has borne all things well; and I do think
 That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,— As, an 't please heaven, he shall not,—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.
 But, peace! for from broad words, and 'cause
 he fail'd 21

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
 Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
 Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, 24
 From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
 Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
 Of the most pious Edward with such grace
 That the malevolence of fortune nothing 28
 Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
 Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid
 To wake Northumberland and war-like Siward:
 That, by the help of these—with him above 32
 To ratify the work—we may again
 Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
 Free from our feasts and banquets bloody
 knives,
 Do faithful homage and receive free honours;
 All which we pine for now. And this report 37
 Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt at war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute, 'Sir,
 not I,' 40
 The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
 And hums, as who should say, 'You'll rue the
 time

That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution to hold what distance
 His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel 45
 Fly to the court of England and unfold
 His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
 May soon return to this our suffering country 48
 Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him!
 [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

Sec. Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

Third Witch. Harper cries: 'Tis time, 'tis
 time.

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go; 4
 In the poison'd entrails throw.
 Toad, that under cold stone
 Days and nights hast thirty-one
 Swelter'd venom sleeping got, 8
 Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
 Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake, 12
 In the cauldron boil and bake;
 Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
 Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting, 16
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 20
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark, 24

Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew

Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse, 28
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,

Make the gruel thick and slab: 32
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 36
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE.

Hec. O! well done! I commend your pains,
And every one shall share i' the gains. 40
And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song, 'Black Spirits,' &c.
Sec. Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs, 44
Something wicked this way comes.

Open, locks,
Whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags! 48

What is 't you do?
All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,—

How'er you come to know it,—answer me:
Though you untie the winds and let them
fight 52

Against the churches; though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees blown
down;

Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope 57

Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of Nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken; answer me 60

To what I ask you.

First Witch. Speak.

Sec. Witch. Demand.

Third Witch. We'll answer.

First Witch. Say if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,

Or from our masters'?

Macb. Call 'em: let me see 'em.

First Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten 64

Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweaten

From the murderer's gibbet throw

Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;

Thyself and office deftly show. 68

Thunder. First Apparition of an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

First Witch. He knows thy thought:

Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

First App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
beware Macduff;

Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough.
[Descends.

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks; 73

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more,—

First Witch. He will not be commanded:
here's another,

More potent than the first. 76

Thunder. Second Apparition, a bloody
Child.

Sec. App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

Sec. App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute;
laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman born 80
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live; 84

That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

Thunder. Third Apparition, a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this,

That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round 88

And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to 't.

Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until 92

Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements!
good! 96

Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart 100
Throbs to know one thing: tell me—if your art
Can tell so much,—shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this, 104
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys.]

First Witch. Show!
Sec. Witch. Show! 108

Third Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

A show of Eight Kings; the last with a glass in his hand: BANQUO'S Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
down! 112

Thy crown does sear mine eyeballs: and thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,
eyes! 116

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet? A seventh! I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry. 121
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. [Apparitions vanish.]

What! is this so? 124

First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights. 128
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antick round,
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay. 132

[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish with HECATE.]

Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your Grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord. 136

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did
hear

The galloping of horse: who was 't came by? 140

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits; 144

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it; from this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now, 148
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge of the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls 152
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;

This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more sights! Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Fife. MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness: when our actions do
not,

Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not 4
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us
not; 8

He wants the natural touch; for the poor
wren,

The most diminutive of birds, will fight—
Her young ones in her nest—against the owl.
All is the fear and nothing is the love; 12
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,

I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further: 16

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea 21
Each way and move. I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again.

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward 24

To what they were before. My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's father-
less.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer, 28

It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. [Exit.]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What! with worms and flies? 32

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do
they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,

The pit-fall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds
they are not set for. 36

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market. 40

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
and yet, i' faith,

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother? 44

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so? 48

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them? 52

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them. 56

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father. 61

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you
known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. 64
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:

If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;

To do worse to you were fell cruelty, 69

Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer.

[Exit.]

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now 72

I am in this earthly world, where, to do harm

Is often laudable, to do good sometime

Accounted dangerous folly; why then, alas!

Do I put up that womanly defence, 76

To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.

Mur. He's a traitor. 80

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain.

Mur. What! you egg.

Young fry of treachery! [Stabbing him.]

Son. He has killed me, mother:

Run away, I pray you! [Dies.]

[Exit LADY MACDUFF, crying 'Murder,' and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. Before the KING'S Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom; each new morn 4

New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds

As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out

Like syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe I'll wail, 8

What know believe, and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.

What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him
well; 13

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb 16
To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil

In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon; 20

That which you are my thoughts cannot trans-
pose;

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell;
Though all things foul would wear the brows of
grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes. 24

Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child—
Those precious motives, those strong knots of
love—

Without leave-taking? I pray you, 28
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,

But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, 32
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs;

The title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended: 37
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash 40

Is added to her wounds: I think withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;

And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands: but, for all this, 44

When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country

Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, 48

By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,

That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state 53
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd 56
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters, 61

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire

All continent impediments would o'erbear 64
That did oppose my will; better Macbeth

Than such an one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been

Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne, 68
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet

To take upon you what is yours; you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink. 72

We have willing dames enough; there cannot
be

That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this there grows 76
In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,

I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house; 80

And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge

Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice 84
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been

The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will, 88

Of your mere own; all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces, 92

As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,

Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them, but abound

In the division of each several crime, 96 Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,

Uprou the universal peace, confound

All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland! 100

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!

No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd, 104
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal
father 108

Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore
thee,

Off'n'r upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself 112
Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the blackscraples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth 117

By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste; but God above 120
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself, 124
For strangers to my nature. I am yet Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith, would not betray 128
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life; my first false speaking

Was this upon myself. What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command; 132
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand war-like men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent? 137

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once

'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon. Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140

Doct. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls

That stay his cure; their malady convinces

The great assay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, 144
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor.

[Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:

A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, 149 Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,

All sworn and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures; 152
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue, 156

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak him full of grace.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him
not. 160

Enter Ross.

Macd. Myever-gentlecousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes
remove

The means that make us strangers!

Ross. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas! poor country; 164
Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where
nothing,

But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rent
the air 168

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems

A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps, 172
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O! relation

Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the
speaker;

Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife? 176

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes 't? 180

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour Of many worthy fellows that were out; Which was to my belief witness'd the rather 184

For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot. Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland Would create soldiers, make our women fight, To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be 't their comfort, 188
We are coming thither. Gracious England hath Lent us good Sward and ten thousand men; An older and a better soldier none That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer 192
This comfort with the like! But I have words That would be howl'd out in the desert air, Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they? 196
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine
Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it. 200

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Hum! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes 204

Savagely slaughter'd; to relate the manner, Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer, To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven!
What! man; ne'er pull your hat upon your brows; 208

Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break.

Macd. My children too?

Ross. Wife, children, servants, all That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence! 212
My wife kill'd too?

Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted:

Let's make us medicine of our great revenge, To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children. All my pretty ones? 216

Did you say all? O hell-kitel All? What! all my pretty chickens and their dam At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so; But I must also feel it as a man: 220

I cannot but remember such things were, That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff! They were all struck for thee. Naught that I am, 224

Not for their own demerits, but for mine, Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief

Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it. 228

Macd. O! I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue. But, gentle heavens,

Cut short all intermission; front to front 231
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself; Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape, Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready; Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth 236
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;

The night is long that never finds the day. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked? 3

Gen. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon 't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep. 9

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard herself say?

Gen. That, sir, which I will not report after her. 16

Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gen. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech. 20

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light? 24

Gen. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gen. Ay, but their sense is shut. 28

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gen. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands. I have known her to continue in this a quarter of an hour. 33

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly. 37

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One; two: why, then, 'tis time to do 't. Hell is murky! Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him? 44

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife: where is she now? What! will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting. 49

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gen. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known. 54

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh! 57

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gen. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body. 61

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gen. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds. 66

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on 's grave.

Doct. Even so? 71

Lady M. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed? 76

Gen. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets; More needs she the divine than the physician. 81
God, God forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her. So, good-night: My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight. I think, but dare not speak.

Gen. Good-night, good doctor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm 4
Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, 9
And many unrough youths that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies. Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel 16
His secret murders sticking on his hands;

Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach; Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love; now does he feel his title 20
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start,

When all that is within him does condemn 24
Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd;
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal,
And with him pour we in our country's purge 28
Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.

Make we our march towards Birnam.
[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that
know 4

All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me
thus:

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee.' Then fly, false thanes,

And mingle with the English epicures: 8
The mind I sway by and the heart I bear
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where gott'st thou that goose look? 12
Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy
fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine

Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face? 17

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push 20
Will cheer me ever or disseat me now.

I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age, 24
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,

Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour,
breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not. 28

Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd. 32

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine
armour. 36

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,

As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd, 40
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,

Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote

Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient 45

Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from
me.— 49

Come, sir, dispatch.—If thou couldst, doctor,
cast

The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health, 52

I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull 't off, I

say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them? 56

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.

I will not be afraid of death and bane
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. 60

Doct. [Aside.] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Country near Birnam Wood.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand

That chambers will be safe.

Men. We doubt it nothing.

Siw. What wood is this before us?

Men. The wood of Birnam. 4

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough
And bear 't before him: thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done. 8

Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before 't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope;
For where there is advantage to be given, 12
Both more and less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on 16
Industrious soldiership.

Siw. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate, 21
Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, 'They come;' our castle's
strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up; 4
Were they not fore'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

And beat them backward home.

[A cry of women within.]

What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord. 8

[Exit.]

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears.

The time has been my senses would have cool'd
To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir 12
As life were in 't. I have supp'd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead. 16

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, 20
To the last syllable of recorded time;

And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player 24
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more; it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing. 28

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir. 32

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look'd towards Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath if 't be not
so:

Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee; if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much. 41

I pull in resolution and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth; 'Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane;' and now a wood 45
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here. 48
I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the estate o' the world were now un-
done.

Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come,
wrack!

At least we'll die with harness on our back. 52

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle; worthy Macduff and we 4 Shall take upon 's what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight. 8

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But bear-like I must fight the course. What's he That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none. 4

Enter Young SIWARD.

Young Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Young Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Young Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title 8
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Young Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant;
with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight and Young SIWARD is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman:
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. 13
[Exit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face:
If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still. 16

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou,
Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou should'st be; 20

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and Old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle's gently render'd: 24

The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes 28
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarums.

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn! 32

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain 36
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macb. Thou lovest labour:
As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; 40
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd. 45

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me
so,

For it hath cow'd my better part of man:
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd, 48
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward, 52
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,

Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Macb. I will not yield, 56
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born, 60
Yet I will try the last: before my body
I throw my war-like shield. Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries, 'Hold,
enough!'

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, ROSS, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd. 64

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these I
see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt: 68

He only liv'd but till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead? 72

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why then, God's soldier be hel 76
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more; so
They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

The usurper's curs'd head: the time is free: 84
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine;
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! 88 [Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do, 93

Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny; 96
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent
hands

Took off her life; this, and what needful else 100
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone. 104 [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me; stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks; 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good-night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good-night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier:

Who hath relief'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good-night. [Exit.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo!

Ber. Say,

What! is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Mar. What! has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy, And will not let belief take hold of him

Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us:

Therefore I have entreated him along

With us to watch the minutes of this night;

That if again this apparition come,

He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile,

And let us once again assail your ears,
